MUNICIPAL ELECTION CASE BEING INVESTIGATED

Evidence as to Alleged Irregularities Submitted—Voters Allowed to Give Open Votes Without Being Sworn

The charge preferred against Mr. John W. Burley, a Deputy Returning Officer at the recent municipal election in Hungerford Township for allowing the violation of certain sections of the Municipal Act, namely: allowing parties to give an open vote without being sworn, was yesterday afternoon partially investigated by Police Magistrate Masson. The case occupied the attention of the court until late in the afternoon, and was then enlarged for a week. There are some witnesses for the plaintiff side yet to be heard, and a number for the defendant's side of the case. The court during the hearing, was crowded with interested spectators from that section of the community where the alleged offence was committed.

Mr. Wm. Carnew, County Attorney, for Crown, and Mr. E. J. Butler, for the defence.

W. C. Preston, in his evidence, stated that he was an agent for one of the candidates, and was at poll No. 1. Witness related how Patrick Shannon and his three sons came into the poll and that he objected to Thomas Shannon voting as he had been sworn. He was, however, allowed to vote without being sworn. Shannon produced a deed which he stated was proof that he was owner of the property. He heard Patrick Shannon say that he would see that there would be no one sworn at the poll. The affair caused some commotion. Mr. Wm. Coulter, Peter and Louis Lavecque were allowed to give an open vote without being sworn, and were not asked to be sworn by any person.

Edmund Carleton testified he was agent at poll No. 8 for Mr. York, a candidate for Councillor. He remembered when Peter Shannon and three sons came in to vote. Mr. Preston asked to have Thomas Shannon sworn but he was allowed to vote without being sworn. There was considerable talk back and forward. Mr. Preston never withdrew his objection as to having Shannon sworn. Entries were made on the margin in the poll book after all the Shannons had voted and left. Witness heard Mr. T. Coulter say to Mr. Burley, the Deputy Returning Officer to be, Coulter would not like to be in his, Burley's boots. Burley answered: I don't give a d—. Peter and Louis Lavecque and Wm. Coulter gave open votes and were not asked to take the oath. Lorne Coulter's vote was challenged, but he voted after being sworn.

Mr. John T. Coulter testified that he had been for about 20 years, interested in elections at No. 8 Poll. Was Coulter, referred to, was a brother of witness, and could not read or write. It was a general rule for him to give an open vote. He gave an open vote, as did also the two Lavecques. Witness made an objection to Thomas Shannon voting without being sworn. Shannon produced a deed, but no seal was attached. Whilst three open votes were being recorded, others outside of the voters and agents were in the poll at the time, and there was no attempt made to clear the room. Witness heard Peter Lavecque brothers came in and gave open votes; both being in the polling booth at the time. Louis Lavecque was also present. Patrick Shannon and his three sons came in later in the day. Patrick was given a ballot and voted. When Thomas Shannon went to vote Mr. Preston, an agent, objected and wanted him sworn, but he was allowed to vote without the oath being administered. Witness distinctly heard Preston forbid Mr. Burley, the Deputy Returning Officer, giving Shannon a ballot before he was sworn as he said he (the returning officer) left himself liable. Entries as to the transactions were made after the Shannons left the poll and were made at the investigation of witness. Witness told the Deputy Returning Officer he would not like to be in his boots and he replied, "I am not a d—— bit afraid." All the Shannons remained in the poll, while one after the other voted. Witness said there were objections made to a couch which was in the polling room, being in the position it was. The couch was in such a position that two of the agents who sat upon it could see the voter in the apartment marking his ballot. It was so that the agent could follow the hand of the voter down the ballot, to step over to the side of the agents. The couch was moved once but got back to its former position. Witness considered there were irregularities at the poll as was charged.

After two other witnesses had given evidence similar to the above witnesses, the case was enlarged.

Great War May Bankrupt The World

Cost Per Day Is One Hundred and Eight Million Dollars to All The Nations Involved

NEW YORK Feb. 28.—Approximate statistics showing the amounts which European belligerents have expended for war purposes from July, 1914, to date have been compiled by an expert for the New York Herald, who states that his estimates are under rather than over the exact figures.

The total cost of the war to date to the nations directly engaged is given as seventy-one billion seven hundred and forty million dollars, and the cost per day at the present time of all the nations involved as one hundred and eight million four hundred thousand dollars.

FINANCIERS FRIGHTENED

The cost of the war to date to Great Britain is sixteen billion seven hundred and thirty million dollars, with a daily war expenditure of seventy-eight million, nine hundred thousand dollars. France has a war bill to date of twelve billion seven hundred million dollars, and a daily war expenditure of eighteen million. Russia's expenditures are slightly smaller than France, and the total cost of the war thus far to the Allies is given as forty-seven billion nine hundred and forty million dollars, with a daily cost of seventy-two million nine hundred thousand dollars.

COST TO CENTRAL POWERS

Germany has expended sixteen billion dollars thus far on the war and has a daily war expenditure of twenty-two million. Austria Hungary's war bill daily is twelve million dollars, with a total expenditure thus far of six billion eight hundred million dollars. Turkey and Bulgaria have spent one billion dollars on the war, and each of them are now spending five hundred thousand dollars.

The Central Powers have expended to date on the war a total of twenty-three billion, two hundred million dollars, and each day of warfare calls for thirty-five million five hundred thousand dollars from them.

HUGE NATIONAL DEBTS

Germany, Austria-Hungary and Turkey have national debts at present aggregating twenty-six billion one hundred and seventy-four million dollars.

Great Britain, France, Russia and Italy have a present debt of fifty-five billion ninety million dollars.

Germans Plotting to Set Mexicans and Japs Against United States

Special to The Intelligencer.

WASHINGTON, March 1.—Full official confirmation of Germany's proposal to Mexico of alliance with Mexico and Japan to attack the United States, was given today both at the White House and the State Department. Germany's communication to Mexico was brought up in the Senate by Senator Lodge. Senator Swanson, of Virginia, said he was authorized to state the correctness of the charges read and signed by Zimmerman was "substantially correct."

OLD MEN GOOD WORKERS

Movement to Open Positions For Elderly Men Successful

CHICAGO, Feb. 28—More than 800 men past the 45-year age limit have been found jobs quickly from pittances up to $125 a month since December 6th, 1916, according to a report given out by the committee on employment for men past 46 years of age. The quality of the men applying was of a high standard, and contained a liberal percentage of university graduates. From 90 to 95 per cent. according to the report, had an average of five years of usefulness still before them.

Nearly 300 applicants have been reviewed by the committee who have indicated heard firms to co-operate to such an extent that it will be but a short time, the report says, before they practically every man between the ages of 45 and 65 can find work at a fair wage if he is mentally and physically able.

BRITAIN'S PREPARATION SAID TO BE UNPRECEDENTED

S. JOHN, N.B., March 1.—Special.—Preparation such as never before was made in the history of any Empire is now in progress in Britain for a grand offensive during the spring of 1917. Such was the analysis placed upon the present situation in England by Lieut. L. S. Sifton, nephew of Sir Clifford Sifton, who arrived in the city yesterday from the Old Country with a military party.

"The British people themselves hardly realize the immensity of the preparations they are making, and when the storm breaks on the western front, it will be a hurricane compared with any previous efforts made," he said. "Britain has the one word determination stamped all over the country, and on the face of every person, and this summer should see the clean-up," he concluded.

NOT A SHIP SUNK YESTERDAY

For First Time Since the Campaign Started U-Boats Get No Victims

LONDON, March 1.—Special—For the first time since the commencement of Germany's intensified submarine campaign the past 24 hours have brought no reports of vessels having been sent to the bottom by under-water boats or mines.

At the Dutch Legation it was said yesterday there was no confirmation of the report published earlier in the week that the Dutch steamships Jan Joseng, Keenland and Zaandijk were still afloat. On the contrary, the latest information received by the Dutch officials led to the belief that the vessels had been lost. A search for the steamship proved unavailing.

The steamships Bandoeng, Semiland and Zaandijk were three of the fleet of seven Dutch merchant ships torpedoed by German submarines Feb. 22 at the westerly approach to the English Channel. This of the seven ships only the Maasdam is known to have escaped sinking.

The German Government, a despatch from The Hague says, has offered to replace the seven Dutch merchantmen which were torpedoed last week with German freighters until the end of the war, on condition that Holland purchase them afterwards.

ENEMY QUITS ANCRE SALIENT

Anvil is Removed to Escape The Hammer Blow of The British Forces

LONDON, March 1—Special—In London there is much speculation in the press as to the meaning of the enemy's movement at Ancre. The general view is that it means the beginning of a readjustment which will involve the evacuation of the entire salient, now dangerous and costly to hold by the Germans in the region west of the Bapaume-Arras line. British troops have advanced to the north way by which the southern part of the salient can be provided with food and shells. The road system is also menaced by General Haugh's possession of Serre.

The Evening Standard presents its military critic's views on the matter. "the Germans voluntarily gave up a strip of ground two miles wide in order to forestall a blow intended by a British attack on a large scale. It is as if the anvil had been suddenly removed when the powerful hammer stroke was about to be struck. Delay is necessitated on our part by the digging of new trenches in front of the German line, and the employing of heavy as well as light artillery. This may be the aim of the enemy."

The French view is also quoted to the effect that the Germans retired in order to prevent overwhelming disaster. In any event, the next big struggle on this part of the front must be for the command of Bapaume Ridge and the series of heights north of Ancre, covering Bapaume, on the south west.

THREE MORE VILLAGES OCCUPIED BY BRITISH

Gommecourt, Thilloy and Puisieux Now Held by British Troops, Who Penetrate Over Half a Mile Beyond Former Place—More Successful Raids

LONDON, March 1—Special—The British are sweeping forward north of the Ancre and the Somme without pause. Three important villages and several square miles of territory abandoned by the Germans have been occupied by Gough's troops. The British line is now less than a mile from Bapaume.

The German retiring movement evidently continues unchecked, and apparently is spreading over the entire Somme line as far as the Bailly sector, where the British also pressed ahead;

The British advance attained its greatest proportions yesterday on the extreme left wing. Swinging forward north of Serre over a front of three miles, the British troops conquered the villages of Puisieux-au-Mont and Gommecourt, and pushed on more than half a mile to the northeast for the latter place before they halted. Approximately three square miles of ground were added to the British lines in this single operation.

Farther east, in the sector immediately south of Bapaume, the village of Thilloy was captured, bringing the British lines around the north east stronghold which has been their objective for eight months. The entire trench systems adjoining these three strategic points were overwhelmed at the same time, keeping Haig's advanced line virtually straight and free from dangerous salients its entire length from beyond Gommecourt to Sailly

MAKE WAR ON THE U. S.

Tentons Urge Mexico to Join Japan and Wrest New Mexico Texas and Arizona From Union

WASHINGTON, March 1.—Special.—The Associated Press is enabled to reveal that Germany, in planning unrestricted submarine warfare, and pointing its consequence, proposed an alliance with Mexico and Japan to make war on the United States if this country should not remain neutral.

Japan, through Mexican mediation, was to be urged to abandon her allies and join in the attack on the United States.

Mexico, for her reward, was to receive general financial support from Germany, reconquer Texas, New Mexico and Arizona—three provinces—and share in the victorious peace terms Germany contemplated.

Details were left to German Minister von Eckardt in Mexico City, who by instructions signed by Gerhan Foreign Minister Zimmermann at Berlin, January 19, 1917, was directed to propose the alliance with Mexico to Gen. Carranza, and suggest that Mexico should bring Japan into the plot.

These instructions were communicated to von Eckhardt through Count von Bernstorf, former German Ambassador here, now on his way home. Germany under a safe conduct obtained from his enemies by the country against which he was plotting war.

Germany pictured to Mexico, by broad intimations, Britain and the Entente Allies defeated; Germany and Japan victorious and supreme in world domination by the instrument of unrestricted submarine warfare.

A copy of Zimmermann's instructions to von Eckhardt sent through von Bernstorff, is in possession of the United States Government.

MEN FROM MANITOBA SMASH MINE OF FOE

LONDON, March 1—Special—The following communique issued by the British War Records Office:—

"The frequently harrasing of the enemy by raiding parties and the systematic destruction of his trenchments were continued during the past week. There has been no cessation in the activity of our night patrols and snipers. Our artillery and trench mortars were well occupied with special targets.

On Monday morning shortly after nine o'clock several parties from a Manitoba battalion attacked the German trenches at different points along a 500-yard frontage. One party came unexpectedly upon a cluster of Germans who were occupying a sap head and who fired a volley at short range into our men, checking their advance. The other parties, however, successfully reached their objectives, overcame all opposition and for ten minutes working and actively carried out their allotted tasks. Nine Germans, which were evidently occupied, but from which the enemy refused to emerge, were destroyed. One machine shaft was discovered in which an engine was heard, and in which several Germans were working or had taken shelter from our artillery fire. Sergeant Lloyd placed a large portage charge of explosives at the head of the shaft, and despite the danger which he knew he must himself incur, he lit the fuse and then sought to escape. But the fuse was short, which followed was not only the explosion of the charge but of the enemy mine which was also provided with a great quantity of explosives had already been placed.

TORONTO, Feb. 28—In future all moving picture operators will have to have their photos on their licenses, similar to the chauffeurs. The new operators' license go out on June 1st and all the operators have been notified to have their pictures ready for the attachment.

The photos will be sealed in such a manner that the seal will be on the photo and the other half on the license. This is done to prevent anything happening to the license as happened to the some time ago. A license was lost and was found by a man who had torn part of it off, and was trying to use it himself.

PAYNE MANUSCRIPT SOLD

"Home, Sweet Home" Copy Goes at Auction

NEW YORK, Feb. 28.—"Home Sweet Home" in the handwriting of John Howard Payne, its author, and signed by him, has brought $360 at auction here. The manuscript which consists of the first and second stanzas of the poem and the chorus was dated at Washington August 10, 1856. It is presumed that he wrote it for some friend.

It was put on sale here with a number of other historic documents from the Collection of Frederick R. McQuire, for many years director of the Corcoran Art Gallery, Washington. The document has been in the hands of his estate for a number of years. It was purchased by J. F. Drake, of this city.

Worked For One Wife And Stole For The Other

NEW YORK, Feb. 28.—Robert Carter, under arrest, charged with stealing $20,000 from the Midvale Steel Co., of which he was a trusted employe has made a complete confession. He had two wives and three automobiles while the going was good, and, according to his story, gave wife No 1 his entire salary of $195 back month, while he supported the other on stolen funds and commodities. He met wife No 2 in Brooklyn and they were married in Monreal. He placed her in an apartment renting at $97 per month and three motor cars were at her disposal. When the bubble burst he left New York with $12 and landed a job as bus boy at Albany, after three days without food. A week ago he secured a position in the advertising department with an Albany concern.

NIGHT BUSSES KILL MANY

LONDON, Feb. 28—Darkening London has proved effective in baffling the enemy air raids, but increased another peril which has proved more deadly than anything the German airfleets have been able to do, according to a statement made in the House of Commons. The chief night danger to London is not the air raider, but the motor-bus, which, since August, 1914, when the streets were first darkened, has killed 964 persons. Zeppelins and aeroplanes have only been able to kill 127 in the same period of time.

Farewell Concert At The City Hall

That the good work accomplished in their behalf by the ladies of the Khaki Club is ever high in the estimation of the men of the 235th Battalion, was evidenced last evening at the entertainment at the City Hall, when the battalion gave an excellent program, rendered by some of the battalion's talent.

The entertainment was in the nature of a farewell to the citizens, before the battalion leaves for Ottawa. The concert was doubly appreciated, because it afforded the men an opportunity to show the esteem in which they hold the ladies of the Khaki Club.

Following is an outline of the program:

Chairman—Lt.-Col. S. B. Scobell.
Song—Pte. O'Kelley.
Boxing—Three rounds, prize donated by a friend. Pte. Macnamara won decision over Corporal Rooney, winning two out of three rounds. Lieut. Thompson acted as referee.
Solo—Sergt. O'Neil.
Reading—Pte. Bamber.
Song—Pte. Harrison.
Piano Solo—Miss Scobell.
Song—Pte Mc. Laugher.
Presentation to ladies of the Khaki Club.
Selection by band.
Blanket Folding Contest—Pte. Wilson achieved this feat in 2 minutes, 16 seconds.
Equilibrium Act—Pte. Mitz.
Song—Sergt. T. Annison.
Song—Band Sergt. Hayward.
Boxing Match—Pte. Carey and Pte. Fetherbridge in three two minute rounds. Pte. Fetherbridge winning on points and punches.

God Save the King.

Col. Scobell in the chairman's address stated that this was the farewell concert before the battalion left the city, and he felt sure that those present were all glad to be together in this last gathering, before they left for Ottawa. The men of the battalion would leave Belleville with a great deal of regret. It has been to the Officers, N.C.O.'s and men of the 235th Battalion a very pleasant four months, spent in this city, and the Colonel was sure that though the battalion is leaving in body, it will still be with the people of Belleville in spirit. Although the battalion will have good quarters in Ottawa, the speaker did not think that they could compare with the quarters in Belleville. There is also a Khaki Club in Ottawa, but it was not up to the standard of the Belleville Khaki Club. The ladies of the local Club have been more than kind to the men, in order to add to their comfort and enjoyment. The Colonel stated that many a boy had written home to his mother or sweetheart, and told them of the good care taken of them by the Khaki Club.

Presentation

The lengthy program previously mentioned, was then given, during which a very interesting event took place, that of the presentation by the men to the ladies of the Khaki Club. Col. Scobell in making the presentation stated that in order to make the 235th Battalion's stay in Belleville pleasant, the ladies of the Khaki Club had left no stone unturned. Mr. Fred Falkiner, ex-President, Miss Falkiner, is known everywhere for her good work for the soldiers. The Secretary, and men, continued the colonel, had chipped in a few cents in order to give some present to the ladies, not for their value, but as a token of remembrance. Col. Scobell here presented Miss Falkiner with a beautiful umbrella as a token of the good she had accomplished in providing comfort and enjoyment for the men of the 235th Battalion. Miss Falkiner in replying thanked the men for their thoughtfulness. It was a real pleasure to her, and she wished the men good luck wherever they went, and when they reach the other side, may they be aware that they have many friends in Belleville. Umbrellas were also presented to Miss M. M. Campbell, Secretary, Mrs. A. H. Symmons, and Miss Eva Panter. Mrs. Edwards and Mrs. W. J. Brown, two executive members of the Khaki Club, were presented with hand bags. The following address was also presented to the ladies:

"To the Ladies of the Belleville Khaki Club:—

We, the Officers, Non-Commissioned Officers and Men of the 235th Overseas Battalion, desire on this the 28th day of February, to tender our very grateful thanks for the use of your magnificent Club, for the entertainments you have provided and the many kindnesses you have shown us during our stay in Belleville.

We would wish that our thanks be conveyed to the many citizens of Belleville, who through your efforts have contributed so much to our enjoyment.

At an early date we hope to take our place alongside our illustrious comrades in the firing line, and when the great opportunity arrives we shall endeavor to prove ourselves worthy of your many kind considerations.

Signed on behalf of the Officers, N.C.O's and Men of the 235th Bn. O. S. Batt. C. E. F.

S. B. SCOBELL, LT.-COL.

Missing For Eight Months

In the bombardment of Zillebeke, it is believed that Pte George Dixon, of the C.M.R. lost his life. He enlisted at Belleville in September, 1915, and left in February 1916, was in France. He was reported missing in June, and since then his wife, living at 21 Trafalgar ave., Toronja, tried in vain to learn further of him. He came from England and worked on the G. T. R. for a time. Two brothers are fighting in France, and he is survived by his wife and two children. Pte. Dixon was a brother of Pte. Fred Dixon, who is at the front, and who previous to his enlistment was an employee of the Intelligencer Office.

DISGUSTED WITH AMERICANS

A prominent Kingston citizen, who was in New York last week, states that he was disgusted with the attitude of the Americans with regard to the war. They think of nothing but making dollars. A lady graduate of one of the leading American universities made the remark: "Why if we went to war what would become of our commerce? We would lose so much." The nation has no principle the Kingstonian remarked. Its real leaders, like Roosevelt, Root and Taft, who have great ideals, spoke in vain to the great mass of the American people.

GRAND TRUNK NEWS BUREAU

LENT BRINGS BIG DEMAND FOR CANADIAN HALIBUT

PRINCE RUPERT, Feb. 28.—With the Lenten season in the fisheries at Prince Rupert, B.C., are meeting with an exceptional demand from all parts of Canada and the United States for halibut. From a comparatively small catch a few years ago Prince Rupert is now leading in the large Canadian and United States cities more than 15,000,000 pounds of halibut annually. The halibut caught in the waters off this port weigh as much as 300 pounds, it's a single fish, and measure 5 or 6 feet in length. The average weight of halibut, however, and that most esteemed, is about 60 pounds. With its firm white flesh the halibut, experts declare, does not develop as rapidly as other fish and large quantities are sold fresh. Steamships will Link Canada's Most Northerly Transcontinental With Alaska and Yukon

MONTREAL, Feb. 24.—Grand Trunk Pacific Officials announce that the inauguration of their service to Alaska has been attended with such success that its continuance has been decided upon for 1917.

Yukon offers so many advantages that there is an increasing demand from travelers in the United States whose the big bulk of the travel comes, for participants of the Dominion's transcontinental facilities. Last year marked the first entry of the Grand Trunk Pacific in the Alaskan business and with the Western terminal of that line situated only a few miles below the Alaskan boundary, this new gateway to the Northland became popular immediately. The steamships of the company the 'Prince George' and 'Prince Rupert,' will thereafter be employed on the Alaskan voyages again this summer. Steamer, which had a world-wide fame during the Klondike gold rush of '97, is the northern port of call on their route, the Grand Trunk Pacific vessels thus linking up the most northerly of America's transcontinental railways with the White Pass and Yukon line which enjoys the distinction of being the "farthest north" of the world's railways now in operation. This line has a mileage of one hundred and ten miles, ending at White Horse on the Yukon River.

SUFFERED FROM PARALYSIS FIFTEEN YEARS AGO

Used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food on the Advice of a Friend, and With the Greatest Benefit

Belleville, Ont., March 1st—The supreme test of any medicine for the treatment of diseases of the nerves is whether it is effective in cases of partial paralysis.

Paralysis is the natural result of neglected nervous diseases. Nerve cells which are dead can never be replaced. For this reason complete cures of paralysis is impossible. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is effective, however, in restoring the nerve cells which are partially exhausted. For this reason it has met with such great success in the cure of nervous prostration and exhaustion, and affords the greatest relief for partial paralysis.

Mrs. C. Sinfield, 236 Moira, W., Belleville, Ont., writes: "About fifteen years ago I was suffering from paralysis and through the advice of a friend I was induced to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I took a treatment, and found my condition greatly improved. I found that they also Benefited me greatly for sleeplessness and nervousness. Now any time I am run down or not feeling "up to the mark" I use some Nerve Food, and have recommended it to many of my friends. Many people hearing of the benefit I have received from it, come to me to learn results, and I always cheerfully recommend Dr. Chase's Nerve Food."

Sleeplessness, irritability, nervousness and headaches are among the early symptoms which come to warn you of coming collapse of the nervous system. The way to avoid the serious developments is to keep the nervous system in health and vigor by the timely use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, a full treatment of 6 boxes for $2.50, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations only disappoint.

ROYAL YEAST

Has been Canada's favorite yeast for over a quarter of a century. Bread baked with Royal Yeast will be sweet, wholesome and nourishing and will keep moist much day longer, so that a full week's supply can easily be made at one baking, and the last loaf will be as good as the first.

Capt. Volume, R.A.M.C., of Tweed, has been appointed Medical Officer of the 254th Battalion in that vicinity, vice Dr. J. J. Robertson, who has moved to Belleville.

Col. Gillespie, of Kingston, was in the city to-day conducting a test and clothing inspection of the men of the 254th Battalion.

Divine service will be attended in St. Thomas Church on Sunday morning by the 235th Battalion.

Col. Scobell during the evening, stated that the battalion would leave for Ottawa at 10 o'clock Monday morning, via C.N.R.

Three cheers and a tiger were given for the ladies of the Khaki Club, who have been so kind to the soldiers.

There is considerable talent in the ranks of the 235th Battalion. Battalion Sergt.-Major Copeland was in charge of the arrangements for last night's concert.

AUSTRIA PROHIBITS APPLES FROM U.S.

LONDON, March 1.—Special—William Morris Hughes, the Australian Premier, says Reuter's Melbourne correspondent, intimated to a delegation which called on him, that the importation of American apples would probably be prohibited. The deputation visited the Premier with regard to the restrictions of the export of apples, and the Premier promised to do his utmost to assist crops.

STATE DEPARTMENT WAIT. WAS ABOARD TORPEDOED LACONIA

Washington Thanks It Is Most Sorbus Disregard of American Rights Yet

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28—The sinking of the big Cunarder Laconia, apparently without warning, and with 26 Americans on board, loomed up last night as the most serious disregard of American rights since the ruthless German submarine campaign began. Government officials here made no attempt to conceal their concern.

Officials pointed out that, while final reports may show that no American lives were lost, the fact will remain that the 26 Americans on board were illegally assaulted on a peaceful mission, and escaped death only by good fortune.

The United States is concerned in the sinking of the Laconia, also by a lot of official diplomatic mail which had been entrusted to her after the American liner St. Louis had cancelled its sailing. The State Department, after having had its mail held on the St. Louis for three weeks, had transferred it to the Laconia when it was definitely announced that the St. Louis would not sail until it had received guns.

Whether it may prove to be the overt act will depend entirely on the actual facts expected tomorrow.

Deeds of Heroism to Be Visualized

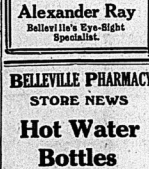
TO BE SHOWN AT GRIFFIN'S OPERA HOUSE

Courcelette and Martinpuich Battles to Appear in Vivid Details

Under the direction of Lord Beaverbrook (Sir Max Aitken) says a despatch from the front, to Ottawa, arrangements were completed last summer for cinematograph pictures of the Canadian troops overseas, both in England and at the front. This request was granted upon a request preferred some months before by Sir Sam Hughes, then Minister of Militia.



The idea is to visualize the history of Canada's part in the war on imperishable films.

Under the direction of Lord Beaverbrook there is now organized a considerable staff of official recorders of Canadian history in the making at the front. A great wealth of incident involving the deeds of Canadian soldiers both collectively and individually is being carefully compiled from day to day for preservation in the archives of Canada and for reference by historians of the war who will want to know what part their ancestors played in the greatest war in history.

The written record is now being supplemented by official photographs and official moving pictures of the men at the front. The official photographer in Captain H. E. Knobel, who took pictures of the Canadian lines in the Ypres salient.

The moving pictures of the Courcelette and Martinpuich battles are being shot up in Canada were taken for the Canadian records office by Lieut. G. H. Malins of the British topical committee's staff, whose pictures of the Battle of the Somme created a sensation in Great Britain and throughout the British empire where ever they have been shown.

They will be shown at Griffin's Opera House, Belleville, on Monday and Tuesday, March 12 and 13, matinee and evening. Don't fail to see them.

A GOOD WORD FOR FRITZ

It is a long time since we were able to say a good word for the Germans. Now justice demands that even the devil shall have his dues. Among the numerous items in which the ever-increasing high cost of living is painfully manifested one of the most prominent is the homely potato, usually occupying a very modest place in the background of foodstuffs, but now gaining a place in the aristocracy of supplies. Potatoes are selling in Montreal in quantities at two dollars and more a bushel. In England under the regulations of the Food Controller the price is less than half of that. But if we wish to find a market where potatoes are comparatively cheap we have to go to Berlin. One is inclined to envy the Berlin citizens when he reads that in the German capital potatoes are to be had at seventy-two cents a bushel. It is true that there are not a great many to be obtained. One has to have his food cards to get any, and only a few pounds at a time will be delivered. But the Germans have managed to so control the price that this important article of food is sold at about one-third the price that the consumer pays in Montreal. At the risk of being prosecuted for treason, we have to admit that there are some things the Germans manage better than we do.—Montreal Journal of Commerce.

LLOYD GEORGE LOSES HIS FOSTER-FATHER

LONDON, March 1—Special—The death took place at Criccieth last night, at the age of eighty-two of Richard Lloyd, uncle and foster-father of Lloyd George. Mr. Lloyd was for over half a century joint pastor of the Baptist Church at Criccieth, and he served without fee or reward. He was a man of fine personality, with the noblest conception of the work of a preacher

Won't Have to Marry Germans

His Royal Highness is in his twenty-third year, and before the war there was talk about the probability of his going to Germany to find a wife.

But that is out the question now, and the Prince himself makes no secret of the fact that he is heartily glad about it.

A remark of much significance which he made at the beginning of the war is being recalled. "Well after all," he said "there is one good thing about it. Mary (his sister) and I won't have to marry Germans now."

Some of the English newspapers are suggesting that the Prince might make his choice, not among royalties, but from the ranks of the aristocracy of England, where there is plenty of "blue blood" to be found. This is, of course, much opposed to what is known as the Queen Victorian sentiment. Though she assented to it, she did not like her daughter marrying the heir to the Dukedom of Argyll, or her granddaughter marrying the Duke of Fife; it brought up social complications which were embarrassing to the Court.

But the war has already drowned so much old-fashioned sentiment in England that the marriage of the Prince of Wales may be freed entirely from considerations of that kind.

A WONDERFUL HENRY

Henry Ford is again in the limelight. Over a year ago he managed to get on the front page of the papers by announcing a scheme to get the "boys out of the trenches by Christmas." He chartered a ship and took a lot of peace fanatics across to Europe, with him, but nothing came of the expedition, and Mr. Ford and his party received a good deal of ridicule. Now Ford has offered to build submarines and make automobiles for the U.S. Government if they break off relations with Germany. He evidently believes in extreme measures. Also he has an overwhelming desire for publicity, which anyway enough has never gotten the better of him. Ford was born in Michigan in 1863, and became a machinist, becoming in time chief engineer for the Edison Illuminating Company. Some fourteen years ago he organized the Ford Motor Company, the largest automobile concern in the world.

BORDEN SEES JELLICOE VISITS WAR CABINET

Canadian Premier Busy in London Will Go To War Zone Later

LONDON, Feb. 28—Sir Robert Borden had an interview yesterday with the Colonial Secretary. Subjects to be considered in the war conference were discussed. Sir Robert also visited the offices of the War Cabinet and inspected a mass of documents relating to the prosecution of the war. It is understood that Sir Robert and Hon. Messrs Hazen and Rogers visit the Canadian troops in the war zone at an early date.

Sir Robert Borden yesterday discussed with Sir George Perley the arrangements for obtaining information from officers, non-com's and men useful when demobilization becomes necessary.

During the afternoon Sir Robert Borden had an interview with Admiral Jellicoe, touching matters already under consideration between the Admiralty and the Canadian Government.

MOTOR TRUCK DRIVER FACES SERIOUS CHARGE

James Fosler, who was arrested in Belleville on Saturday last and taken to Toronto, appeared in the Police Court in the Queen City on Tuesday, charged with having failed to stop a motor truck he was driving near Queen street and Close Avenue, last Thursday, and with having knocked down a child named John Markey. Deputy Crown Attorney Hughes said the child had since died, and Col. Denison refused to grant bail. The mishap occurred at noon hour, when the child was coming home from school. Accused was represented by W. K. Murphy, K.C., who reserved plea and election, and the case will be put over till March 6.

Austria's Answer Is Now Ready

AMSTERDAM, March 1—Special—The Weser Zeitung says that the answer of the Austro-Hungarian Government to the United States note on submarine warfare will be handed to the United States Ambassador in a few days and then published. It is understood the reply adopts the German view, and says that clearly for the central powers there can be no turning back.

People who borrow trouble often find they can't pay it back when they have plenty to do it with.

The many friends of the Hon. Henry Corby, will be pleased to learn that a cable from Honolulu, received yesterday at Ottawa, says that Mr. Corby is out of danger.

BETTER ROADS.

The annual meeting of the Ontario Good Roads Association was held in Toronto a few days ago. Many suggestions were put forth for the improvement of high ways. Among them was that of Mr. L. E. Allen of this city, who gave an interesting paper dealing with the progress of the highways movement in the States of New York, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island and New Jersey, which provided the delegates with some interesting facts, one of which was that in Pennsylvania no phone or power pole was allowed on 5000 miles of road without special permission. This law, Mr. Allen thought, should be introduced all over this Province, and a stop put to the practice of disfiguring beautiful roads. The last suggestion is a capital one and should be acted upon promptly. There is no place where Mr. Allen's suggestion could be acted upon more profitably than in the city of Belleville by having the unsightly poles, which disfigure our streets, removed, particularly on our residential streets. Who among our city fathers has the courage to act

THE QUEBEC LIBERAL PARTY.

"Now that the Liberal party seems to be returning to its traditional attitude, it may be hoped that Imperialism will receive its death blow amongst us. If we had minded our own business while wanting to poke our nose into the European mud-hole we would not be in our present situation."

The people of Canada will know what to expect in case of the return to power of the Liberal party, as it is known that the French will dominate it.

THE SKELETON KEY.

"The object of an opposition in Parliament, bluntly stated, is to get into power," declares the Ottawa Journal Press. "Unable to obtain power, the object of the Opposition at least is to get the Government out."

The Opposition press in Canada, which has been waging bitter partisan warfare against the Government for more than two years, has begun a loud cry for a National Government not because it hopes to get the Opposition party in but because it hopes to get the present Government out.

Every Federal Government is also a National Government. To call for a National Government is merely to make a partisan attack upon the existing Federal Government. The Opposition effort to get into power in the Conservative party out involves the use of the "election key"—an instrument calculated to unlock any combination of circumstances. At any time it is possible to demand the establishment in power of a mysterious combination of non-partisan administrative genius, pleading dignified party warfare—but it ill becomes those who have instigated and propagated the party warfare to raise the demand. Suspicion is inevitable that the warfare has been carried on for this very purpose while, in the open, the term of the Government was extended as asked.

The New ARROW COLLARS

An Opposition which extends the term of Parliament assumes a certain obligation to the Government to agree to allow a longer than ordinary life to run. Under extraordinary conditions, the Government remaining in office receive regular and public evidences of the confidence of the people; when, under abnormal conditions, a Government remaining in power is denied the opportunity of receiving these regular demonstrations of public support, it is more open than ordinarily to ascertain that it is not existing on public confidence. In the case of the Borden Government, we have Opposition organs asking today for evidence that the Government has not lost the confidence of the people and knowing, at the same time that of the customary, technical evidence there is none because none has been sought for excellent, vital reasons

The evidence that the Borden Government has retained the confidence of the people is in its war record, so enthusiastically approved by Imperial statesmen and such disinterested observers as Theodore Roosevelt, and in the general prosperity and condition of the country, which enables the Canadian people to meet the world-wide visitation of higher cost of commodities at least as well as the people of any other country. Canada has had no political convulsions, and the Government has been able to accept an extension of its power. Without fear of contradiction, it may be said that the Borden Government has met both foreign and domestic complications since it assumed power with unusual courage, skill and determination.

If Canada is to be called upon to bear the regular political institutions apart, very excellent reasons must be advanced to justify the operation in addition to the desire of an Opposition party which cannot get in to get the existing Government out.

The Poet's Corner

THE WOOD PEWEE

With ashy breast and olive wing,
In leafy maze and lonely tree,
Upon a dry branch balancing,
Sat little wailing wood pewee.

To wind lament in stately pose,
Like those in selfish sorrow blind,
And in the woods with minor woes—
Such seemed the bent of pewee mind.

But when this perchier made a dart,
He snapped his beak with lightning vim,
And every moth he caught apart,
He made a sacrifice of him.

A habit of complaint had he;
But for my life I could not tell.
How, day by day, this wood pewee
Could all so much and eat so well.

Pewee, pewee his trebles flow;
If sadness he were called to bear,
What living thing would wish to know
The grief that waked his trivial air?

He soothes me, does this wood pewee,
I scarcely know the reason why;
But life would be less dear to me
Without his little wailing cry.

CANADA'S PRODUCTION.

Canadians ought to consider themselves fortunate that, despite the big crop shortage of 1916, the farm output was a much higher value than in 1915. The total value of wheat alone was about 210,000,000 bushels short of 1915's, about 30 per cent. less. Other grains were short. Pastures was burned up by the dry, hot weather. Dairying was hampered. Feed became expensive. Yet, in fact, almost every drawback that could be expected heaped up trouble for the farmer, set the total of our output just a shade higher money value than in the record year preceding.

The cause of the extraordinary showing is to be found in the high prices brought about by a world crop shortage. That Canada's crop issues been local, the blow would indeed have been heavy, but they coincided with shortages in the United States, in Argentina, and in Europe. Our field crops made a total value of about $850,000,000, and the products of the mine, forest, and fisheries brought up the total to about $1,250,000,000. If we add to that a manufacturing production estimated at about $2,000,000,000, it will be seen that over two billions of people in this country, deprived of 400,000 men in the prime of life, and of a large part of our usual foreign population, have been not unhealthy of the call from Ottawa for "production, more production." Indeed, if the crop prospects had been normal, we would have had a greater production per capita probably than any other nation in the world.

This matter of producing wealth from our rich natural resources is the life-blood of Canadian vitality, the foundation of Canadian stability. To finance a fairly large part in the great war, and at the rapidly-altering world position. It is unfortunate that fear of conscription, needlessly arising out of the National Service Board censure, should be frightening United States citizens out of the West. They would not be liable for service even if conscription came, for at least resort, to compel military duty of certain classes, and even should them, as it wants all other producers, to stick to their work, for their own sake and that of the country. The splendid productive effort of Canadians ought to be continued, first through thrift, and increased energy in the coming output on permanent lines. If we keep persistently at it we shall have the greatest volume of power that will see us through any post-bellum period of economic disturbance.

Play Aprons For the Little Girl.

From Paris come some lovely little aprons for children. They are made of practical materials, such as jean, poplin or fine French cotton fabrics, and they have borders which show printed scenes, animals or conventional designs to delight the eye of the little wearer.

The colors are blue, pink and tan and also, white. Some of the models are made with shoulder straps, while others have straps across the shoulder and have a ruffle finish. Nearly all the aprons are supplied with pockets. They make ideal play garments as well as offering protection for the little frock of linen or batiste.

Collars of Felt.

A new feature in blouses is felt trimming. Some of the most attractive models have collars and cuffs of felt stitched to the blouse in lieu of embroidery in the cross stitch or by French knots. Such blouses are cut low, back in front, with the felt collar turning down across the back also. Blouses are often worn with high collars as with low V cut, and there is a way of combining the two in a novel manner. A long, straight collar of the fabric of the same material of which the blouse is made is attached at the neck in the back and is brought around the throat and tied in a bow over the V cut as it is crossed in front, with the two embroidered ends hanging over the shoulders in scarf fashion.

Many such novel ideas are to be noted in the blouses and especially the peplum embroidered blouses.

SYSTEM IN THE HOUSEHOLD ACCOUNTS

Whether we will or will not systematize them, we must have and do have household accounts. Bills will come in, things have to be bought, other things have to be sold, taxes and dues have to be calculated for. And the wise housekeeper takes pains to jot all money transactions down in some sort of an account book.

Up to date farmers and farmers' wives keep regular sets of books, not only to keep track of income and expenditure, but also to judge how it cows, and other stock pay, how crops give returns, what to do and what not to do with fields and fields.

The MacMillan Company of Canada have just published a handy and simple little book entitled "Household Accounting and Economics," by W. A. Sheaffer, Ph.B., Instructor of Accounting in Marquette University.

In this Preface the writer asserts:

"The experience of home managers is that a careful study of home economy and accounting makes it possible for the housekeeper to plan more wisely the expenditures and to save a larger part of the family income. The study of household economics is a study of the economic basis of the family. The standard of a family depends in part upon the income, but, above a certain minimum income, it is mainly dependent upon the choice of expenditures. Certain expenditures are necessary, but a study of the expense accounts of different families having the same income shows that wide choice is possible even here.

Education in household affairs tends to improve the choice of the necessary expenditures. It has a tendency to raise the standard of living, to permit of a larger expenditure for the moral and intellectual advancement of the family and to increase the family savings.

Differences in the size of families and in conditions and localities make it difficult to set a standard of expenditures. Each family must accept the general economic principles to its problems. A study of the family budget and of personal and household accounting furnishes the best means of doing this."

A complete system is plainly exemplified for getting the family down upon paper, and for the keeping of accounts accurately.

MORE REPRESENTATION WANTED BY CANADA

Only One Member on War Settlement Committee—Aired in the Commons

LONDON, Feb. 28—The question of Canada having only one representative on the committee appointed by the Colonial Office to consider the settlement after the war, against five for Australia and two for New Zealand was mentioned in the Commons yesterday. The Colonial Secretary informed this House that he learned the Canadian Government would press for a fuller representation, and he was taking steps toward this.

Donald MacMaster asked why it did not occur to the Colonial Office that such inequality would be severely resented by Canada. The Colonial Secretary replied: "I think the Hon. gentleman knows quite well the origin of the misunderstanding which exists. It is the simple fact that the Australian States are sovereign States, whereas the Provinces of Canada are not." Mr. MacMaster said the Provinces of Canada were as much entitled to representation as the Australian States.

BRINGING UP FATHER IN POLITICS

TICB AT GRIFFIN'S TONIGHT

In the new comedy success, "Bringing up Father in Politics," which Gus Hill will present at Griffin's Opera House tonight, there is a scene which would be the saving grace of many a show. Critics all over the country have described it as the funniest piece of stage entertainment witnessed in years and one that will be remembered long after the rest of the offering is forgotten. In the employ of the Mahdneys, Jiggs being the Father in this production, is a character that has brought George McManus to the front ranks of living cartoonists. A butler by the name of Oswald. Oswald is of the feminine type and during the process of the comedy is the brunt of more than one verbal and physical attack by Jiggs. The new play is replete with original songs, bright dialogue, captivating young women who know how to sing and dance and other features sure to be appreciated anywhere. The cast is composed of thirty-five people, including many vaudeville headliners.

THE FOOLISH VIRGIN AND DESTRUCTION OF ZEPPELIN L-21 AT GRIFFIN'S TOMORROW

The second of the Selznick superfor photoplays is to be presented at Griffin's tomorrow night, and Saturday matinee and night, when Clara Kimball Young appears in an elaborate seven part photoplay version of "The Foolish Virgin." The title role affords Miss Young the most interesting emotional part she has ever played and is alive with big situations and a wonderful climax. Besides this seven part offering the Kinsto Film Ltd., of London, England, have recently released by consent of the War Department, a special topical film of especial interest to theatregoers in the destruction in mid-air of the German Zeppelin L—21. The film, which is 900 feet in length is to be shown on the same program with the above offering.

A splendid varied programme of photoplays is announced for exhibition at the Palace tonight, the feature photoplay offering being Marie Doro in a five part photoplay entitled, "The Lash." Besides this special offering the last two part chapter of the new thrilling western serial "Liberty" will be shown along with the 14th chapter of the "Crimson Stain Mystery" and a new and amusing comedy.

ALADDIN AND HIS LAMP RETURNS TO GRIFFIN'S NEXT TUESDAY

Miss Zara Clinton, the dainty English comedienne who gave us such a delightful interpretation of the little Chinese boy, Aladdin, in the production of "Aladdin And His Wonderful Lamp," will again assume the role when the company returns to Griffin's Opera House next Tuesday night, March 6th.

Miss Clinton is the possessor of a winsome personality, endowed with beauty and aided by flawless technique. She will be supported by Mr. Billy Oswald, Mr. Harry Hoyland and the same great cast and chorus that so created local theatregoers when "Aladdin And His Wonderful Lamp" was given here a few weeks ago.

The seven Royal Ugena Japs will again delight us with many new feats of skill.

CURLING.

CLUB GAMES

At the Belleville Curling Rink last night, one of the semi-final club games was played between rinks skipped by Messrs. P. O. Pitney and F. Quick. The result was a decided win for the members of Mr. Pitney's rink, the score being 16 to 3 in their favor. The composition of the rinks was as follows:

W. Symons	S. Bongard
T. J. Hurley	G. Dulmage
Dr. Kinnear	E. W. Dickens
P. O. Pitney	F. Quick
Skip 16	Skip 3

This evening two senior and two junior rinks from Napanee will visit this city and play a match in the district cup competition.

FORMING POTATO CLUBS

It has been proposed at Brantford to take over vacant lots, prepare them for seeding with potatoes, place them in charge of boys' clubs and offer prizes for the greatest yield. Could not this be done in Belleville, where there is considerable vacant property?

NEGLECTED TO PAY

Last evening the police were called to a livery in the city to settle a grievance. A party had hired a horse and rig and upon returning same did not have the money to pay for it. Upon agreeing to pay today no further action was taken in the matter.

RED CROSS CONCERT

The Red Cross Concert given at Wellman's Corners on Tuesday, Feb. 27th, was a decided success. Captain Hodge and Pte. Daly, two returned soldiers, gave interesting addresses on their experiences during several months' service at the front. Miss Ruby Fiske, dramatic soprano, delighted the audience with several selections.

MASONIC ROYAL ARCH CHAPTER

R. E. Companion Colonel W. N. Ponton, K. C., was yesterday elected Grand Second Principal of the Grand Chapter of Canada, Royal Arch Masons, whose jurisdiction extends from the Ottawa River to the Pacific Coast. He was also appointed President of the Executive Council, of which R. E. Companion R. H. Spence of Trenton, was elected a member. Many Companions from Belleville and vicinity were present. R. E. Comp. McGillivary, of Picton was elected Superintendent of this Prince Edward District.

National Service

One of the most valuable of recent literary contributions to the great cause is a booklet by Professor Stephen Leacock, entitled "National Organization for War." In this booklet, Dr. Leacock makes an urgent call for national thrift and national saving. He attacks in vigorous style the evils of extravagance at this crisis in Canada's history, and trenchant phrase and apt illustration disposes of various common errors in regard to individual spending of money during war time.

This pamphlet was originally published by Dr. Leacock himself, but the National Service Board were so convinced of its value in connection with their Thrift Campaign that they have had it republished and have undertaken its distribution. Copies may be obtained by writing to the Secretary of the National Service Board at Ottawa, or by applying to the National Service Director in any Province.

LITERARY NOTES

5,000 FACTS ABOUT CANADA

The public will welcome the new issue for 1917 of "5,000 Facts About Canada," the popular and valuable cyclopedia of Canadian dates, compiled by Frank Yeigh of Toronto, the well-known writer and lecturer of the Dominion. No up-to-date and intelligent Canadian can afford to be without this "handy annual," which is a revelation in concrete form of the wonderful growth of our country in single year, despite war conditions; indeed, it circulates all over the world, and as such is a splendid advertisement. The chapter of "War Facts," is, by the way, both timely and illuminating. Fifty other chapters are devoted alphabetically to every phase of our national life, from Agriculture to the Yukon, while several sketch maps are of high value. Copies may be had from newsdealers or by sending 25c to the Canadian Facts Pub. Co., 588 Huron Street, Toronto, Canada.

CANADIAN MAGAZINE

Several articles of particular interest to Canadians appear in the March Canadian Magazine. The first shows that by the balance of trade in her favor Canada has changed from a debtor nation into a creditor nation, and that the year 1916 saw the greatest trade in the country's history. Dr J. D. Logan reviews Canadian poetry of the Great War, showing that Canada has not been behind other countries in this respect. Main Johnson compares the gaiety of London during war time with the soberness of Paris. Frank Yeigh contributes an entertaining description of rural Quebec, with excellent illustrations. "Spring the Elusive" is a humorous sketch by A. B. Brown. Patrick Mac. Gill reviews the British army of today. Lacey Amy describes the work of the non-combatants at the Front, and F. McKelvey Bell continues his entertaining chronicle, "The First Canadians in France" Francis Mills on the great work that chemists are doing to advance manufacturing, and Newton MacTavish gives a sketch of Stevens Leon, the Canadian war correspondent.

THE BIGGEST YEAR IN CANADA

The year 1916 was the most prosperous year in the history of Canada says Lewis William Edmonds, writing in The Canadian Magazine for March. Mr. Edmonds awoke to the fact that she had been transformed from a debtor to a creditor nation.

"The balance of trade," he observes, "began to take a turn more favorable than was at one time deemed possible. This enabled the Minister of Finance, who had all along been closely studying the situation, to try the hitherto unheard of experiment of floating a domestic loan. As the banks had promised to subscribe liberally, he asked for fifty million dollars. To the surprise of almost everyone, the amount subscribed was more than double that sought. Of the amount subscribed, one hundred millions were accepted, one-half of which was set aside for the purpose of establishing a line of credit in the interest of the Imperial Government. Later on, in cooperation with the banks, a further line of credit was established. Last September the Minister of Finance sought a further domestic loan, the sum aimed at being a hundred million dollars. Again the amount subscribed exceeded by one hundred per cent the sum asked for. Besides the two hundred millions which have been raised by domestic loans the banks and the Finance Department between them have established credit in the interest of the Imperial Government to the amount of $250,000,000."

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH WEST LAND REGULATIONS.

The sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a Quarter section of available Dominion Land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at any Agency, (but not Sub-Agency) on certain conditions.

Duties—Six months residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required except where residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years after earning homestead patent and cultivate fifty acres extra. Pre-emption patent may be obtained as soon as homestead patent, or certain conditions.

A settler who has exhausted his homestead right may purchase a homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate fifty acres and erect a house worth $300.

The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land. Live stock may be substituted for cultivation under certain conditions.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

INFANT WELFARE—ARTICLE No. 8.

Breast Feeding.—(Continued.)

IF THE BABY is very feeble it must not be able to nurse. In such cases the breast milk should be removed by a breast pump and fed to the baby or a wet-nurse provided. In hareilp or cleft palate the baby may not be able to nurse. It should be fed with the breast milk by means of a medicine dropper or spoon.

Pregnancy. In pregnancy the baby must be weaned.

Menstruation. In menstruation the baby should not be weaned.

It is frequently said that the mother's milk does not agree with the baby. This is not often the case, and if the matter is investigated it will be found that there are other reasons why the breast milk apparently disagrees with the baby. Green or slimy movements in a baby otherwise doing well are not a reason for weaning. If the baby spits up, it may be because he is handled about after feeding or because the fannel binding is too tight or he may have taken too much food. If the baby is troubled with gas, he may have taken the food too fast, the mother may be doing too much work, or she may have indigestion.

Insufficient Breast Milk. This may be determined by weighing the baby before and after nursing, or the mother may be weighed before and after nursing. This will determine the quantity taken by the baby at each nursing. The baby will as a rule need as many ounces, plus one, as he is months old.

If the Milk is Insufficient. If there is not enough breast milk we should examine into the cause.

(1) That the mother is taking proper and sufficient food.

(2) That she is not overworked.

If these conditions are satisfactory, it will be necessary to make up the deficiency by a wet-nurse's milk formula, or one breast-feeding may be omitted entirely and a cow's milk formula substituted in its place. The former method should be used where the supply of breast milk is very small and the latter in case the supply is nearly normal. The cow's milk formula to be used should be the same except that a baby taking breast milk will take a stronger formula than a baby of the same age being raised on cow's milk.

When to Part Feed the Baby. Generally after the second month, except in the hot summer weather, it is desirable even if the breast supply is adequate, to give the baby one bottle feeding a day. This gives the mother more freedom and enables her to carry on the nursing longer by keeping her from getting mentally and physically tired. A further advantage is that it teaches the baby to take milk from a bottle and makes the weaning easier. One bottle may be substituted for any one nursing.

Number of Feedings. It is advisable to put the baby to the breast as soon as the mother has recovered from the exhaustion of her confinement. There will not likely be any milk at first, but the efforts of the baby will stimulate the flow of milk to the breasts. The baby does not need any food during the first twenty-four hours. A little boiled water without sugar will be sufficient. The baby should be put to the breasts alternately during the second day and every four hours thereafter. During the next twenty-four hours the interval should be regular by the clock every two hours from 6 a.m., 10 a.m., 2 p.m., 6 p.m., 10 p.m., and 2 a.m. The 2 a.m. feeding should be cut off as soon as the baby will go from 10 p.m. to 6 a.m. The continuous sleep is good for the baby and should be brought about as soon as possible. Usually this is accomplished by the end of the first week or ten days. The 2 a.m. feeding should usually be continued for eight or nine months or longer if the baby is not gaining. Many strong, healthy babies will go satisfactorily from 6 p.m. to 6 a.m. without feeding.

The baby should be nursed at one breast only at each feeding. If the supply of milk in one breast is not sufficient he may be given both breasts at a feeding. At first the baby should not nurse more than ten minutes, but at any time not more than twenty-five minutes. Many mothers make the mistake of stirring the baby too much.

Fondling Not Good for Baby. The baby should be held comfortably on the mother's arm and so placed that the nipple goes easily into his mouth. This is a good plan for the mother to lie down when nursing the baby. The baby should not be allowed to go to sleep until a reasonable time for feeding is allowed. The nursing once begun should not be interrupted. (To Be Continued Next Week.)

Vol. 69 BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, FRIDAY, MARCH 2, 1917. No. 59

ACTIVE SESSION OF THE CIVIC COMMITTEES

Many Matters of Importance to City Brought Forward—New Overhead Bridge to be Built on North Front Street by G.T.R.

At a regular meeting of the various Civic Committee held last evening, a number of matters were brought up and spoken of. Some were concurred in, while others were laid over for further consideration and investigation.

PUBLIC WORKS

Ald. Whalen, chairman, presided. The accounts passed were:

Pay sheet No. 5	$115 31
Downey Coal Co.	9 50

An account of $15 presented by E. Patterson for work done in surveying of the West Belleville sewer was referred to the Chairman and Street Foreman to ascertain why Mr. Patterson was employed, and by whom.

Mr. S. Fradette was given permission to build a smal house on Bridge Avenue, West Belleville, if the Building-Bylaw is complied with.

GAS

Ald. Deacon, Chairman. The accounts passed were:

Pay Sheet	$20 33
Gas Dept.	3 25
M. B. Spafford	25 32
W. J. Calder	25 32
Fire clay	60
Riggs Garage	33
Greenleaf Co.	4 00
Gorman's Shoe Store	10 50
Downey Co.	5 00
Hydro Electric Commission of Ontario	150 20

The Chairman stated that 30 tons of coal had been secured from the company which is operating a plant at Massassaga Park, and $9 a ton was paid for it. The city did well to secure the coal at the price paid.

Hospital, was laid over for the time being.

The request of Mr. Colden, an engineer at the pump house, for an increase in wages, was laid over for further consideration.

An account of Mr. J. W. Evans, ex-City Engineer, for $1.50, in connection with consultation, and preparing of plans for new pumping outfit at the pump house, was presented, and referred to the Chairman to look into and report.

Ald. Deacon stated that through the items which appeared in the press there had been of late very much less water pumped daily at the pump house. The number of gallons pumped were also one-half less than they were some time ago.

Mayor Ketcheson—There has not been pressure enough recently to run the motor at St. Thomas' Church.

Ald. Deacon—The motor was curtailed on account of lack of fuel.

Ald. Robinson—How much coal is required at the pump house?

Ald. Deacon—About 600 tons a year. We have coal bought at the mines, but cannot get it here. One car engaged here for the city, was confiscated by the railway.

Ald. Deacon stated that Mr. R. S. Lea of Montreal, an expert hydraulic engineer, had been in the city, and would report as to contemplated installing of new pumps at the water works pump house. We have got to have one new pump as soon as possible.

The matter was left in abeyance until the report of Mr. Lee has been received.

EXECUTIVE

Ald. Woodley, chairman, presided. Mr. J. A. Kerr, City Assessor, presented an account of $20 for pay of a lady clerk in his office. He claimed he had to have assistance, as he was busily engaged in the assessment, and was after the names of those who should be assessed for income. He had secured some 60.

Ald. Robinson—Has the city to pay for an assistant for the assessor?

Ald. Woodley—He should get authority before he engages assistance.

Mayor Ketcheson—I have been urging the assessor to get in the assessment as early as possible, so we can save a large interest account. Also get after men for income tax. We want him to have the assessment made so as to have our first instalment of taxes paid in July, and not so late in the season.

Ald. Robinson—Is he not getting a salary sufficient so as to pay for extra help? Is he not engaged in other business besides that of assessing the city?

Mayor Ketcheson—Yes. He is a cheese buyer in the summer time.

The matter was left in the hands of the Chairman and Mayor to interview the assessor in reference to the accounts.

An account of $30 presented by the Sisters of Charity of Kingston, was ordered to be paid, as the city had the money from relatives of the party looked after by the Institution.

A recommendation prevailed that the treasurer be authorized to pay accounts for the Board of Health, when same have been properly presented and audited.

In reply to an enquiry, the City Clerk stated he had no communication from Mr. Evans relative to his account for plans, etc., prepared, re subway on Front street. There was no record in the minutes of the Council authorizing the work to be done.

After some discussion the matter was referred to Judge Wills for a written report, as he was Mayor when the account was incurred.

FOOD PRODUCTION

A circular was read from the Agricultural Department at Ottawa, relative to having vacant property in the city utilized for the raising of food crops. It was essential that this be done this year as the need was great.

Mayor Ketcheson—This was an important matter and should be taken hold of but just how would have to be worked out. There were in this city probably 700 acres of vacant property, both city and land. He was glad to cultivate one acre of land in this city. We have not yet realized the seriousness of the situation in the war. Our enemies are putting the boys and girls at work. The women and children are going to do the cultivating. Our men will do the fighting. We must do the same.

Ald. Deacon—The Boys Scout movement is a great factor in our city, and it might be utilized in this direction.

Ald. Woodley—Lay the matter over and consider it from the various phases at the Council meeting.

Mayor Ketcheson—The women of the city would no doubt take hold of this matter, and assist materially. It is production we want. The women will organize a campaign to assist in the matter.

Ald. Deacon was in hearty accord of the project.

It was decided to have the matter discussed at an early date, and arrangement made to have vacant property cultivated.

RAILWAY BOARD

A communication was read from the Board of Railway Commissioners, stating the Board would hold a sitting at Ottawa on Tuesday, March 6th, 1917, to consider the matter of providing for the crossing of the Canadian Northern and Canadian Pacific Railway Companies at Bay Bridge West, Belleville.

Mayor Ketcheson—Mr. Porter, M. P., should represent the city in this matter, as he is conversant with the facts. He should also be provided with plans, etc. It was decided to have Mr. Porter represent the city at the sitting of the Board.

DOG TAGS

The City Treasurer was authorized to procure from a Hamilton firm the necessary number of dog tags.

PUBLIC LIBRARY

A request was made from the management of the Corby Public Library for a grant of $3,657 for 1917.

Ald. Robinson—Is there a detailed account available of the monies expended.

City Clerk—It is published in the auditor's report.

Matter referred to City Council.

MAYOR PRO TEM

Mayor Ketcheson stated he would appoint Ald. Woodley to act as Mayor while he, the Mayor, was absent from the city on Monday and Tuesday next.

ORANGE GRAND LODGE

Mayor Ketcheson—The Orange Grand Lodge for Eastern Ontario would be held in Belleville this month and a civic address should be presented, and a committee from the Council delegated to present same.

Mayor Ketcheson, Aldermen Deacon, Marshall and Woodley were named as a delegation, and it was decided to present a civic address.

BATTALION LEAVING

Mayor Ketcheson stated that the 235th Battalion would be leaving the

RETREAT WAS A FORCED ONE

Allied General Says War May Be Extended Over Another Winter

Special to The Intelligencer.

LONDON, March 2.—Interviewed by the Associated Press, General Maurice, director of Military operations for the Imperial General Staff, said the war may extend over another winter as far as purely military factors are concerned. He saw no indication that the Germans were with drawing along the Ancre because of a desire to cease fighting. "Retirement was forced upon them." He said, "They do not like it any more than we did when after the second battle of Ypres, we had to retire a shorter distance to straighten our lines. It is certain Germany will make a determined effort somewhere to restore lost prestige. We are now merely gathering fruits of our winter operations, the results of which is that from Arras to the Ancre, a salient decided ly dangerous to German positions, has been established."

MORE AMERICANS ARE SACRIFICED

Two Reported Missing From The British Barque Galgorm Castle

CORK, March 2—Special—Twelve of the crew of twenty-four of the barque Galgorm Castle landed yesterday. The vessel was sunk by submarine gunfire. Among the missing is a young American sailor, William Jackson, of New York. Mrs. Frampton, wife of the captain, who was on the ship, said: "Approaching the Irish coast, a submarine without warning fired shells at a distance of two miles. The vessel was hit several times. One shot took effect. We took to the two lifeboats, while the submarine continued shelling." The fate of one life boat is unknown.

Among the men landed are two Americans, Harry Merritt of Beaver Falls, Penn., and Norman Gilbert, Bay Orchard Harbour, which is still missing, contained twelve men.

It is said that David Walker, another American, is also missing.

Turks Still on The Move

Special To The Intelligencer.

LONDON, March 2—Turks are continuing to retreat before the victorious British on the Tigris front. Official announcement made here today says that the retreating Turks on Tuesday evening passed through a stiayh, fifty-two miles north of Kut-el-Amara. More than seven thousand prisoners have been taken since December.

Cubans Sack British Schooner

MOBILE, Ala., March 2—Special—Cuban revolutionists boarded and forcibly searched the British schooner Percelier in the harbor at Nuevitas, Cuba, February 14, according to a star yield here today by Captain B. A. Russell,master of the vessel. All firearms and ammunition on board were carried off, he said.

PRESIDENT WILSON'S BILL IS PASSED BY VOTE OF 403 TO 13

WASHINGTON, March 1.—After a day of patriotic debate which obliterated party lines, the House late tonight passed the Administration bill empowering the President to arm and defend against unlawful attacks American merchant ships. The vote on the final passage was 403 to 13.

Representative Cooper of Wisconsin, ranking Republican of the Foreign Affairs Committee, moved to recommit the bill, with instructions to include a prohibition against the arming of merchant ships carrying arms and ammunition to belligerent countries. This motion was defeated by a vote of 275 to 124, and the opposition in a body remained on the roll-call for final passage.

Stirring debate preceded the vote, and throughout the afternoon and into the night the galleries were crowded. The news of the alleged German plot to array Japan and Mexico against the United States added to the excitement of the discussion, and is believed to have aided in practically solidifying the House behind the President.

Representative Mann, the minority leader, made the greatest ovation of the day when he announced his support of the Administration bill.

Chairman Flood of the Foreign Affairs Committee was also wildly applauded when he declared that "I hope we can do it (the defence of American rights) peacefully, but if we cannot we will do it with force of arms."

GERMAN RAIDS WERE BROKEN

Enemy Trench Near Vaquois Raided by French and Prisoners Taken

Special to The Intelligencer.

PARIS, March 2.—Two German raids occurring simultaneously last night on the front west of Soissons were broken up by French fire with losses to the Germans, the War Office announced today. A German trench near Vauquois in Argonne was raided and prisoners taken.

Activity Prevails on Eastern Front

Special To The Intelligencer

PETROGRAD, March 2—A Russian official statement today reads:

Western Front—Continuing reconnaissances and reciprocal firing is proceeding.

Roumanian Front.—In the region to the north of Jacobeni Kimpolung highroad fighting continues. Germans counter attacked against the Roumanian detachments which had occupied the heights near the villages of Rejoha north of the rives Seavel, and obliged them to withdraw.

North of the River Rionik our scouts annihilated the enemy field posts, capturing twenty-three prisoners and two machine guns.

Caucasian front.—During rifle fire which is proceeding Col. Nachavariani was wounded.

Special to The Intelligencer.

BERLIN, March 2—The Admiralty announces that March first expired the final period of grace allotted for sailing ships in the Atlantic. From this date no special warning will be given except as to by submarines.

Repulse British Near Arras

Special to The Intelligencer.

BERLIN Army Headquarters announcement today read:

On the western front between Ypres and the Somme several counter-attacking advances of the enemy were fruitless. After a lively fire a strong British detachment advanced against our trenches east and southeast of Souchez. They were repulsed in hand-to-hand fighting and twenty prisoners with one machine gun were taken.

In the Ancre sector there were repeated clashes in front of our positions there and during the clearing of the British nests near Sailly thirty prisoners and three machine guns were taken.

On the French front several local enterprises were carried out.

WILL CLOSE BAR AND RESTAURANT

TORONTO, March 2—Special—F. W. Musson, owner of the Mossop Hotel, yesterday announced that the restaurant and bar of his establishment will be closed permanently because the sale of two and a half per cent. beer has not proved profitable. The remainder of the hotel will be kept open.

BIG NICKEL BOMB REACTS ON LIBERALS IN ONT. LEGISLATURE

Policy of Provincial Government Endorsed by the British Authorities—Are Working Hand-in-Hand

Toronto, March 2.

The most drainatic moment the Legislature has known since nickel became a provincial issue occurred just before midnight. Leaning across his desk his voice ringing with feeling, Hon. T. W. McGarry challenged Hartley Dewart, K.C., to declare whether, if he was presented with a copy of a confidential cablegram from a British Minister declaring that the British Government was satisfied with the arrangements for the handling of nickel he would accept that as evidence and cease the tirade that had been in progress for nearly an hour.

Mr. Dewart tried to evade an answer, and Mr. McGarry repeated his challenge. The nickel champion, cornered, finally said that he would have to see all the correspondence." The Conservative members roared their delight. A moment later Hon. T. B. Lucas rose and made the most unexpected announcement in connection with the controversy that has come to light to date.

"Will my honorable friend cease this tirade of his against the International Nickel Company? I tell him that immediately after the outbreak of war the International Nickel Company, through its president, who visited Ottawa, offered to turn over to the Dominion Government the sole control of the nickel output of their concern. This was one week after the outbreak of the war. Then a proper arrangement was made, and is still working out, and the British Government says it is entirely satisfied."

Coming on the heel of a lengthy denunciation by Mr. Dewart of the international Nickel Company as a concern that should be viewed with suspicion, as a company that was under German influence and did its business through pro-Germans, the announcement of the Attorney-General created a burst of excitement. It fell as a bombshell into the Opposition ranks and all that Mr. Dewart could find to say in reply was a fretful complaint that if the Government had all this information it should have produced it before. The South-west Toronto member tried to sit up on, but his heart was not in it and he wound up rather quickly.

Mr. Dewart's address supplied all the material of a day of debating that had little to commend it. The Liberal rival for the Opposition leadership made scarcely any attempt to discuss the Provincial Treasurer's budget generally, devoting himself to nickel almost from the outset. He followed up his charges, in the House, in regard to sales of mining lands to the Canada Copper Company. Taking up Hon. Mr. Ferguson's statement that the lands referred to had been staked by private prospectors, Mr. Dewart asserted that the "private prospectors" were both employes of the company. Not contents with this, Mr. Dewart proceeded to give the House records of earlier sales of nickel lands, during 1915 several hundred acres, having been made, he claimed at the "paltry" price of $3.00 an acre.

Encouraged on by Opposition applause, Mr. Dewart started to branch out, and there should be no mistake. He set upon an elaborate argument to prove that the International Nickel Company should not be trusted because it had employed Henry R. Merton and Co., of London, a German firm.

Hon. I. B. Lucas asked him if it was not a fact that there had been a reorganization and that the British Government was now satisfied with the Merton firm. Mr. Dewart grudgingly admitted that it was. But the British Government might be deceived.

"Then I would be glad to know if anything could be better than that," said Hon. Mr. Lucas. "If my friend has any evidence that the British Government is being deceived, he should submit it to the House."

Mr. Dewart did not have it, but he had "something just as good."

Mr. Dewart endeavored to change the subject by demanding a list of the shareholders of the International Nickel Co.

"My honorable friend tries to slip away when I put my finger upon him," said Mr. Lucas, smiling, "but I just want to show the sort of argument he has been giving the House. He says the International Nickel Co. are a bad lot. They cannot be trusted because they retain Germans as agents. Now the British Government say Mertons are satisfactory and that all the output of the International Nickel Co. must be sold through Merton and Co."

HUNS RUSH FROM ARRAS BRITISH PAST MIRAUMOUT

Paris Hears Foe Has Already Evacuated Town of Bapaume—Eleven Villages Now in the Hands of Haig's Soldiers

LONDON, March 2—Special.—The Germans are still swinging rapidly out of the Arras salient. Yesterday the British advanced their line an average distance of 600 yards on a front of one and a half miles north of Miraumont.

Information received in Paris states that the Germans have already evacuated Bapaume and taken up a new line running to the east of the strongly held Grevillers-Irles-Bihucourt-Haplincourt south to the Sailly sector, on which the entire line is pivoting.

This is highly probable. As pointed out yesterday, the position of Bapaume has become virtually indefensible

The official communication from British Headquarters in France last night reads: "During February we captured 13 German prisoners, including thirty-six officers. The following thirty-six officers. The following tured or surrendered to us by the withdraw of the Germans: Lagny-Thilloy, Le Barque, Warlencourt, Pys, Miraumont, Petit Miraumont, Grandcourt, Puisieux-au-Mont, Serre and Gommecourt. The enemy continues to yield ground on the Ancre. North of Miraumont our line advanced today an average distance of 600 yards on a front of one and a half miles."

OFFICIAL APPOINTED

At a meeting held on Monday evening for the purpose of appointing a president of the Bancroft Conservative Association, an office rendered vacant by the resignation of Mr. R. C. Fair, who intends moving from here, the honor fell to M. D. Fuller.—Bancroft Times.

RECITAL WAS SUCCESS

The recital held in C. W. Lindsay's music hall, Sparks street, Ottawa, on Saturday evening, by the pupils of Miss Muriel Grills, was very much appreciated by the large number who attended, many of the pupils showing a marked improvement since the last recital held. Just before the closing Miss Grills was the recipient of a large basket of American Beauties from her pupils. Miss Grills, formerly of Belleville, was a student at St. Agnes School, and later finished in Toronto.

A clothing board, the members of which are, Col. Gillespie, of Kingston, Capt. Carman and Lieut. Learoyd of the 254th Battalion, are conducting an inspection of the battalion today.

The 235th Battalion will leave this city for Ottawa at 9.30 a.m. Monday morning, not at 10 o'clock as was previously stated. The battalion will parade up Front Street, as far as the Upper Bridge, previous to entraining at the C.N.R. Depot.

The farewell meeting of the 235th Battalion in Griffin's Opera House Sunday night, will be entirely in the hands of the Battalion's officers. No outside speakers will address the gathering.

Annual Social Yokefellows Class

Popular Bible Class of The Baptist Church Present Pastor and Teacher With Handsome Present

The 8th annual social of the Yokefellows' Bible Class of the Baptist Church was held last night, and was largely attended by the members and their friends. Carpet-bowling games were played, and a programme of music and speeches was presented, after which refreshment were served, after the evening passed by singing "Blest be the Tie That Binds," and the National Anthem, and prayer by the pastor of the church, Rev. C. G. Smith. During the evening Rev. C. G. Smith presented Mr. B. F. Butler, the retiring President, with a handsome umbrella, from the class. Mr. Butler has been President for a number of years and has taken a deep interest in making the class a success. The teacher of the class, Rev. C. G. Smith, was also presented with a handsome gold watch by the class members. The address was read by Mr. Faulkner, and the presentation made by Mr. B. F. Butler. The following program was presented:

Chairman's address—Mr. B. F. Butler.

Piano Solo—Miss J. Butler.

Solo—Mrs. Farrow.

Quartette—Mrs. Doolittle, Mrs. Farrow, Mr. Cook and Mr. Kelly.

Recitation—Mildred Turney.

Solo—Mrs. Doolittle.

Instrumental Solo—Bandsman Cookson.

Recitation—Miss Turney.

Male Sextette—Messrs. Kelly, Cook, Faulkner, Cookson, Chute and Deelton.

The accompanist throughout the evening was Mrs. Wm. R. Deelton. The new President, Mr. Wm. Faulkner, was introduced, and made a neat little speech. The greetings and best wishes of the class were conveyed to Mr. W. B. Riggs, who has been an active supporter of the class for many years.

TOO YOUNG FOR A SOLDIER

Has Seen Service at the Front, But is Now Being Discharged

Among the soldiers who have returned to this city and are convalescing after being wounded at the front is Pte. Dixon, who went with the 39th Belleville Battalion under Lieut.-Col. J. A. V. Preston. Pte. Dixon's father was a recruiting sergeant under Lieut. Mouck for some time last summer. Pte. Dixon transferred from the 39th to the 2nd Battalion in England, and was wounded after being for some time at the front in the 2nd Battalion. He was returned to Canada because of his youth and although wearing the Russian scot casualty ribbon is being discharged.—Kingston Whig.

Bad Successful Driving Party

Last Wednesday evening the members of the Bridge Street Epworth League and their friends, about forty in number, were participants of a very pleasant sleighing party to the spacious home of Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Hyde, second concession of Sidney, about six miles from the city.

The company arrived about 8.30 and after getting seated, Mr. Victor E. Bullock, President of the class, acting as chairman, called the meeting to order, and a very enjoyable program was rendered, consisting of songs, readings, impromptu speeches and debates. The rest of the evening was spent in games and social intercourse, after which dainty refreshments were served, to which all did ample justice.

Mr. Vernon Clarke moved a hearty vote of thanks to the host and hostess for their very kind hospitality. This was seconded by Mr. Frank Hinchey, and was heartily responded to. After singing "Auld Lang Syne," "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow," etc., the party dispersed, reaching the city in the wee small hours, and wishing for another such occasion soon.

FREQUENT HEADACHES MUCH PAIN THROUGH BACK

Kidneys Were Deranged—Digestion Was Poor—Had Weak Spells—Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills Made Cure Complete

Brockville, Ont., March 2—Persistent headaches and pains through the small of the back are well-known symptoms of kidney disease. The skin gets dry and hard, you lose flesh and weight, and digestion is usually deranged.

Any derangements of the kidneys are sufficient cause for alarm, for the usual result of neglect is the development of Bright's disease, hardening of the arteries and dropsical swelling.

Mrs. Frank Noyes, 9 Stuart street, Brockville, Ont., writes:

"For years I was afflicted with kidney complaint. I became very nervous, was easily worried, and had frequent headaches and neuralgic pains, especially through the back. I had indigestion, poor circulation of the blood, and often was bothered with weak spells. I commenced using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and had only taken two boxes when I felt greatly relieved. I continued the treatment, however, until I was completely cured. It is now about ten boxes, and have not been troubled in this way since. I highly recommend Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and I think also that the Plasters and Ointment can't be equalled."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are considered a household necessity wherever their value is proven as a means of regulating the liver, kidneys and bowels, and thereby preventing serious disease. One pill a dose, 25c a box, 5 for $1, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

NEW CUNARDERS ORDERED

Large Cargo Boats to be Built in States

NEW YORK, March 1—An Associated Press despatch from Philadelphia says: Announcement was made today that the Sun Shipbuilding Company at Chester, Pa., has received a contract from the Cunard Line for two standard 10,000 ton cargo boats. Other concerns, including the Bethlehem Steel Company, have received similar contracts, but it is understood that the Sun Company contract was the first awarded to an American shipbuilding company by a British firm in fifty years.

Bank Clerk's Costly Error

Changed For Stranger Four Bogus Bills Aggregating $2,000

TORONTO, March 1—The inexperience of a young woman clerk in the Bank of Ottawa, 37 King street east, cost that institution $2,000 and but little hope of recovering the money is held by the authorities. The young woman was filling the place of one of the bank's regular employes, who has enlisted. It appears that a prosperous-appearing man walked into the bank last Saturday, approached the cashier's window, and explained that he had four bills of large denomination which he wished exchanged for smaller bills. At a casual glance the money appeared to be genuine, and without hesitation the young woman turned the money over to him, taking the large bills in return. A few minutes later one of the officials of the bank noticed the four large bills, and one glance was sufficient to tell him that they were bogus. Efforts were made to locate the man who has exchanged the bills, but they were futile. It is believed that the smooth stranger was an American, who made good his escape to the United States without molestation.

WOMEN OF CANADA.

Fort Coulonge, Quebec.—"I am sorry to tell you that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, I believe, saved my life and a year afterward had twins." Mrs. Ida Brazet, Fort Coulonge, Quebec.

Many women call it a lucky day when Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is first mentioned to them. It is the most wonderful good. I was troubled with a weakness and I tried views and doctors. Many times I received very little help. I was young at the time and knew very little about medicines and all it did. A lady friend came to me with the bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, I began using them and a year afterward had twins. I am glad to tell you that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, which will surely and quickly banish all pain, distress and misery and restore the health.

Young mothers who preserve the charms of face and figure in spite of an increasing family and the care it brings, are always to be envied. "Favorite Prescription" gives the strength and health upon which happy motherhood depends. It enables the mother to nourish the infant life depending on her, and enjoy the happiness of watching the development of a perfectly healthy child.

A GREAT BOOK THAT EVERY WOMAN SHOULD HAVE.

as to the possibility of returning to the Dominion the many Canadian women and children now in the Old Country, who are prevented from coming home by a recent Order-in-Council, forbidding such travel through the barred zone.

It is estimated there are in England over 30,000 Canadian women and children, families for the most part of Canadian soldiers. Many of these women went to England on the strength of a few months' accumulation of their husbands' assigned pay or separation allowance and are now destitute. They present a considerable problem to the Imperial authorities, and have also been subjects of anxious concern to their relatives here, who have been directing inquiries to the Government as to their return. One suggestion made is that they be sent home in transports.

The ocean nowadays seems to be a body of water entirely surrounded by trouble.

Manitoba Plan To Aid Hotels

WINNIPEG, March 1—A bill providing relief for hotel men has been introduced in the Legislature as the result of the deliberations of a special committee appointed yesterday afternoon.

Under the bill a director of public accommodation will deal with all hotel matters, assisted by an unpaid advisory staff of five members of the Legislature and municipalities will be given the power to establish and operate "municipal hotels" where necessary. Municipalities are authorized to make grants up to $1,000 to assist hotels. Hotel men may apply to a county judge for an order rescinding or varying lease terms on hotel premises. It is proposed that licensed hotel men be given a practical monopoly of handling tobacco, of operating billiard rooms and bowling alleys, and providing means and lodging with the exception of private boarding houses.

EXULTANT OVER PIRACY

Germans are "Reconciled to Any Eventuality"

BERLIN, March. 1.—All outward signs indicate that the German public is reconciled completely to any eventuality growing out of the loss of American lives through the sinking of the steamer Laconia. There has just been received here a brief despatch from Washington to the effect that the United States Government regards the torpedoing of the liner as an overt act. There are no indications, however, of any departure from Germany's resolve to carry on submarine warfare unretarded.

The remarks of Chancellor Von Bethman Hollweg on this subject in his address to the Reichstag yesterday have met with general support. The submarine campaign is inspiring great enthusiasm and is regarded as the agency which is capable of forcing the war to a conclusion in Germany's favor.

MOUNTIES' DUTY ENDED

Western Police Served Forty-three Years

EDMONTON, March 1—The Royal North-West Mounted Police, after a continuous service in this country for 43 years, at midnight ceased to do service duty in the Province of Alberta and the men formed a Provincial police took up the work. The Provincial police has organized its four divisions at Edmonton, Red Deer, Calgary and Lethbridge, and although not recruited up to the full strength, is ready for business, according to Supt. A. E. C. McDonnell.

No Women or Children Must Cross Atlantic

Order Passed on Request of Imperial Authorities is Absolute

OTTAWA, March 1—In reply to a number of protests sent to the Government against the strict enforcement of the recent order in council forbidding women, girls and children under twelve to cross the Atlantic, a statement was issued today by Lieut.-Col. Hugh Clark, M.P., Parliamentary Under Secretary of State for External Affairs, justifying the arbitrary prevention of women or children from travelling on the Atlantic under the present conditions. Col. Clark notes that the order was passed on request of the Imperial authorities, and is absolute in its terms. The action was rendered necessary both because of the submarine menace and because of the consequent situation in Great Britain. Semi-official warnings to women not to go to England had been issued somewhat timid, but apparently to no effect. Thousands of Canadian women and children, says Col. Clark, have gone over to England and he finds that they cannot come back because the British regulations strictly forbid all transatlantic traffic for women or children either way across the ocean.

MAKE BRITISH COMMONS OBSERVE LIQUOR RULES

LONDON, March 1—A resolution was passed in the House of Commons today requesting the Catering Committee of the House to observe in the sale of intoxicating liquors the same restrictions imposed upon the general public. Heretofore the sale of intoxicants in Parliament has not been affected by any outside action.

OBSEQUIES.

JONAS POPE

The remains of the late Mr. Jonas Pope were yesterday afternoon interred in Belleville cemetery. At the family residence, Gilbert street, Rev. Dr. Biagrave, Rector of Christ Church, conducted the burial service of the Anglican Church, and officiated at the interment. A number of relatives and friends were in attendance. Upon the casket were placed a number of beautiful floral tributes. The bearers were immediate relatives of the deceased.

JOHN BAYERS

Under the auspices of the Orange Society of which deceased was a member, the funeral of the late Mr. John Bayers of Sydenham Township, took place yesterday and was largely attended. At the Methodist Church, Roslin, Rev. R. J. Richards conducted an impressive service. The church was filled with relatives and friends. Interment took place at St. Paul's Church burying ground, and Rev. Mr. Boutel conducted the interment services. The floral tributes were many and exquisite in design. At the grave the burial services of the Orange Order were held. The bearers were Messrs. Asa Bayers, Exeter, H. Campbell, Jos. Colden, James Vance and John Jackson.

CORNELIUS A. VANCOTT.

At Crofton, Prince Edward County, yesterday, the funeral of the late Mr. Cornelius A. Vancott took place, being under the auspices of the Sonne of Scotland Society of which deceased was a member. Rev. Mr. Mutton, Methodist Minister, conducted the services. Interment took place at Albury cemetery.

MARTHA E. WHITFIELD

Yesterday, after a brief service at the family residence at Ross Corners', Thurlow Township, the remains of the late Martha Emily Whitfield, were conveyed to St. Thomas Church, Belleville, where the Venerable Archdeacon Beanish conducted the burial services of the Anglican Church. Rev. Mr. Sharpe assisted at the house service. Interment took place at Belleville cemetery. The bearers were Messrs. Frank Knight, John Tucker, Samuel Lloyd, John Reid, David Trow and Frank Benedict.

SWEDISH TRUNK IS REMOVED FROM LINER

Will Be Taken to London for a Closer Examination

WASHINGTON, March 1— The chest of documents on board the Frederik VIII., supposed to be diplomatic paper of the Swedish Minister at Washington, will be forwarded from Halifax to London, to be guaranteed by Sweden's envoy here, according to the arrangements made to accommodate the issue raised when the chest was taken from Count von Bernstorff's ship.

The chest, without notification to the British authorities, was consigned to the care of a merchant taking passage for Sweden on the Frederik VIII. It was seized at Halifax but not opened.

It will be taken by a British ship to England, where the neutrality of its contents will be vouched for by representative of the Swedish Government.

BORDEN THE MAN.

Whatever changes may be made in the Dominion Government will be made by the only two agencies with constitutional power to make such changes, viz., the people or Sir Robert Borden. The former will make a change only through the process of an election. The latter can make changes when he so desires. In doing so he may not consult the mischievous busybodies who are taking advantage of his absence from Canada to unsettle the public mind by attempting to create the impression that his Government is not a "national" one. When he returns he may, if he chooses, make changes in the personnel of his Government. We have no means of knowing his mind on this point, but we do not know him at all if we think him incapable of being swayed by the resolutions of an organized body of self-appointed king-makers. We make no doubt that some of them are inspired by fear lest a general election would return Sir Wilfrid Laurier to power, yet we believe that very few of them wish to see him again Prime Minister. We believe that nearly all of them wish Sir Robert Borden to remain Prime Minister until the war is won and a satisfactory peace negotiated. That is much to their credit, but they should not think they can keep him in his post while they select his colleagues. He is not the man to retain office under such humiliating limitations and restrictions.

The organization which is now secretly in process of formation may include Conservatives who have not considered the position in which they place their leader and themselves. He left Canada to attend the most important Imperial Conference ever held. He had the implied confidence of a majority in the House of Commons, after a session in which his pregramme was unchallenged. His Government had just won a decisive victory in the portion of Canada which was considered adverse to his policy. He had no sooner left our shores than a coterie of would-be Warwicks launched a campaign with the avowed object of dictating to him upon a matter which has ever been the undisputed prerogative of a Prime Minister. If they can reconcile this to the accepted maxims of decency and loyalty let them proceed, and await the result.

IN A NUT-SHELL.

Premier Hearst in announcing to the Ontario Legislature the Government's acceptance of Mr. John Wesley Johnson's Bill providing for an extension of the franchise to women, said:

"Having taken our women into partnership with us in our tremendous task upon which the success of the future of the British Empire depends, and the civilization of the world, can we justly deny them a share in the Government of the country, the right to have a say about the making of the laws they have been so heroically trying to defend? My answer is I think not."

This was worth more than an harangue of Rowellism to establish the important fact that he approved the principle.

EVIDENCE THAT CONVICTS

James W. Gerard and Count Johann von Bernstorff, with their families, left Berlin on Saturday for Switzerland. Mr. Gerard will travel through Germany, Austria-Hungary and Italy to Switzerland, while Count von Bernstorff will go by way of Sweden and Norway to Switzerland. Both will then proceed to France, and will sail from there for the United States. Mr. Gerard will sail from Bordeaux, and Count von Bernstorff from Spain or Portugal. Mr. Gerard will sail on the Espagne, which will be the first American ship to leave a French port since the outbreak of the war. Count von Bernstorff will sail on the Frederick VIII, which will be the first Danish ship to leave the Mediterranean since the war began. Both ships will be convoyed by warships of their respective countries.

Of these, Mr. Gerard received assurance before leaving Berlin that he would sail at the peril of death from submarine torpedoes. Count von Bernstorff received assurance from Washington of a safe conduct through the Allied naval lines.

The relative situations of the two ex-Ambassadors epitomizes the utter contempt for sacred honor, as between nations, which has characterized the Teutonic warfare from the "scrap of paper" incident down.

HONEST CRITICISM.

The leading Canadian Liberal organ quotes with approval the London Times which recently said that "the new Lloyd-George Government is rapidly and rightly receiving its share of criticism. The Globe adds that "To those in Canada who would shut-down criticism it is refreshing to hear the Thunderer state that "every Government is the better for it, so long as critics are honest and informed."

No one will find fault with the above statement of the Times. The Borden Government has never objected to just and honest criticism. In fact it has always welcomed it. But it certainly cannot be held by the Globe that criticism of the Borden Government has always been "honest and informed." Critics of the type of Carvell, Kyte and Geo. H. Graham are not in that class. They have thrive only on falsehood and misinformation. Their attacks on Sir Robert Borden and his cabinet colleagues have always been tinctured with personal malice and a low brand of political partisanship. That brand of criticism is not in the public interest.

Current Comment

Yes, in Canada we are still three thousand miles away from an appreciation of the realities of war. On with the dance!

One hundred and fifty aristocratic families of Spanish descent are said to govern Chili. It would not be safe to hand out any names to that bunch.

Women will vote at the next Provincial election. Equality of suffrage is no longer regarded as a radical and foolish proposal, says The Toronto News.

The point of view taken by The Montreal Courier is that Empire boomers are worth gaining and that there is more advertising obtained than who object, than those who accept.

Really these Toronto people who come to a big city like Montreal ought to be more careful. Another country meeting a friend who walked off with a gold watch, thirty dollars and a bunch of "rubies." Only Toronto "rubies" please, take warning. — Montreal Herald.

The doc show—one of the beasts brought in $6,000 the other day, we hear —has not been affected by the price of onions and potatoes. Though of course, none of these dogs is so pleasant as to eat onions or potatoes. But imagine the sensations of a common ordinary fox, starved out of New York's East Side, wandering into the show—and getting a bite of a $6,000 dog.—N.Y. Evening Sun.

Discussing the presence of Sir Robert Borden and other Canadian Ministers at the War Conference in London, The Detroit Journal declares that missing the vantage ground in the formation dictated by them corresponds.

Berlin comments also indicated that there will be a number of questions asked of officials in the Reichstag this week as to how this information was permitted to become known.

SEAMAN TRIES TO BURN U. S. TANK SHIP AT SEA

But Silver Shell Arrives Safely Narragansett, Too

NEW YORK, March 1—The American tank ships Silver Shell and Narragansett arrived in New York today from the war zone. The Silver Shell is a sister ship of the Gold Shell, the first American ship to reach the war zone after the break with Germany and now safe in Bordeaux.

The Silver Shell came from Cette and the Narragansett from London.

Capt. John Carlton of the Silver Shell reported that he had had much trouble with his crew. A discontented faction was constantly causing trouble. On the outward passage one of the crew attempted to set fire to the ship by pouring a bottle of gasoline on some clothing and putting a match to it. His effort was frustrated, but Capt. Carlton was in constant fear, because the vessel had a cargo of gasoline. This member of the crew is a naturalized American citizen who expressed sympathy for Germany. The captain will make charges against him.

Officer Denies Being Drunk

Captain J. E. Leary Before London Court-martial

LONDON, March 1—Captain J. E. Leary, Canadian Medicals, pleaded "not guilty" at court martial at Westminster on a charge of drunkenness. Capt. Trevor, Assistant Provost Marshall, said that on the night of February third he saw the accused rolling about the pavement outside of Pavilion Theatre. Accused fell, and after being helped up witness told him that he was in unfit condition. Leary replied that he did not care for the provost marshal. The walked up to Scotland Yard.

On the way witness told he would be arrested, witness asked to see a doctor.

Captain Bevis said accused walkerew without assistance, but at first witness asserted he was drunk. Major Dutch, Royal Medicals, who examined accused said that he had no doubt accused was drunk.

Capt. Leary on oath, said he took an aspirin substitute for cold and neuralgia. He was a medical man himself, and was not aware that this substitution contained stronger ingredients than aspirin itself. He had been working very hard.

Captain W. E. Bramwell said the accused had been treating himself with drugs. Several Canadian officers, including LtaCol. Watt, gave testimony regarding the conscientious work accused performed. The court's decision will be promulgated later.

The hyphenates are hereafter to be called Potsdamers.

The Poet's Corner

UNSELFISHNESS

Suppose life was only a battle for self,
And nobody pitied or gave,
And none of the dead who have journeyed ahead,
Neither scholar, nor soldier, nor knave,
Ever thought of the children that followed him on
Or toiled without claiming his fee,
Can't you picture today as you go on your way
What a horrible world it would be?

If nobody cared whether others survived,
Or whether or not they were glad;
If each of us here labored year after year
For only the gold to be had;
If we were but striving for raiment and food,
Then the beasts in the field that we see
Would be one with the plan that is fashioned for man
And a horrible world it would be.

But the joys that we know and the charms that we claim
Are needless somebody dared.
The dead have gone on leaving us to be glad
In the gardens they planted, and we Must leave something behind, for the future to find;
We must work for the ages to be.

ASBURY PARK, N.J. March 1.—Because it fell to his lot to escort Miss Lillian Taylor of West Point Pleasant to her home from the home of Mrs Randolph Hulse of the same place Lloyd White shot her. He was held under $1,000 bail.

White is 18 years old. Miss Taylor is about 30. She was in the habit of remaining in the Hulse home until after dark and wanted an escort home each evening. This duty fell to White, but last night, it would appear he avoided it and shot her from ambush. The bullet entered her right hip.

While made no denial of the shooting but said he did not mean that the bullet should hit Miss Taylor. He just wanted to frighten her so she would stary home before dark.

Farmers in Aroostook County Stop Marketing Their Supplies

BANGOR, Me., March 1.—Reports from various shipping points in Aroostook county indicate that in view of the general agitation over the price of potatoes few farmers are hauling supplies to the railroad. The demand is said to have temporarily lessened and nominal quotations are from $1 to $3 a barrel less than the highest prices recently received, but transactions at the reduced prices are small, the ruling price in most parts of the country being $8 a barrel.

See Moving Tanks For The First Time

Canadian Moving Pictures Will Show Them in Action at Courcelette

MOST DRAMATIC DAY

Frederick Palmer Said Nothing Like That Battle Had Ever Been Seen

One of the chief features about the film which the Canadian War Records Office has recently released for public exhibition in Great Britain and Canada is the intimate view they give of the "tanks," the newest invention added to the machinery of war by the British. The tanks accompanied the Canadians in their advance on September 15, when the Village of Courcelette was taken.

"The Canadian army in action and the advance of the tanks," the official moving picture of this action, gives an intimate view of these monsters, being the first moving pictures of the tanks yet issued to the public.

Ever since the news of the exploits of the "Oh I say," and the "Creme de Menthe" were published after the battle on September 15-16 at Flers, Courcelette and Martinpuich, the public has been wildly curious to see these new engines of war. For a time the pictures of the tanks were withheld by the British censor.

"On the morning of September 16," according to a German writer, "when the German outposts crept out of their dug-outs into the mist and stretched their necks to look for the English, their blood was chilled in their veins. Two mysterious monsters were crawling towards them from the craters. Stunned as if an earthquake had burst around them, they all rubbed their eyes, which were fascinated by the fabulous creatures. Their imaginations were still affected by the bombardment. It was no wonder, then, that panic-stricken got the better of these sorely tired men."

Suddenly tongues of fame leaped out of the iron caterpillar. Shells whistled over their heads, and the sound of guns filled the air. The mysterious creature had yielded its secret, and the men came back to their senses; their valor and their tenacity returned when the English infantry rolled up in waves behind the deadly coaches."

H. G. Wells' Description

One of the best descriptions of the tanks is that of H. G. Wells, the famous English novelist, who calls them "caterpillar forts." The London Daily Mirror paid $5000 for the right to reproduce a snapshot picture in that periodical.

History, of the tanks goes back to Winston Churchill's time at first lord of the admiralty. The idea was first put up to him and he adopted it.

The army authorities at that time however, urged that the land ships would be unsuitable for actual land construction and no action was taken.

His Majesty's land ships as now constructed, are gasoline motor vehicles when they exceed 50,000 pounds. Carriers 26 feet long, 10 feet wide and 13 feet high. They work on the "pedrail" system. The car itself stands on cogged wheels, and these wheels rest on cogged rails. The cars are armored all over to a thickness of one inch, and the wheels and pedrails are thus hidden from view. It is motored up to 120-horse power. Rifle and machine bullets rattle against its sides as harmless as hail, as do also the bombs from trench mortars.

Friday, September 16 last, when two of these tanks ambled into the Village of Flers with the British cheering behind, the Germans retreating like a demoralized mob, is described by Frederick Palmer, the American correspondent, as the most dramatic day in the history of the British army in France.

This is the battle in which the Canadians took a distinguished part, thus signifying to the world their arrival at the Somme. It is the Canadian part in this battle that is pictured in the film just released for Canada, by the Canadian War Records Office. And the picture includes the adventures of these new British "Behemoths—the tanks on their initial and victorious appearance in battle. In securing this picture for Canada, Messrs Jule and J. J. Allen of the Famous Players Film service and other enterprises, believe that they have a picture greater than "the battle of the Somme."

"The success of the battle of the Somme film was even greater than we expected," confessed Mr. J. J. Allen, vice-president of the Famous Players. "It broke all records to date. It surprised us. This Canadian picture on the other hand will break the records for attendance established by the battle of the Somme. It will surprise us if it doesn't. According to Lieut. G. H. Malin's own statement this is a better war picture than the Somme, and he made them both. Moreover this is a picture of the Canadians, and it is the first moving picture showing the tanks."

To be seen at Griffin's Opera House, Monday and Tuesday, March 12 and 13, matinee and evening. Don't fail to be there.

Delightful Evening

Employees of the Ritchie Company Enjoy Social Event

The Second Social Event of the season was held last evening when the Ritchie Co Employees and their wives, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Reid at their home on East Bridge Street.

A splendid and much enjoyed programme was arranged, consisting of victrola selections also readings, solos and quartettes, by various members of the staff. Following this programme, which was a most delightful one and of high order, dancing was commenced and a dainty luncheon was served. The evening drawing to a close shortly after the mid-night hour, by the singing of "They are Jolly Good Fellows." A hearty vote of thanks was tendered to Mr. and Mrs. Reid for their generous and much enjoyed hospitality.

BRINGING UP FATHER DREW A BIG CROWD

As was anticipated, this rattling comedy was presented before a capacity house last night, and the innumerable situations pulled off kept everyone in good humor. When Gus Hill, the author of "Bringing up Father," poured his mental ingredients into this political department of his varied productions, he must have been especially endowed with funny ideas, for a more laugh-inducing conglomeration of events has never been thrown at a local audience. There were times, be sure, when the actors tried to be real good, but like Rev. Sam Small and his inbred showfulness, funnyisms were bound to break out in spots. The costumes were appropriate even to luxurious extremes, the settings all that could be asked, while the choruses, solos, duets, and quartettes excelled. There was not a poor character in the cast—everyone was a star, some solar stars, while the general action was above reproach. We could not individualize the show of prominence; they were there with the goods—everyone of them—and the audience landed them to the roof. If "Bringing up Father in Politics" again vis its us we guarantee them a bumper house.

CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG COMBINES TEMPERAMENT WITH BUSINESS ABILITY

Whatever it is, "Artistic temperament" is universally conceded to be utterly opposed to that exercise of calm judgment and foresight which makes for master-of-fact business success. "I'm an artist and know nothing of sordid business affairs," is the formula in which one of these Heaven-born souls excuses himself for having needed to pay his board bill. There is a fallacy lurking around the corner of this idea and Clara Kimball Young, the widely known film star, who appears at Griffin's to-night, and Saturday matinee and night in "The Foolish Virgin," with special orchestra, is proof of it. To persons who have seen her run the gamut of emotional expressions in such of her great performances as "Trilby," and "Camille", the transition to the brisk, cool-headed Clara Kimball Young, business woman, would appear miraculous. The respect in which all the officers of the Clara Kimball Young film corporation hold the star's business judgment, is a splendid tribute to her sagacity. In the suite of executive offices occupying the entire floor of the new sky-scraper on Seventh Avenue at Forty-Ninth Street, New York City, the visitor may see in gold letters on the door of the office next to that of the President, the words "Miss Young, Vice-President," and almost any afternoon when there is a let-up in the work at the studio, the lovely star may be found at her desk, dictating letters, interviewing prospective candidates for positions in the company, or at the director's table giving clear-headed opinions as to the conduct of the Corporation's affairs.

"ALADDIN AND HIS LAMP" PLAYS A RUINS REVENGE-MENT AT GRIFFIN'S TUESDAY

The hundreds of theatre-goers who were turned away from Griffin's when "Aladdin and his Wonderful Lamp" was given here last time, will be given a return engagement by popular request at Griffin's next Tuesday night, March 6th, for one night only. Aladdin holds the enviable record of having played to capacity houses, and turned many away in each city included, on the first tour, and Mr. A. J. Small has returned a return engagement in each of his houses to accommodate the overflow, and to give those who wish to see it again an opportunity to do so. F. Stuart Whyte, the producer of Aladdin, was the first English manager to realize the value of Canada as a field for the better class of musical comedy productions, and the really phenominal success of Aladdin is ample evidence that his judgment was well founded.

BELGIUM ADMINISTERS HER OWN RELIEF COMMISSION

AND THE GOOD WORK WILL GO ON

While none wishes to belittle the noble work, Mr. Hoover and his compatriots have done in the administration of the Belgian Relief Commission, it is a fact that the actual sum of money and supplies furnished by the American nation, has been relatively small—little more than one-fifth of the whole.

Of the $250,000,000 spent in Relief work, America has contributed less than $9,000,000. The great bulk of this expenditure has been provided by the Allied Governments, and has been received its benefits. $30,000,000 has been provided by the public benevolence of the world, and with the exception of one great gift of $1,000,000, it has been the little rills of charity of the poor towards the poor.

America's greatest gift to the Belgian people has consisted of the admirable administration of the Relief Commission, under Mr. Hoover and other self-sacrificing American citizens. This organization is a monument to American business efficiency, and is working as smoothly and effectively to-day, as when the wheels of its orderly mechanism were under the direct control of the stars and stripes.

In building up this gigantic structure, which has a committee in every commune—nearly 4,000 in all—Mr. Hoover appointed an army of Belgian men and women, trained to carry out the work of the Commission, and under their guidance to-day, this great organization is taking care of the population with the same thoroughness as before.

To-day, in all the allied countries, and throughout the neutral nations of the world, the pledge is being renewed that "Belgium shall not starve." Let those who put their trust in British ships to deliver the supplies, submarines or not, show their faith by sending a contribution to the nearest Relief Committee, or direct to the Belgian Fund, 50 St. Peter Street, Montreal.

CHAPPED HANDS AND COLD SORES

Are your hands chapped, cracked, or sore? Have you cold cracked wrists from cold blood when the skin is drawn back? Have you a cold frost bite, or chilblains, which at times makes it impossible for you to go about your duties? If you Zam-Buk will give you relief, and will heal the injured parts of skin.

Miss B. Stright, of East Hansford, N.S., writes: "My hands were so badly chapped I was unable to put them in water. All remedies failed to heal until I tried Zam-Buk. Perseverance with this balm completely healed the sores."

Zam-Buk heals cuts, burns, bruises, sore scalds, piles, chapped hands, chilblains, cold sores, ulcers, and all skin injuries. All druggists and stores sell 50c. box.

If Food Disagrees Drink Hot Water

When food lies like lead in the stomach and you have that uncomfortable, distended feeling, it is because of insufficient blood supply to the stomach, combined with acid and food fermentation. In such cases try the plan now followed in many hospitals and advised by many eminent physicians of taking a teaspoonful of pure bisurated magnesia in half a glass of water, as hot as you can comfortably drink it. The hot water draws the blood to the stomach and the bisurated magnesia, as any physician can tell you, immediately neutralizes the acid and stops the food fermentation. Try this simple plan and you will be astonished at the immediate feeling of relief and comfort that always follows the restoration of the normal process of digestion. People who find it inconvenient at times to secure hot water and travelers who are frequently obliged to take hasty meals poorly prepared, should always take two or three fivegrain tablets of Bisurated Magnesia after meals to prevent fermentation and neutralize the acid in their stomach.

THE IRISH TONGUE

Pronunciation is Merely Purest English of an Earlier Age

Many persons seem to see, or to hear, rather, something to be amused at the soft Irish brogue. But a matter of fact, most of the words of the Irish "dialect" are not Irish at all, but the purest of English—English a little antiquated, it is true, but nevertheless, the real thing. The ears of Milton, Dryden, Spencer and Chaucer would not have been surprised at the Irishman speak of "a rough say" or "a clane shirt." At the court of good Queen Bess the cultured English gentleman carefully garnished his conversation with "goodly" rings and brave "swounds" and bored his friends with accounts of the smart sayings of the "childre" at "hoom." This was the English originally imported into Ireland by the cultured Irish, and they have found it good enough to preserve.

How To Get Strong

A Simple Remedy

Whatever the cause, we want to say to every person who needs strength, you need Vinol as it is the most efficient strength creator we have in our store. Here is proof from Dorchester, Mass.:—

"I don't know what we would do without Vinol in our family. I was weak, nervous and run-down as the result of an operation, and Vinol restored my strength. Then Grandmother had a nervous breakdown. And Vinol built her up and restored her health and strength after everything else had failed. We have used Vinol for 12 years in our family, and would not be without it in the house." Myrtle L. Healy, Dorchester, Mass.

We believe in Vinol because we know it is a great strength creator—due to the beef and cod liver peptones, iron and manganese peptonates and glycerophosphates, all blended in a pure medicinal wine, so we always return the purchase money if Vinol fails to benefit those who buy it. RITCHIES

MARCH

The First Spring Month

Finds Us Prepared for the Largest Season's Business in the History of the Ritchie Store!

THAT MAY SEEM a rather far-reaching assertion, but it is exactly what every department in our store has done. For weeks past every day has seen many boxes and bales brought to the Ritchie Store—opened, marked and the goods placed in their various departments in readiness for a heavy Spring and Summer's selling.

GOODS OF A HIGH STANDARD OF QUALITY at prices within reason have been exceedingly hard to obtain, but by scouring the markets, both home and foreign, our buyers have gathered together a magnificent assemblage of the very latest and most dependable merchandise at prices much below what you had thought possible.

MANY OF THE STAPLE LINES, such a Linens, Cottons, Woollens, Hosiery, Gloves, Underwear, Cotton Blankets, Rugs, etc., were bought many months ago previous to the recent increases in prices on this class of goods, and while present stocks last you are assured of exceptionally low prices on any of these lines.

IN THE LADIES' READY-TO-WEAR SECTION our Spring stocks of Ladies' and Misses' Suits, Coats, Dresses, Blouses, Skirts, etc., is rapidly nearing completion. In fact, many of the New York Suits are now to be seen, and once you see and price them you will be quickly convinced that for Styles, Qualities and Reasonable Prices our showing is unexcelled.

MISS THOMPSON, of the Millinery Department, has just returned from New York and other style centres where she went in quest of the latest novelties in Millinery for Spring 1917 wearing. That she was successful in gathering together a charming collection of new ideas is evidenced by the large showing of Early Spring Millinery now displayed on the second floor and in the show windows.

LARGE SHIPMENTS of pretty New Silks in all the much-wanted qualities and patterns and the latest weaves in Spring Dress Goods have just come to hand and are ready for your early inspection at the Dress Goods Counter.

THE HOME FURNISHING DEPARTMENT on the third floor was never better prepared to cater to your requirements for the Home Beautiful. Dozens of pretty new patterns in American Chintz and Cretonnes are here for your choosing, as well as the more expensive Silk and Velour Draperies. When it is Draperies or Floor Coverings, think of Ritchie's this Spring season.

Some morning while out looking for a dealer to sell you a ton of coal you may see the first robin.

Foster disappeared after the accident before he gave his name or his version of the fatality to the proper authorities. He was arrested in Belleville, and charged, when he appeared in the Police Court, with failing to return to the scene of an accident.

Mr. W. K. Murphy, jun., his counsel, would not allow him to give his evidence because the Crown had refused to grant bail.

The jury adhered to the evidence bringing in a verdict of accidental death, with a rider censuring Foster for his failure to inform the proper authorities of the accident.

HUNS EVICTED BY RESERVES

Stormed Russian First Line Trenches, But Were Later Driven Out

Special to The Intelligencer.

PETROGRAD, March 3.—German forces yesterday stormed the Russian first line of trenches in the region of Stavonlin in Galicia, says an official statement issued today by the Russian War Department, but later were evicted by a counter attack of Russian reserves.

$52.00 For a Barrel of Sugar

NEW YORK, March 2.—Because of the submarine fish a barrel of sugar shipped in haste to reach Mrs. Henry Clews, Jr., in Paris, which cost $24 at the refinery, will cost $28 more in shipping charges and insurance before it gets to her.

Owing to the scarcity of sugar for civilians in France, and the poor grade sold, Mrs. Clews had a barrel forwarded from New York by express. It weighs nearly 400 pounds, and was purchased at nearly six cents a pound. on forwarding Mrs. Clews must pay $21 and $7 marine insurance to guarantee the safe arrival of the barrel in France. The total cost of the shipment will be $28 or approximately 13 cents a pound. Mrs. Clews was formerly the wife of Robert Goelet, and before her marriage to him was Miss Elsie Hicks of Philadelphia. She has been living in Paris for over a year.

NUMBER OF JAIL INHABITANTS INCREASED

28 of 71 Prisoners are Held For Intoxication

OTTAWA, Mar. 3—In the County of Carleton Jail figures can be employed as a criterion prohibition has not improved local conditions. During the twenty-eight days of this month the inconvictions in the county jail have amounted to 71, and of this number 28 were imprisoned for public intoxication. There were nine women placed in the jail.

During the month of January of this year there were 72 admissions to the jail, and for the same period in 1916 there were 61 confined.

Counting the figures for 1916 this crime rate in Ottawa during this month has gained alarmingly. There was a total of 1,000 prisoners in the county institution last February, and of this number 11 were confined for drunkenness. Six of the 11 prisoners were women. This month there are 71 prisoners, 28 being drunks and nine women.

ALLIES ARE GIVEN SETBACK

Violent Engagements on the Ancre Result in Losses For The British

Special to The Intelligencer.

BERLIN, March 3.—The War Office announces strong British reconnoitering detachment attempts to enter the German trenches near Hulluch and Lievin, and smaller detachments made similar attempts at other points on the Artois front, but were everywhere repulsed. On both banks of the Ancre there were violent infantry engagements, in which the British losses were severe, including sixty prisoners and eight machine guns.

GERMANY'S POSITION REGARDING THE INTRIGUE WITH MEXICO

Special to The Intelligencer

LONDON, March 3—Reuter despatch from Amsterdam, apparently forwarded from Berlin by Wolf's Bureau: The Semi-official German News Agency says Foreign Secretary Zimmerman's instructions to the German Ambassador in Mexico are admitted in Berlin to have been correctly quoted.

Anticipating the possibility of a conflict with the United States over the declaration of unrestricted warfare, it was not only the right but the duty of the German Government to take precaution in order to balance, if possible the advantage to our foes of the new enemy. Therefore instructions were given the German Minister at Mexico in the middle of January, to offer the Mexican Government an Alliance and arrange further details. How American Government received the information is not known, but it must have been through treachery, and treachery committed on American territory. Another despatch says the affair probably lead to Zimmermann's retirement, and the end of Von Bernstorff's career as diplomat.

CANADIAN PREMIER WAS PRESENT AT WAR COUNCIL

Australian Premier Expected to Arrive in Time to Attend Imperial Conference

LONDON, March 2—Special—The Canadian and New Zealand Ministers were at yesterday's War Council, Canada being represented by Premier Borden and Sir George Perley, and New Zealand by Premier Massey and ex-Premier Sir Joseph Ward. I am informed that the latest developments in the Australian situation is that electoral arrangements will give the coalition an extra vote. If so Premier Hughes will stave off a general election and be able to get away forthwith, being accompanied by Sir John Forrest, while the Right Hon. Joseph Cook will carry on the coalition.

Gen. Smuts is expected from South Africa, and Britain is prepared to license him as cordially as it did Louis Botha a decade ago.

Highway Is Now Assured

Assurances of Its Construction as Soon as War Ends

KINGSTON, March 2.—The permanent highway linking Toronto with the eastern boundary of Ontario and passing through Kingston via a lake shore route, is a nearer a reality than ever before, and all depends on the termination of the war. This was the information which the delegation from the Good Road's Association including Hon. Hugh Dillon and T. A. Fair of this city, received from Premier Hearst and Hon. Finlay Macdiarmid, at Toronto yesterday. The eastern delegation was headed by Anthony Rankin, M.L.A.

Hon. Finlay Macdiarmid stated that the subject of highways linking the western and eastern counties had been under consideration for some time, and he believed people were great-ly interested in such schemes.

Premier Hearst said that such a road would help production in a wide sense, but that the supreme question now was in winning the war The manhood must be conserved and also our wealth, but the plans will be so far advanced regarding highways, by the time the war is over, that work could be started at once.

The premier's assurance was met with loud applause by the delegation who feel that their efforts have at last borne fruit. The construction of such a highway would mean a big thing for Kingston. It would attract American tourists to the city by way of the islands and the Canol and would prove a big boon to local business.

$100 FOR SIGHTING SUB

LONDON, March 2—American and others crossing the Atlantic can earn a hundred dollars by sighting a submarine. Sir A. F. Yarrow, the famous Clasgow shipbuilder, writes to the Times that in order to encourage everyone to keep a sharp lookout he has offered a reward of £20 up to an expenditure of £10,000 to every officer of a commercial vessel who first draws the captain's attention to an enemy submarine. The reward will be paid on the certificate of the captain, giving the name of the person who first drawn his attention to the submarine. The statement is to be signed by the captain, saying the submarine was actually sighted. Application should be forwarded through the owners to Sir Thomas L. Devitt, chairman of Lloyd's Register Shipping, 71 Fenchurch street, London, who has consented to make the awards.

SUCCESSFUL IN ATTACKS

Special to The Intelligencer

PARIS, March 3.—This afternoon, war statement reads: During the night our reconnitering parties carried out several successful surprise attacks against trenches near Moulins Sour Tourtvent east Hill 304, Verdun region and in Apremont forest. We took prisoners and munitions.

Crimean Veteran Has Passed Away

Was Prisoner of Russians and Received Only Very Scanty Fare

KINGSTON, March 2—There passed away at the General Hospital this morning Samuel E. Costello at the age of 85. The deceased had a sharp attack of pneumonia which took him away.

Mr. Costello was one of the few remaining now of the Veterans of the Crimea and he used to recall his hardships during that trying period. He was for a time prisoner under the Russians and managed to revive under very scanty fare. After the war he made his home in Canada and is survived by his widow at 135 Bagot street. He was for years a member of Calvary Presbyterian Church where a funeral service will be held tomorrow at 2.30 o'clock.

Allied Camp At Saloniki Shelled

Little Material Damage Was Done and One Hostile Machine Brought Down

SALONIKI March 2—The Germans are making aeroplane raids on a larger scale. During the last few days Janesh and Karesuli villages near the front were bombed. Yesterday 15 aeroplanes appeared over the allied camps at Salonihi and dropped bombs. This was the first bombing raid here in two months. The material damage seems to have been one motor lorry burned. The raiders paid toll for their exploit, one of their machines being brought down by an allied aeroman on the way back to the frontier, and the German officer and pilot were taken prisoner.

To Discipline The Druggists

At Any Time instead of at The Annual Meeting—Act is introduced

TORONTO, March 2—The disciplining by the Pharmacy Council of druggists who break the Pharmacy Act is proposed in a bill introduced in the Legislature by Dr. Martin, East Lambton. The bill proposes thus the council has authority to discipline only at its regular meeting in August. The military authorities in some sections complained to the council that some druggists are selling cocaine to the soldiers without authority of doctors' certificates. The amendment asks the council be given authority to discipline at any time that a case is made out, and make disciplines retroactive. There are other minor amendments asked for also.

NO SEPARATE ACTION TAKEN

President Wilson Will Not Assume Initiate Without Consent of Congress

Special To The Intelligencer.

WASHINGTON, March 3.—President Wilson has no intention of taking action that would bring war with Germany, unless Congress is summoned in extra session. This was communicated to the Senate leaders today by representatives of President Wilson, who takes the position that if no extraordinary crisis arises it will not be necessary to call an extra session before late in the spring, and then only to pass any appropriation bills which may fail at the present session.

FELL DOWN THE STAIRS

Speaker's Mother-in-law injured at Her Home

TORONTO, March 2—Falling down the stairs of her home on Rosborough street this morning about 5 o'clock, Mrs. Bradshaw, mother-in-law of Hon. Dr. Jamieson, Speaker of the Legislature, was injured internally.

Mrs. Bradshaw, who is 82 years of age, got up some time during the night, and it is thought while walking round approached the head of the stairs without knowing.

When found she was taken to her room, and on examination it was found she had no broken bones, but it is feared she may be internally injured. So heavy was her fall that she broke the rails of the staircase. Mrs. Jamieson was at the house early this morning with the Speaker to see how seriously Mrs. Bradshaw was injured.

LONDON, March 3.—A Copenhagen despatch says a new Zeppelin dirigible was destroyed with the entire crew, while on a speed trials Monday night caught fire and was destroyed with the entire crew.

DEMAND CONSCRIPTION OF WEALTH FIRST

The United Farmers Protest Against the Conscription of Men Before Wealth

TORONTO, March 2—Two resolutions were unanimously passed by the convention of the United Farmers of Ontario yesterday afternoon. One of the "most solemnly" protested against conscription of men for battle while wealth is left behind, "in a glaring injustice," it continued, "that Canadian mothers should be called on to surrender their boys while plutocrats fattened on special privileges and war orders."

TRENTON I. O. D. E.

TRENTON, March 3—At a recent meeting of the Governor Simcoe Chapter of the I.O.D.E. here $1,000 was voted to the Red Cross Fund; St. Dunstan's Hospital, England, $100; the British navy, $100; Belgian Relief work, $50; Maple Leaf of the 1st District Ammunition Column, for comforts for his unit, $75, and $75 to Nurse Beatrice Armstrong for clinical thermometers.

FRIDAY AN OFF DAY FOR SUBS.

LONDON, March 3.—Special—For the second day since the beginning of the German unrestricted submarine campaign, reports of any vessels arriving here sunk were received on Friday. The final period of grace for sailing ships in the Atlantic Ocean expired on March 1, says an announcement by the German Admiralty, which adds that from March 2 no special warning will be given any boats by submarines.

CHINA HAS DECIDED TO JOIN THE ALLIES

Preliminary Negotiations Now in Progress at Pekin—To Declare War on The Teutons

PEKIN, March 3.—Special—Wednesday the allied Ministers presented a memorial to the Chinese Government expressing sympathy with the attitude taken by China in regard to Germany, and promising favorable consideration of the questions of suspension during the war of the Boxer indemnity payments and revision of the tarif in the event of China's effectively severing relations with Germany and Austria. Delay in the expected development in German-American relations and the absence hitherto of any collective intimation on the part of the allies that China would be welcome among them, have caused the Chinese to hesitate regarding future action. The Germans, it is needless to say, have been doing their utmost among the adherents of the army to establish a party opposed to the rupture. The timely action of the allied Ministers seems likely to have the desired result.

ACTUAL LOSS FROM SUBS

Associated Press Gives Figures During First Month of Warfare

Special to The Intelligencer.

LONDON, March 3.—Absolutely reliable figures are in possession of the Associated Press, to show that Germany during the first month of its unrestricted submarine warfare sank only 490,000 tons of merchant ships instead of one million, which her contract called for. British authorities expected, under conditions of ceaseless submarine warfare, to lose 350,000 tons.

185,000 Slaves In So. Africa

To be Given Freedom by British Anti-Slavery Appeal is Sanctioned

LONDON, March 3.—Special.—The Anti-Slavery Aborigines Protection Society has issued an appeal to the Secretary of State for the Colonies to declare by proclamation the freedom of 185,000 slaves in the territory known recently as the German East African Protestorate. The publication of the appeal is sanctioned by the Colonial Office.

BOY SCOUTS TO TILL PLOTS

CHATHAM, March 3.—Special—Plans have been laid for the Boy Scouts of Chatham to cultivate garden plots this year. Badges are to be awarded to those who are proficient. This plan will work in co-operation with the J. O. D. E. plan. The Board of Trade is taking an interest in the scheme and will offer prizes for the best gardens in the city this year. Every effort is being made to induce greater production.

URGE UNITED STATES TO SUBDUE MENACE

NEW YORK, March 2—In a half-page advertisement in New York newspapers, the American Rights League urges that Americans telegraph their Congressmen "urging that America shall do her part in subduing the German menace to civilization."

The statement, preceding the appeal, declares that "Germany is committing acts of war against the American people."

Next Move Is To Register The Women

Ottawa Ladies Are Too Busy For Jubilation

OTTAWA, March 1.—"Now to get the women voters registered!"

The time for jubilation among the Ottawa suffragists over the passage of Mr. J. W. Johnston's bill for the enfranchisement of women in the Province of Ontario was but of a momentary's duration.

With their hands full of war work, there is no time for celebration, and a broad smile is the only badge of victory worn by the veteran fighters for the ballot.

They are busy turning their energies into a new channel, to see that the novices of citizenship in its political sense are registered before the next election and listed with the men as provincial voters.

"Our hats are in the air over the victory, of course," declared Mrs. W. B. Bartram, president of the local suffrage organization, "but we are too busy to make much noise in the way of celebration.

"Our first move will be to get the women registered as voters, and I look to the formation of a federatffli of franchise workers who will take up the work of educating women for citizenship. We must be prepared to use the ballot intelligently, and women have a great deal to learn generally in the way of civics and government.

Remain Independent

"Do I think that women will affiliate with the present political parties to form a women's party?

"I hope not. Women must remain independent. I believe, to accomplish what we look to suffrage to bring Ontario, it must be free to give the best possible men our support, and intelligent enough to know the best possible men for the offices in council."

Mrs. Adam Shortt, president of the Local Council, expressed her joy over the passage of the bill, and hopes that the bill for municipal franchise will also has now had its second reading could be granted as quickly.

"It is a boon to every woman in Ontario if she only would recognize it," declared Mrs. E. C. Connell, a woman prominent among the business women of the Capital and a prominent worker for suffrage.

Been To All Women

"Time will pass the woman by if her horizon is no wider than her door step," she declared, "and although I am a business woman and know that it will surely be beneficial to the women to work in the business world, I think it will mean most to the mothers."

Tweed Man Dies Suddenly

TWEED, March 3.—Special—John W. Bell, a prominent citizen, died suddenly today." He was in his usual good health and came down to his office for his mail at 1.30 and was found at 3.30 lying unconscious on the floor in his store by a customer. He never regained consciousness and died at 6.30. He was 53 years of age and a lifelong resident of Tweed. He leaves a wife and, two children to mourn his death. Mr. Shaw was, two years ago, Reeve of the village and a member of the County Council.

Late Local News

Extended Thanks

Belleville, Ont., March 3, 1917.
From Officer Commanding,
235th O. S. Battalion, C.E.F.
To The Editor, of The Intelligencer.

Sir:—Will you allow me through your valuable columns to extend to the citizens of Belleville, Ont., our most grateful thanks for the many, many kindnesses which have been showered upon us by all classes since we came among you.

Particularly I desire to thank the Mayor and Council, the City Clergy, the various Patriotic Societies, the ladies of the Khaki Club, and the gentlemen of the press.

All have done everything that was possible to promote our happiness and make our stay here both pleasant and profitable.

I extend to all our sincere wish that their future may be good, that fortune may smile upon them, and the hope that in happier times we may be able once more to see our friends of Belleville and to celebrate and enjoy with them the benefits of a successful peace.

With-many thanks to you, dear sir for your many personal acts of kindness, believe me,

Your obedient servant,
S. B. SCORRELL, Lt.-Col.
On behalf of the officers, non-commissioned officers and men of the 235th O'S. Battalion, C. E. F.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

THOSE CRAIRS AGAIN

March 2, 1917.

Dear Sir,—Information says Alderman Smith bought chairs for the City Hall for $135.00 less 5% discount—is $132.30, the cost of freight and cartage to market square about $3.70. In all costing about $145.00. An account was paid for these chairs, $235.00. Who got the $82.30 profit? No one has answered. Why is not the apparently unwarranted profit given to the Women's Christian Association or the Patriotic Fund?

Ex-Alderman Duckworth has failed to show where $30.00 was saved, and Ald. St. Charles has failed to show where $35.00 was saved, as they stated.

Yours,
READER.

Editor's Note:—The press has been open to all sides of many communications upon the above subject, and are really getting tired with the repetitions. Would it not be well for those interested to fight it out among themselves in the open Council, where we are sure the Mayor and Aldermen would give Mr. Tickell an audience and opportunity to voice his opinion and explain his position before the City Fathers.

Usually one letter and one reply is sufficient on any one subject; further letters making it burdensome to the press.

Telephone Officers

Managers of the Bell Telephone Company from Districts No. 7, 8 and 18 which division goes as far as Kingston and extends to Sault Ste. Marie, Sct in conference in Belleville yesterday. The meeting was held in the city building and practically the business session being entered upon, Mayor Ketcheson, on behalf of the city extended a hearty welcome to all present, expressing the wish that their meeting in the city would be both profitable and pleasant. There were upwards of 40 present.

The head office of the company was represented by Mr. D. A. MacFarlane, of Montreal, Commercial Manager of the Company.

The staff department was represented by Mr. C. S. Hudson and Mr. W. R. Stewart, travelling auditors for the Company.

During the sessions held, matters appertaining to the routine and other business were discussed with profit. All present were delighted with the hospitality extended towards them by Mr. H. B. Stock, the genial and energetic manager of the Belleville branch of the Company.

After all, our neighbors in the United States are having peace at any price

RUBBER COMPANY OFFICIALS CHANGE

L. D. Brown of Akron, Succeeds Treasurer W. A. Means, who Becomes Second Vice President.

NEW YORK, N.Y.—Feb. 28.—The B. F. Goodrich Company announced today an important change in the personnel of its officials, when Isaac L. D. Brown, who has been cashier of the First-Second National Bank of Akron, into the office of Treasurer, succeeding W. A. Means.

Mr. Means will be elected Second Vice President of the Goodrich Company at the annual meeting, March 14th, and at the same time, Mr. Brown's appointment as Treasurer, will be confirmed.

For almost twenty years Mr. Means has been associated with the Goodrich Company, and during that time he has seen it grow from a comparatively small plant with a $2,000,000 capitalization, to the ninety million dollar institution of to-day, which is rated as "the largest of its kind in the world. For the past seven years Mr. Means has occupied the office of Treasurer. This experience has qualified Mr. Means for the new responsibilities which the Second Vice President is obliged to handle, for it has been during the past twenty years that the rubber business has seen the greatest growth and developments.

LEAVES FOR OVERSEAS

Captain J. E. McCorkell, who has been home from overseas on a two months' leave of absence, returns to France in about a week. An effort had been made by Colonel Scobell of the 235th Battalion to secure his transfer for service here, to which end Ottawa was communicated with and consented, but Mr. Mead was also willing, but when the question was put up to France, a positive refusal was returned, on account of his being needed there. As will be remembered, Captain McCorkell left here with the 39th Battalion as Lieutenant, in June, 1915, and was promoted on the field. Many friends will wish him success and a safe return home.

CURLING

On Monday night at Kingston, two senior and two junior rinks from the Belleville Curling Club will play similar rinks from Brockville. Belleville won out in this district for the district championship cup, and Brockville won out in the district it is situated in. The match, no doubt, will be an interesting one.

DISTRICT DEPUTY ENTERTAINED

Mayor Ketchison, who last night as D.D.G.M. of the Masonic fraternity for this district, visited Consecon Lodge and was most cordially received, as were also the Belleville brethren who accompanied him. After the lodge business had been completed the visitors were royally entertained. A large number of members were present at the lodge.

Military News

Headed by the band, the 235th Battalion had a march-out this morning, being in command if Lt.-Col. Scobell. The men presented a fine soldierly appearance.

All recruits now signing up at Tweed will have to appear before a medical board at Belleville before they are taken on.

Capt. Wallace accompanied by Sgt. Dafoe and Mr. J. M. Dafoe, made a recruiting trip through the north country, holding meetings at Cloyne, Plevna, Vennacher and Denbigh. Considerable interest was aroused and good results are looked for.

WARDEN OF HASTINGS PRESENTED WITH CANE

County Councillors and Officials do Honor to Their Chief

Mr. Peter McLaren was the recipient of the gift of a gold-headed cane suitably engraved presented, to him by the County Councillors and officials of Hastings County for 1917, while in Toronto last week.

The presentation was made on February 28th, when the members of the Council were present at the Ontario Goods Roads Association convention.

Mr. W. H. Nugent, of Wollaston, made the presentation in excellent style assisted by Mr. Chas. Ketcheson, Reeve of Sidney.

Mr. McLaren thanked his colleagues and officials for the beautiful token of their loyalty and esteem, and assured them that it would always be cherished as a gift of love with the memory of pleasant relations. All the members present spoke in a praiseworthy manner of the efficient way in which the popular Warden was carrying on the work of 1917.

THE Standard Bank of Canada

Wednesday, 28th February, 1917

The 42nd Annual Meeting of the shareholders of the Standard Bank of Canada, was held at the Head Office of the Bank, 25 King Street West, Toronto, on Wednesday, the 28th February, 1917, at 12 o'clock noon.

A large number of shareholders was present.

On motion, the President, Mr. W. F. Cowan, took the chair, and Mr. E. A. Bog, Chief Inspector, who acted as Secretary of the meeting, read the report:

Your Directors, in presenting to the Shareholders the Forty-second Annual Report of the affairs of the Bank for the year ending 31st January, 1917, have pleasure in stating that the funds have been well employed during the past twelve months and a satisfactory increase is shown in all departments.

The Net Profits, after making provision for bad and doubtful debts, rebate of interest on unmatured bills under discount, exchange, cost of management, etc., amount to $580,393.10, being at the rate of 13.96% on the average paid-up capital of the Bank for the year. This amount together with the balance forward from last year and the sum of $283,242.14 for premium on new stock issued during the year, makes the sum of $975,119.13.

This has been appropriated as follows:—

Four quarterly dividends at the rate of 12% per annum	$336,839.61
Contributed to Officers' Pension Fund	20,000.00
Contributed to Patriotic and kindred objects	50,000.00
War Tax on Bank Note Circulation to 31st December, 1916	30,483.76
Transferred to Reserve Fund from Premium on New Stock	283,242.14
Balance of Profit and Loss Account carried forward	253,593.62
	$975,119.13

During the year Branches of the Bank have been opened at Burdett, Coalhurst, New Dayton, and Travers, Alberta; Richles, Sask.; and Schreiber, Ont. The Branch at Goodwater, Sask., was closed.

The usual inspection of the Head Office and Branches has been made and the staff have faithfully and efficiently discharged their duties.

W. F. COWAN,
President.

AUDITOR'S REPORT TO THE SHAREHOLDERS.

I have compared the above Balance Sheet with the books and accounts at the chief office of The Standard Bank of Canada, and with the certified returns received from the branches, and after checking the cash and verifying the securities at the chief office and certain of the principal branches on January 31st, 1917, I certify that in my opinion such Balance Sheet exhibits a true and correct view of the state of the Bank's affairs according to the best of my information, the explanations given to me, and as shown by the books of the Bank.

In addition to the examination mentioned, the cash and securities at the chief office and certain of the principal branches were checked and verified by me at another time during the year, and found to be in accord with the books of the Bank.

All information and explanations required have been given to me, and all transactions of the Bank which have come under my notice have, in my opinion, been within the powers of the Bank.

G. T. CLARKSON, F.C.A.,
of Clarkson, Gordon & Dilworth, Toronto, Canada.

Toronto, February 15th, 1917.

The usual motions were passed, and the scrutineers appointed reported the following gentlemen elected as Directors for the ensuing year: Mr. W. F. Cowan, Mr. Wellington Francis, K.C., Mr. W. J. Allen, Mr. F. W. Baker, M.P., Mr. E. Hendrie, Mr. T. H. McMillan, Mr. G. P. Scholfield, and Mr. T. H. Wood. At a subsequent meeting of the Directors, Mr. W. F. Cowan was re-elected President, and Mr. Wellington Francis, K.C., Vice-President.

Aylmers Heiress Will Continue With Her Work

Wouldn't Know What Else to do But She Can Help Father With the 17 Millions

OTTAWA, March 1.—Miss Albina Cormier, an employe of the Bell Telephone Co. at Aylmer, has more money than she knows what to do with it, yet 15 cents now looked far bigger. Miss Albina has fallen heir to property in Quebec, of which her share is approximately $17,000,000. Mr. Joseph Villeneuve, of 764 Echo Drive, who shares in the good fortune, it is understood.

The thirteen cents in Albina Cormier's first pay envelope looked bigger to her sixteen-year-old heart than the $17,000,000 legacy which makes her one of the wealthiest women in Canada today.

Albina, now a frail woman of 29, is Aylmer's Cinderella, the daughter of Ovida Cormier, and the centre of interest in the Quebec village since her aunt, Sister St. Joseph, of the Grey Nuns, whose will has just been probated, made her heiress of the fortune beyond the wildest dreams of the most extravagant fairy tale in memory.

Albina's interest in spring hats has abated since her fingers trembled over that first envelope, and inflammatory rheumatism has forced her to restrict her ambitions to a radius that lags in expanding with the pressure of millions of ready money, but the village itself has risen to the occasion.

Village Equal to Occasion

Her fortune is reflected in every face and shop window, the place is grizzled with prosperity already, and the stone house on the main street where Albina bowed with her aunt has been made a show piece over-night.

For thirteen years she has worked in the stuffy little office of the Bell Telephone Co., observed in the fume of cut plug.

Albina Is Fuzzled

A six o'clock call for a sleepy commercial traveller, or a fire, marked a red letter day in an existence made up largely of sound waves, grouchy megaphiles, and berating housewives, whose butchers didn't answer.

Now a fairy godmother from another world, in the habit of a nun, beckons her into an affluence so great that even her most frivolous fancy flounders.

She could finance the war of the Empire for a week, and yet for the life of her on the minute she can't plan a spring hat that would cost more than $5.

She May Travel, But—

She thinks maybe when the war is over she'll go around the world; but on second thought there are some places that are a long way from Aylmer, and she's a homebody, and never lived anywhere else. She hasn't any interest in fairy princes or glass slippers.

A silk kimono not too fussy might hold some charm for her, but you know from the way she snuggled into the snuggly folds of her gray sweater that crown jewels and court robes would be nothing but a bother.

Won't Stop Work

Albina would like some health, that is all she asks for, but the access to all these millions does not seem to relieve the twinge of rheumatism. Tired out weakness after an operation is no basis for the exhilaration that heiresses are supposed to feel.

"I don't think I'll stop work," she confided. "I wouldn't know what to do with myself, really I wouldn't."

The idea of a $17,000,000 heiress plugging in calls for the morning meat order held no incongruity for her.

"Don't you think it will be fun to buy your spring hat without looking at the price mark, and wear $15 shoes with a clear conscience?" queried the envious interviewer.

"Why, I never think much about clothes," responded the heiress, pulling her little blue chambray collar closer about her throat. "My sisters who work in Ottawa are the fashionable ones of the family. Aline and Regina live with Uncle Joe Villeneuve on Echo Drive, you see, and they have all the style.

Enjoy Helping Father

"I'll enjoy sharing my fortune with them and father. Father has always worked so hard, and they love pretty clothes. I guess there'll be enough, all right.

"They say that the land in Quebec is worth $70,000,000, and there are two companies wanting to buy it for the copper mines on it. Our lawyer is in Montreal now to meet the representatives of one company—but I don't know much about it."

May Get Photograph

Miss Albina didn't think much of the idea that she should have her picture in the paper. Furthermore, she didn't have a picture.

"Maybe when I get the money," she pouted, "I'll sell up a bit and have a picture taken, and if they are good I'll give you one to run in the paper."

"Until then, I don't think I'd better say much more about it."

Wearing Rubbers during the Spring Months of Slush and Wet Saves more than their Cost and Protects the Health as well

It is only recently that the high retail prices of most commodities are being felt. The higher cost of living as a result of the war, is now manifesting itself in EVERY walk of life.

Shoe dealers throughout Canada must get more for our rubbers than during the past few years. The cost of production has been steadily increasing and the dealer's expense of doing business is greater.

To-day crude rubber is fully one-third higher than before the war, and doubled freights, abnormal insurance and the war tax have made it more expensive laid down at our factories. Other materials, including cottons, cashmerettes, jersey, linings, dyes and chemicals cost on an average 75% more. Labor, too, is away up, and so scarce that there is difficulty in keeping up a normal production.

The increased prices of our rubbers—small indeed compared with other articles of wearing apparel and of food—have been made imperative by the steadily growing cost of manufacturing.

As the quality and reputation of our brands of rubbers must be maintained at all costs, we have been compelled to advance our prices. So when your dealer asks you a little more, it does not mean that either he or the manufacturer is taking advantage of war time, but rather that both are reluctantly yielding to necessity.

In proportion to the cost of other necessities, the prices of our brands of rubbers are reasonable—and more economical when compared with the far greater increases in shoe prices. The regular use of rubbers saves many times their slightly increased cost, and protects the health as well.

$25,000 In Gold On Frederik

Amount One Lady in Party Had—Bernstorff Thanks British Navy Men

HALIFAX, N.S., Feb. 25—Although no information has been given out by the naval authorities in charge of the examination of the Frederik VIII., which sailed for Copenhagen last night it was learned that the navy officers in charge performed their duties so diplomatically that Count Von Bernstorff, the dismissed Ambassador to the United States, personally thanked them for the courteous way in which they had performed a delicate task.

When the steamer backed away from the wharf last night the passengers and members of the diplomatic corps came out on deck and gave three cheers for those who had been, in a sense, their guardians during the stay in Halifax.

$25,000 in Gold

Probably the most important discovery made was twenty-five thousand dollars in gold, which was reported to have been taken for the Countess Matachka, of Washington who is the daughter of a prominent American distiller. The confiscation of this and smaller amounts in other cases caused much indignation, even when the absolute necessity to the measures taken was explained to them.

But on the whole, little complaint was made and Charlie Wiegand, the Hearst correspondent who was one of the passengers, is reported to have stated before the Frederik sailed that the examination had been conducted in a manner which reflected credit upon the naval authorities and all concerned.

Countess All Right

Reports that Countess von Bernstorff was indisposed during the stay here are pronounced incorrect. The lady was in the best of health throughout, and showed no evidence of undergoing any strain. Every courtesy and consideration possible in the circumstances was shown to the Count and Countess.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE FOR ONTARIO

Woman suffrage for Ontario has arrived, or nearly so. We imagine there is little reason to doubt that a substantial majority of the men of Ontario approve. The petitions which have been going to the Government, the attitude of the Legislature, the tone of the Ontario press, all point one way. The move has not likely come too soon.

Premier Hearst put the case at its strongest when he intimated that the story of the war showed such a spirit and performance on the part of the women that men need not hesitate to give them a right to take a full part in public affairs.

BONE DRY.

The "bone-dry" movement that has lately started under way in the prohibition struggle seems to please the organizations both of the liquor interests and of the prohibition interests, says The New York Sun. It is likely that many of the anti-rum crusaders have been hoping and praying for and it receives the ready indorsement of the New York State Wholesale Liquor Dealers' Association, on the ground that it will call the bluff of the people who expect to have prohibition and go on drinking.

It is so unusual to find the two sides of the liquor question in accord that we suspect one side or the other of being sadly taken in or else of feigning deceitfully in the present case. Possibly the liquor dealers are only pretending to enjoy the prospect of being cut off at least temporarily from the present lucrative trade with fourteen virtuous but thirsty States; possibly the prohibition interests do not welcome so warmly as might seem the prospect of having the convert States actually shut off from all rum supply; possibly both possibilities are true.

The prohibition of alcoholic drink based on a pernicious notion that the American citizen, after running his country and his own business, has not enough sense and will power left to drink within moderation, and on an equally pernicious impression that it is more highly moral to abstain from small indulgences than to crub the appetite for them to a moderate use. Prohibition is therefore a patriotic fallacy preying on true mortality, and is inadmissible in principle. For all that it is pleasing to think of the disturbance if ever those fourteen States face a real drought of liquor.

SEED GRAIN IS ASSURED.

Last fall owing to the large amount of rust in the west there threatened to be a serious shortage of good seed grain for this year. The situation was worse even in the United States. American buyers were invading Western Canada and the outlook was serious. The Government decided to take action and a commission was appointed to buy up seed grain. No publicity was given to the commission; publicity would have killed the project. Working quickly and co-operating with the municipalities the commission purchased large quantities of good seed grain. Today they have stored in the Government elevators in the west a quantity which it is estimated is sufficient to meet all the requirements this spring of the Prairie Provinces. The Government advanced the money for the purchase and the grain will be sold at cost. The prompt action of the Government has meant millions of dollars to the country, for if the action had not been taken Western Canada might have been without seed or else have had poor seed for this year's crop, so vitally needed for the Empire and the Allies. This is only one example of the many ways in which the Government is acting in the public interest at the present time, publicity to which is not given.

UNQUALIFIED BRUTALITY.

In referring to the sinking of the steamship Laconia without warning by a German submarine, American newspapers are unanimous in the expression that the act was another evidence of the hatred of the Huns toward all not under his dictation.

The Laconia, like the Lusitania, was an English ship. She was torpedoed and sunk without warning. She was struck with two torpedoes to hasten her sinking. No effort was made by the miscreants in the German submarine to give the people on board her a chance for their lives to extend aid to them after the catastrophe.

Thus it happened that a number of non-combatants, apparently thirteen, were drowned or perished from exposure. Of these at least two were women.

On board the ship were six American passengers and twenty Americans in the crew. Of the thirteen known dead, several were Americans, two women, a mother and daughter, were passengers; some were men deckhands or coal passers.

It was after the torpedoing of the Lusitania that President Wilson through Secretary of State Bryan cabled his famous note to the German Foreign Office, in which he intimated that the American Government would not "omit any word or any act necessary to the performance of its sacred duty of maintaining the rights of the United States and its citizens and of safeguarding their free exercise and enjoyment."

In his recent speech to Congress President Wilson said he could not bring himself to believe that such an atrocity would again be perpetrated by the Germans. "Only actual overt acts on their part can make me believe it even now," he insisted. Well, it seems we have the overt act! Or can humanitarian finesse find apologies and excuses for the Housatonic and the Lyman M. Law outrages—for instance, that the act "was accompanied by no circumstances which might not have been expected"?

Commenting editorially upon the situation pending New York paper declares: "Shall we now, at last, seek to stand true alike in thought and in action to the immemorial principles of our people? Shall we "seek to vindicate our right to liberty and justice and on unmodified life?" It would seem as if the President and the Congress had reached a crisis in their international relations. Will they rise to its demands upon their patriotism and courage?

PROFESSION vs. PRACTICE.

When those who live and thrive upon the surface of party politics under the title of "Liberals" are in Opposition, not enjoying the sweets of official life, they are the very quint-essence of professors and advocates of reform in all matters affecting in any way the welfare and well-being of their fellows and of the country generally, but when in office never attempt to put in practice their professed views, and opinions as held and expressed when seeking power. A study of Liberal partyism in Canada will establish this fact. A convincing illustration is to be found in the resolutions passed a few days ago at a meeting of the "Halton Reform Association." One of which reads as follows:

"That the acceptance of Knighthoods and other so-called honors by Canadians is alien to the democratic instinct of our people. It breeds toadyism, snobbery and flunkeyism and tends to create social class distinctions which should have no place in Canada."

We call for a revival of that spirit of democracy which prompted such men as George Brown, Alexander Mackenzie and Edward Blake to decline titles for themselves, they being content to look for reward for public service to the Canadian people alone.

We congratulate John Hoss Roberts upon his refusal to accept Knighthood. In taking this course he has rendered a service to his country that we deeply appreciate. We call upon all Canadians to whom titles may be offered hereafter to follow his example.

Does this not sound comical, coming from a party that ruled the Dominion for some 15 years, the rulers of which not only accepted titles themselves, but had them conferred upon numerous of their supporters who held never-given any evidence of public services to their country. What their claims were for the decorations conferred upon them, can only be surmised. Does it not sound well in the ears of a democratic crowd when being addressed in the eloquent style in which Sir Wilfrid Laurier can address a crowd, to have such a condemnation of titles thrown at them in the face of a declaration: "I am a democratic to the hilt, and have no tin pot title." And then so soon as an oppotunity presents itself accept what was denounced as a "tin pot" title, and strut about in cocked hat, with a bright and glittering sword, decorated from head to foot in gorgeously attired gold facings and glittering trimmings.

Sensible people will declare such professions and such negation of principles is not far removed from political chicanery and contemptable hypocracy.

After having dealt with the title question until the party returns to power, this same Liberal association drifts into the question of providing funds for election purposes and indulge in the following suggestion.

"That in the opinion of this Association all political organizations receiving subscriptions of money for political purposes should before election day file for public inspection a statement showing the names of all who have subscribed to their funds and the amount contributed by each, and a statement of their disbursements and the names of the persons to whom moneys have been paid, and the purposes for which payments were made.

And be it further resolved that Liberal associations appeal to all Liberals to contribute individually to their funds."

Is this not bordering on the ludicrous? A denomination of receiving money, and if received to be published so as to let corrupt electors know where it is to be found following if all up with an earnest appeal to Liberals to contribute individually to their funds."

This is in the language of a humorist. "Too funny for anything." First condemn the reception of money and then earnestly solicit it. Yet all this is Liberal partyism in Canada, under a Laurier rule.

The Poet's Corner

"EFFECTS"

It came back thro' the post today,
A little parcel tied with string.
Things I purchased ere he went away;
A pocket-knife, a little ring.
A snapshot that we sent home
For him to take where he might roam.

A matchbox and a pocket-book,
A Testament in khaki bound.
One or two trifles that he took,
Some of our letters that were found
Still in his pockets with eyes all dim
And these were all they found on him.

But oh, how much was left behind,
Things that they had no skill to trace!
The heart so true, so leal, so kind,
The smile upon his boyish face,
Ah, not they did not send these back—
Yet none of these today we lack.

Safe in our hearts for evermore,
Today, all days, these things we hold
Thieves shall not steal them, they are ours,
Dust shall not dim that purest gold,
With them we never more shall part—
Love's sweet "effects" stored in the heart.

Standard Bank Increased Profits

Statement for Year Shows Big Expansion in Deposits

It is interesting to note that notwithstanding the recognized fact that business conditions during the past year have offered many new problems and generally that it had been a period in which it was necessary to exercise great caution, the annual reports of most of the Canadian banks have shown that splendid progress has been made in the development of our country.

This is very conspicuously reflected in the table of the Standard Bank of Canada, as appears from the actual statement of the bank presented to the shareholders on Friday, 2nd, and which appears in another column. During the year ending Jan. 31, 1917, the bank, after providing for all costs of management, paying interest on its deposits, etc., and providing for bad and doubtful debts, shows profits of $580,230, which is equal to 18.90 per cent. of the capital or 8.64 per cent. of the capital and rest combined. The net profits of the previous year were $563,412, the increase, therefore, being $16,628. The circulation shows an increase over the previous year of $1,274,000, while the loans to the public now stand at $98,644,858, as against $83,942,915 at the same date last year. The deposits show the remarkable increase of from $43,099,050, to $46,292,564, while the total assets now stand at $59,865,274 as against $53,382,121 the previous year, an increase of over $6,500,000.

The growth of the Standard Bank during the last five years has been particularly marked. In that period the deposits have increased over 50 per cent., while the total assets have increased from $37,311,317 in 1912 to $59,850,274, an increase of nearly 60 per cent. During the year the usual dividends of 12 per cent. amounting to $398,880 were paid; contributions to the officers' pension fund, $30,000; to the patriotic fund and kindred objects, $28,900. The government tax on circulation was $35,453.75, and $31,347 was carried forward to profit and loss account, making that item $153,592.63.

A noticeable feature in the bank's statement is the quick assets which now stands at over $22,000,000, practically 50 per cent of the total deposits, viz., $22,782,522 cash in hand.

The legitimate requirements of manufacturers, merchants and farmers have evidently been well taken care of, as the loans and liabilities are shown as $76,064,585. The bank's policy has always been to do its share in the development of Canadian industries, and the amount appearing in the statement as loans to the public has been confined entirely to Canada.

One of the many enthusiastic users writes: "I received the trial bottle of Absorbine, Jr. at first and at that time was unable to walk without a cane, just around the house. I used it freely and inside of two days could walk quite limber. Something I had not done in two months. I went to the drug store and procured a $2.00 bottle and today can walk as good as ever. I'll never be without it. I am recommending it to everyone I can, for I have living witness. Absorbine, Jr. should always be kept at hand for emergencies.

GERMANS ARE NO RESPECTERS OF AGE

As in all wars, women and children are the chief sufferers in the great world conflict. Theirs are the heaviest burdens, theirs the deepest sorrow.

In Belgium to the inevitable suffering of the non-combatants whose men folks are torn from them to be sacrificed, is added the crushing burden of utter destitution. The aged woman and little children shown in the accompanying photograph must suffer the loss of loved ones, exile from their home and absolute want. They have no way of supplying themselves with the barest necessities of life, for the Germans have driven them from their factories and fields and turned them loose, penniless and alone, in a devastated land.

Nothing then remains for them but slow death by starvation. Nothing, that is but the helping hand extended from over the seas by those more fortunate ones whom they and theirs have saved from their own fate.

Canada, Great Britain and the United States, ever since the invasion of Belgium, have been generously pouring their wealth into this stricken land. The need, however, is continuous and pressing. The food sent, in the nature of things, and in spite of the most efficient administration, can last only a certain length of time. Then it must be replaced.

This is why the Belgian Relief Committee wants to let people of Canada know that unless all the work that has been done is to go for naught, more, and still more, must be given to keep alive a splendid nation until its oppressors have been driven from its soil and it can once more rear its head in proud independence among the peoples of the world. Any contribution, large or small, will be received gratefully by the Belgian Relief Committee headquarters at 59 St. Peter street, Montreal, or at any of the local branches all over the country.

A Genuine Rupture Cure
Sent On Trial To Prove It
Don't Wear a Truss Any Longer

Even Soldiers from the Trenches of Europe Write to Tell How the Wonderful Brooks Appliance Cured Their Ruptures, Sound and Well. Sent on Trial to Prove It.

From the battle front in Europe comes a letter written by Private John Carter, whose home address is No. 2 Shaw View, Flixton, telling of his complete cure of rupture from wearing the Brooks Appliance.

April 18th, 1915.
C. E. Brooks,
Dear Sir:

I received your letter by first post this morning. I beg to thank you for your Appliance which was instrumental in the way it cured me of my rupture. I have now been in Kitchener's army 7 months, and have gone through all the training, and I have never felt anything and not had the slightest trouble. I remember when I passed the doctor he remarked "There is nothing wrong with you, young man, you are in the best condition," and he sounded me all over, and I again thank you for the same, and I give my consent to use my letter as a testimonial to anyone, as I have been cured. Hoping you and your firm much success.

Yours truly,

If you have tried most everything else, come to me. Where others fail is where I have my greatest success. Send attached coupon today and I will send you free my illustrated book on Rupture and its cure, showing my Appliance and giving you prices and names of many people who have tried it and were cured. It is instant relief when all others fail. Remember, I use no salves, no harness, no lies.

I send on trial to prove what I say is true. You are the judge and once having seen my illustrated book and read it you will be as enthusiastic as my hundreds of patients whose letters you can also read. Fill out free coupon below and mail to-day. It's well worth your time whether you try my Appliance or not.

The above is C. E. Brooks, inventor of the Appliance, who cured himself and who is now giving others the benefit of the experience. If ruptured, write him to-day, at Marshall, Michigan.

Make up your mind right now that you will never pay out another dollar for trusses. They are expensive, uncomfortable and actually harmful. And when you once try a Brooks Appliance you could never be persuaded to ever again wear a truss.

And here is a letter from a mother who is thankful because a Brooks Appliance cured her boy so he could go out and serve his country.

2, Orchard Road,
Richmond,
Surrey.
April 11th, 1915.
Mr. C. E. Brooks,
Dear Sir:

A line to thank you for what your Appliance has done for my son. After wearing it from December to the following September I can say he is quite cured and is now serving his country in France at his own trade, a shoeing smith. You can make what use you like of these, my thanks.

I am, yours,

(Mrs. E. Whittle)

Wouldn't Take $100 for Appliance

Cranworth, Ont.

Dear Mr. Brooks—I am pleased to write you and let you know what your Appliance has done for me. I think I am all right now, as I have not seen the first sign of it since last fall. I can now run, jump and lift all I like and I would not take $100 for it if I could not get another. I do not wear it except when at hard work. Your appliance is just as good as ever. You can use this letter as you like for the benefit of others.

Yours sincerely,
GEO. KENNEDY.

I send my Appliance on trial to prove what I say is true. You are to be the judge. Fill out free coupon below and mail to-day.

Rupture Thoroughly Cured

Ingersoll, Ont., Feb. 6, 1914.

Mr. C. E. Brooks:

Perhaps you will be interested in hearing what your Appliance has done for me. I know without doubt that my rupture has thoroughly healed after a term of sixteen years' suffering, and I attribute my restored and healed condition to the wearing of your Appliance, which held the bowel firmly and painlessly during the healing process. I have not worn it for months—neither do I feel in need of it.

Yours truly,
F. C. NOXON.

Ruptured 22 Years; Now Cured

East Sherbrooke, Que., Jan 27, 1914.

Mr. C. E. Brooks:

Dear Sir.—I am very glad to hear from you, and happy to be able to tell you that my rupture was cured some time ago by your Appliance. I now need no truss after twenty-two years of torture.

Yours truly,
G. E. LEMAY.

Cured Me Completely

Perth Centre, N.B., April 26, 1914.

Mr. C. E. Brooks:

Dear Sir:—I received your letter regarding the Appliance you sent me. It was a complete success and now I don't know that I ever had a rupture. It has cured me completely and I thank you very much for it.

Very truly yours,
REV. H. A. SISSON.

Lord Cecil's Blunt Reply

In the British House of Commons the other day, Laurence Ginnell, Nationalist, asked Lord Robert Cecil, Minister of Blockade, whether he had information to the effect that William Pedlar, an American, has been deported from Ireland, and was now interned at Oxford. Lord Robert said he had no knowledge of such an American.

Mr. Ginnell asked him whether he would make an inquiry.

"No, I will not," replied Lord Robert.

DAIRY DIVISION

Your cow that stands in the third stall may have deceived you. When she freshened last June very likely she gave about thirty-five pounds of milk a day, and you thought her possibly the best cow out of the eighteen you own. But she may have dried off rather early and you overlooked that fact in the light of her good flow in June; you remember she was 9 years old, and a fine looking, quiet cow, easy to keep.

Now think of Eliza Jane, homely, eleven years old, who never made any big record for a day or a week. But recall the fact that she stuck to the job splendidly, and gave a fairly good mess per day right through her ten months.

Two actual records in an Ontario herd received by the Dairy Division show that, with milk at $1.60, cow No. 3 brought in $72.66 from her 4,541 lbs. of milk, and 148 lbs. of fat; but cow No. 14 brought in from her 6,675 lbs. of milk and 225 lbs. of fat, just $106.80. It will pay to keep records of each cow for the full period of lactation. Write for milk record forms, they are free, and find out if some cows you own bring in $34.00 more income than others.

SHALL WE MOVE TO TOWN?

It is a common thing for the farmer and his wife to look forward to the day when they have saved enough capital to allow them to sell out and live in town for the remainder of their days. With this object in view they work very hard. The children grow up and start out for themselves and by and by the position has been reached where the farmer and his wife can retire and take life easier. Looking at the question from one standpoint, who can blame them for taking advantage of their hard-earned cash? There are other ways, however, of looking at the subject.

If a couple moves to the town or city with the intention of taking things easy, oftentimes I is not long before they realize that the good time they had planned for themselves is not so rosy after all. The man finds himself with practically nothing to do and the easy life after his hard days of toil has a tendency to make him discontented. Sometimes also, his health gives out under the unusual conditions of living.

One of the big reasons why they move to town is in order that the wife may enjoy the household conveniences of the city, which they did not have on the farm. Yes, that is a feature worth considering and the farm wife will enjoy these conveniences fully. But here is another point. If the farmer and his wife have sufficient capital to retire and live on their income, why not instead of moving off the old farm, instal these household conveniences in the farm home. They surely have enough money to provide the house with heating, lighting and water systems, and power to run the churn, washing machine, and so forth. Or if enough money has been made from the farm to retire, why not instead of moving to town, sell the farm with the exception of a few acres, and build a modern home, and instal the labor saving equipment which would be found in a house in town. An automobile too, would fit in nicely here.

There are several things to commend this idea. If a few acres of land are retained, poultry, or a small vegetable or fruit garden can be handled and in this way the retired farmer has something to occupy his time and he and his wife are settled down in the community which they love. It is, therefore, not necessary for them to make a radical change in their mode of living, which would be the case were they to move to town. They have more time to devote to problems relating to community betterment and it is only natural for them to take more interest in the community where they have lived for years than they would do if they moved to town where conditions are different. What are the views of Our Women Folk on this subject?

BETTERING COUNTRY LIFE

A Colorado farm boy has offered these suggestions to parents who want to keep their boys and girls on the farm:

"Get good books, magazines and farm papers for the young people to read.

"Have some kind of a club for them to attend.

"Arrange matters so that they can have a party or entertainment once in a while.

"Go with them to church every Sunday.

"Arrange it so that they can have one or more picnics every year.

"Teach them to do all kinds of farm work by giving them a small tract of land for themselves and showing them how to raise their crops, and have them help you with your work.

"Give them a horse which they can ride or drive when they haven't anything to do or when they want to go anywhere.

"Teach them to love and be kind to animals.

"After they finish their school, send them to the state agricultural schools.

Presumptuous as it may seem for a lad to advise his elders as to the best ways of solving one of the hardest problems, there is no small amount of helpful common sense in the ideas of this boy who at home and in school has had a chance to se ways of bettering country life.—Exchange.

Excellent Advice For Coughs and Colds

HOME TREATMENT BULLETIN ISSUED IN N. Y. CITY—WHAT TO DO FOR CATARRH

The New York City Life Extension Institute is undertaking a splendid work of instructions for home treatment in its recent "Things to do for a Cold" Bulletin which may be summarized thus: Thirty-minute foot bath, hot. Move the bowels, gargle throat if sore. If severe pain and high fever lose no time in calling a physician.

Prominence has been given to the above in this article for the purpose of emphasizing the growth of the movement for authoritative home treatment of common ills, and to get your attention. Most colds and coughs as well as catarrh accompanied by foul breath, inability to smell or taste, constant hawking and raising of excessive mucous discharges in the back passages of the throat, and distracting head buzzings and deafness should be speedily relieved by a tablespoonful four times a day of a simple home-made syrup of four ounces sugar to one quarter pint hot water to which has been added one ounce of Parmint (double strength) which can be had of most druggists for about seventy-five cents. We know of nothing more certain in pointing to removing the cause of catarrh, and in cases where partial deafness has been caused by this ailment, to complete enjoyment of what is called good hearing than the method of constitutional blood correction—surely every family should know this, and you can aid by clipping this article and passing the information on to those who need it.

Any druggist can supply you, or a bottle will be sent on receipt of 75c, opstal note or money order. Address International Laboratories, 74 St. Antonie St., Montreal, Canada.

ROME'S GREAT COLOSSEUM.

A Grim Theater of Death That Was Drenched With Blood.

The most imposing theater ever erected by mortal hands, a grim house of death, consecrated by blood and tears, the Colosseum stands today a stupendous monument to Roman pride and degradation. Almost a third of a mile in circumference, it towers 157 feet up into the air, the original and monumental "play to the gallery" of popular approval. In 80 A. D. Emperor Titus opened its history with a tremendous inaugural of a hundred days of "games," in which men fought with other men and with wild animals, and no one knows the exact tale of the lives snuffed out on its bloodied sands "to make a Roman holiday."

In the construction of the Colosseum its builders adhered to the then new note of superimposing the three orders—Doric, Ionic and Corinthian—an idea that has exerted a greater influence upon the design of monumental works than any other Roman innovation.

But who thinks of that standing before it today with the golden Italian sunshine glorifying every scar and conjuring back from the dead past vivid spectacles of Roman holidays, full of noise and color, laughter and bloody agonies, or when liquid moonlight transfigures the classic ruin into a magic fabric, where stalk the thin ghosts of saint and vestal, slave and emperor?—National Geographic Magazine.

WHEN PETROLEUM WAS FREE.

That Was Very Early In the History of This Country.

The first reference to the discovery of petroleum in America was contained in a letter written in 1629 by Joseph de la Roche d'Allion, a French missionary working among the Indians. He had crossed the Niagara river and made his way southward through western New York into northern Pennsylvania, where he found a spring from which oil flowed. This oil was highly esteemed by the Indians for medicinal uses.

The letter of the priest was published in 1632 in Sagard's "Histoire du Canada." This oil spring was probably identical with the one described by the Massachusetts Magazine in 1789:

"In the northern part of Pennsylvania there is a creek called Oil creek, which empties into the Allegheny river. It issues from a spring on the top of which floats an oil similar to that called Barbados tar and from which one may gather several gallons a day. The troops sent to guard the western posts halted at the same spring, collected some of the oil and bathed their joints with it. This gave them great relief from the rheumatism with which they were afflicted."—New York World.

of water, a ... one of the most noticeable features of the modern town is the prodigal effervescence of its water, gushing from fountains of every conceivable size and design. The Trevi is the most magnificent in the city, its waters (called Aqua Vergine, virgin water, because of its purity) the finest. The old Roman baths required a lot of water. The splendid Thermae, built by the degenerate Emperor Caracalla, had accommodations for 1,600 bathers. How You May Reduce Your Weight

Overstoutness is a very unwelcome condition especially in the present day, when slender figures are so fashionable, and every reader of this paper has noticed the tendancy of some people to put on an excessive amount of fat.

If you happen to be one of those whose weight is more than it should be, don't try to starve yourself, eat all you want, but go to your druggist and get oil of orilene in capsule form and take one with each meal.

Oil of orilene increases the oxygen-carrying power of the blood and dissolves the fatty tissue, in many cases at nearly the rate of one lb. per day. Be sure and get oil of orilene in capsule form. It is sold only in original sealed packages. Any good druggist has it, or a large size box will be sent on receipt of $1.00. Registered letter or money order. The goods will be sent in plain wrapper. The Effect of Union on the Great Departments of the Church

By Rev. GEO. C. PIDGEON, D.D., of Toronto.

THE Mission Boards of the Church are overwhelmingly in favor of Union. Whatever men may differ in their opinions touching the solution of the problem of the extension of the Kingdom of God in home and foreign lands, they feel the need of the help of their brethren, and the setting of civil strife in a due perspective of the cause. It is significant that in 1870 a Mission Board was under our Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions only one actually vexed against Church Union. Where the need is greatest the desire is strong for the consummation of our forces. In the Foreign Field it is not those who are driving forward that oppose Union. Under the Comity of Missions each Church has a district and its zeal to evangelize. Yet there the people's united front against the outward mass of heathendom is most manifest. To make any impression on that vast body, all must act together. After centuries are wrought and admitted to the Church, our denominational differences perplex them sorely. Some of the most intelligent of the native Christians in different quarters have protested vigorously against imposing western divisions and rivalries on Eastern Churches.

Christianity in these different countries should develop churches which will express each people's peculiar spirit or genius and seek its particular work. The Church of Christ in China should be a united body, as Confucianism is the soil a Presbyterianism is to Scotland. So should it be with the Church in India. Their most thoughtful men affirm that Westerners can never understand the mind of India, and, if that be so, we can never construct a Church for India, and we should not try to impose on them competing systems that have grown out of our own struggles and experiences, and therefore belong to the alone. Their own religious life and spirit must take a form of its own. In no other way can they be true to the leadings of the Spirit of God within them. If they are to unite, the home Churches must lead the way.

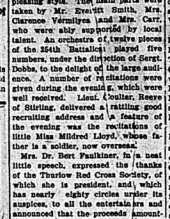
All these considerations have weight in the Home Field. In addition, we have here the great economic argument for Church Union. Between Quebec and the Pacific Coast the Presbyterian Church has 176 fields where its ministers are also working. These 176 fields bear the same name on each of our lists. In them the Presbyterian Board voted $43,907 last year and the Methodist Board $51,385. That is to say, about one-eighth of our entire Home Mission revenue goes to support causes that overlap Methodist congregations. This statement, however, needs an explication. In addition to the 176 places mentioned, there are over 100 others where the two churches cover the same territory but call their congregations by different names. As the names are different in the lists, it is impossible to secure exact statistics. On the other side of the account there is the consideration—that the villages where the missionary resides and by which the field is named, is sometimes only a centre for a group of preaching stations. The overlapping at the centre may not mean overlapping at the outposts. The money wasted in the one case may be counterbalanced by the needy places supplied in the other, so that the statement still stands that one-eighth of our Home Mission money goes to work that duplicates that of a sister denomination.

These figures do not take into account the larger waste involved by the fields themselves for their own support. And along that application it more serious, and the argument for joining forces still stronger.

Now, no one would object to this expenditure if it were to maintain anything vital. Recently an anti-unionist reproached a Western man with advocating Union because it was too mean to support his Church. "Not at all," was the reply, "but I'm worth paying for," was his retort. That is just the point. For years we have been co-operating with the Methodists in the spirit of peace and we has withdrawn, leaving the other in full charge. If Union is brought about it ever been suggested that any vital truth or principle was imperilled by such action. Is it not the glory of Christ, the interests of the Kingdom of God we should be most concerned to have efficiently guarded by the one as by the other. Then nothing vital can be imperilled them why maintain separate organizations?

Further, one would not object to rival congregations even then if the cause of Christ in the community were strengthened by them. On the contrary, such weakens the cause. In one place after the churches had united, the attendance at the Union services was 50% greater than the combined attendance at both churches and there was an enthusiasm and success in their work previously unknown. The united church can then become a community centre and influence for good in life utterly beyond the capacity of the struggling churches to exert. Many of the Churches are the only divisive influence in their town and almost often heard—"In everything else we are all one, but in this matter of religious community spirit is possessing our people, especially in the newer districts this feeling is the most serious progress of true religion.

Both in the Home and Foreign fields, therefore, the interests of the Kingdom of God demand the Union of the Churches. Not one vital interest will be permitted to suffer, and all points the cause of Christ will be strengthened.



Successful Red Cross Concert at Canifton

Resolutions of Appreciation of Ontario Government and Mr J. W. Johnson, M. P. P.

A successful concert to raise funds for the local Knitting Circle was held in Canifton on Wednesday night in the Town Hall which was crowded to the doors. The chair was occupied by Rev. Chess. Hall, Methodist, and part of the programme consisted of a drama in four acts entitled "The Village Doctor," which was put on in pleasing style. The male parts were taken by Mr. Everett Smith, Mrs. Clarence Vermilyea and Mrs. Carl, who were ably supported by local talent. An orchestra of twelve pieces of the 254th Battalion played five numbers, under the direction of Serg. Dobbs, to the delight of the large audience. A number of recitations were given during the evening, which were well received. Lieut. Coulter, Reeve of Stirling, delivered a rattling good recruiting address and Lieut. Foster on the evening was the recitations of little Miss Mildred Lloyd, whose father is in the now overseas.

Mrs. Dr. Bert Faulkner, in a neat little speech, expressed the thanks of the Thurlow Red Cross Society, of which she is president, and which has nearly eighty circles under its auspices, to all the entertain ers and announced that the proceeds amounted to $76. The following resolution was presented and heartily carried:

Moved by Mr. (Dr.) Faulkner, seconded by Mrs. Lloyd and unanimously carried that this Patriotic Meeting held in Canifton, March 28, 1917, desires to place on record its hearty appreciation of the action of the Premier, the Ontario Government and the Legislature in conferring upon granting to women suffrage. We also desire to place on record our appreciation of the earnest labors of our fellow-member, Mr. J. W. Johnson, M. P.P. and to congratulate him upon the successful issue of the reform that he has so ably championed.

PUT HIM DOWN FOR TEN A MONTH

The following letter explains itself showing as it does the interest tenbery of Belleville residents. Everyone and present, to do their whole duty, irrespective of sacrifice.

Chicago, Ill., Feb 26, 1917.

Judge J. F. Wills,
Belleville, Ont.

Dear Frank,—

Answering your letter I have many demands on me here, otherwise I would have been contributing more largely to Belleville funds. I am myself actively connected with the Canadian Patriotic Fund, being secretary for the local branch covering the middle Western States, and daily have to do with its affairs. There is a constant call for money, and services here. For you to understand, I have devoted practically my entire time to the affairs of the Allied Bazaar, which netted for war relief $320,000. I am doing pretty nearly all I can afford to do, but I realize the great needs of your local branch, and want to help. You may put me down for $10 per month. I enclose check for March.

Yours sincerely,
ROBERT L. ELLIOTT.

Internal Bathing's Rapid Growth

It is but natural to expect that a relief from Constipation and the many ills which it causes would be as effectual and so natural as Internal Bathing, should quickly make many converts.

But its general use has increased so tremendously in the past few years as to suggest other reasons, and these are found in the thousands of users that they feel as if "made over new" the morning after an Internal Bath.

The elimination of the pernicious and poisonous waste which is ever present in the Lower Intestines from Nature a chance to work unhampered. And one attests to the morning clear-headed, bright, light-footed and eager for the day's duties.

Mr. F. E. Smith writes:

"Dear Doctor,—Your 'Cascade' made a new man of me at the age of 49. I persuaded my wife to use the treatment also, and today she has better health than ever before. Since the use of the 'Cascade' she sleeps better and can walk for hours without fatigue. Fainting spells have disappeared, a condition of the past; can eat anything on the bill of fare and drink all beverages. Does not take cold when exposed; hot water does not cause oppression."

The "J. B. L. Cascade," the most efficient device for Internal Bathing, is being shown and explained in detail by J. S. McKeown, Belleville. Ask for free booklet, "Man of To-day" Is Only 60 Per Cent. Efficient," if you prefer; write Dr. Chas. A. Tyrrell, 163 College street, Toronto for same.

COUNTRY CORRESPONDENCE

KINGSTON ROAD NOTES

The Women's Institute and Red Cross Society had their last meeting at the home of Mr. John Desmond, 2nd Concession. A pleasant time was spent by the large number present. Mrs. Secretary, Miss Carrie Reid, read an interesting report of the amount of foods made and packed by the Society for the Red Cross work overseas.

A number from here went to the City Opera House, Sunday night to listen to the interesting address given by Sir Sam Hughes.

Mrs. J. J. Peverett, Napanee, is spending the winter with her son, Mr. Fred Parrott.

Mr. and Mrs. George McDonald and daughter Hilda spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. McDonald's sister, Mrs. Wesse, Prince Edward County.

The Quinte Branch of the Women's Institute held a social at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred S. Parrott last Thursday evening in aid of the Red Cross Fund. An attractive program was given by Mrs. Singer, Belleville, Mrs. Ronan Asselstine, Belleville, Miss Cursy, Trenton, Mrs. John Donaldson 2nd concession of Thurlow and Mr. Wm. Reid of Kingston Road.

A Red Cross cake was donated by Mrs. Archie McDonald, 2nd concession and sold for a good sum. The Kingston Road Red Cross Society, Charles street, city. Homemade candy was made and donated by the ladies present and readily sold. During the evening a donation was received from Mrs. J. E. Wilson. The society appreciated the donation very much. After lunch was served and returned to their homes expressing a good time and the members of the Women's Institute were pleased with their financial success.

TURNER SETTLEMENT

March 2—The regular monthly meeting of the Chatterton Women's Institute meets at the home of Mrs. S. Robinson, Turner, on March 7th. All the members are requested to be present.

We are sorry to report that Miss L. Turner is very seriously indisposed. Her friends hope for a speedy recovery.

Miss I. Smith who has been seriously ill with pneumonia, we are pleased to report convalescing.

On Wednesday, Feb. 21st, Rev. W. W. Jones, of Foxboro, united in marriage Mr. Clarence Long of Shannonville to Miss Rosey Gray of Holloway. The friends of the bride in this neighborhood wish them a long and happy wedded life.

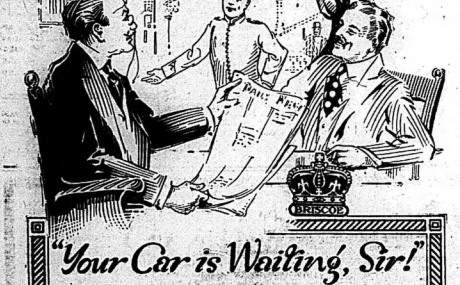
FUTURE POLITICAL GUESSING

There's going to be some guessing in the next provincial election in this province, when the names of possibly 720,000 women voters appear on the lists for the first time. Nobody will know how to size up the electing prospects, the so-called political sharps being just as much at sea as anyone else. The trouble of course will be that there are no records to guide any prophecies. In the last Presidential elections across the line, the women voters puzzled the experts, in their contributing to some extent to the doubt that surrounded the contest for days after the polling. Chicago they made a very searching analysis of the women's vote, and came to the general conclusion that it made no difference; in other words that the women voted just the same as their husbands or brothers. From this diary he judges it has just exposed some of the old political tricksters to get it in the neck.—Ottawa Journal Press.

No, we are not placing any bets on the next Ontario election, with 720,000 women qualified to cast a ballot. Also, the politician's is rendered more hazardous than ever.

Yes, with women voting Hartley H. Dewart might even have a chance for southwest Toronto.

Flattering to the Original



But Instalments Only Disappoint

There are many imitations of this great treatment for coughs, colds, croup, bronchitis and whooping cough.

They usually have some talk on the merits of the original, but it should be remembered that they are like it in name only.

"Your Car is Waiting, Sir!"

IN front of the fashionable club, at the door of the dignified office building, in the theatre line-up, everywhere that men of influence are wont to go—there you will find the BRISCOE, standing in readiness to carry its owner with speed and comfort to his home, to his office, to keep an important appointment—or to enjoy a "spin" with his family in the country.

The BRISCOE, B "4-24" is a car of which any man might well be proud to say "I own a BRISCOE." It is graceful, speedy, powerful and luxurious. Both driving compartment and tonneau are afford ample room and luxury for the tallest and stoutest of men. They keep upholstery and high seat backs, which come well up over the shoulder blades, ensure the utmost in comfort. The famous "Half Million Dollar Motor"—Benjamin Briscoe's greatest achievement—provides abundant power for every emergency, and gets every ounce of force out of every drop of the minimum expense for fuel. As a matter of fact, we have obtained 32 miles to the gallon of gasoline with this motor. The long stroke, 5½-inch, with its relative small bore, 3⅛-inch, is responsible for this.

The BRISCOE is as simple as that of an electric. Your wife can drive it for hours without fatigue. She can shift the gears with her finger tips, and the slight, well-placed pressure of the pedals.

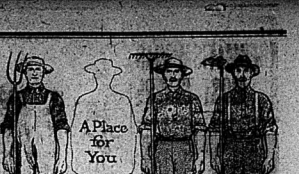
The regular equipment includes Speedometer, Gasoline Gauge, Ammeter, Trouble Light Socket, Automatic Switch and Tool Kit. Repair Kit and other important accessories usually classed as "extras."



PRICE, BRISCOE, B "4-24" Touring Car or 4-Passenger Roadster, 105-inch Wheel Base, $875, f.o.b. Brockville, Ont.

WRITE for Benjamin Briscoe's story about the "Half Million Dollar Motor," or call at your local BRISCOE Garage and let the car "show" you.

Recruits Wanted for Production

Just as surely as lack of food is starving Germany day by day, so plenty of food is winning the victory for the allies. The French armies, for instance, were never better fed than now, for France cannot forget the awful lesson of 1870—the failure of her food supply. To this she attributed the loss of that war.

To feed the French soldiers around Verdun, more than 25,000,000 pounds of food a week were required. This gives a faint idea of the colossal tark of feeding an army. Canada and Britain have a huge army of fighting heroes on the line; every man in the rear have plenty of food, in spite of a world shortage. Upon Canada's food production all principally rely.

The Farmers of Ontario Urgently Need Help

The Department of Agriculture appeals to men and boys to enlist in the farm help campaign. The Department appeals to men unfit for military service, or who find it impossible to enlist in the army. Do your "bit" by helping to increase production of foodstuffs. This is your hour of opportunity.

The farmers of Ontario need the help of retired farmers, of men following no occupation (retired), of business men who can spare a portion of their time. We appeal to all who can to arrange their ordinary affairs to plan to help some farmer friend, particularly in seed time and harvest.

Confer with your county District Representative of the Department of Agriculture, or write, "Farm Help Campaign," care Department of Agriculture, Toronto.

DEPORTATION OF BELGIAN MEN LEAVES WOMEN AND CHILDREN MORE HELPLESS THAN EVER - - - - -

Neutral protests do not prevent the Germans from continuing the deportation and enslavement of the able-bodied men who were left in unhappy Belgium—and we are powerless to stop it until we have won the war.

Meanwhile the Neutral Commission for Relief in Belgium, administered without pay by great-hearted Americans, is saving the women and children from starvation. Here we CAN help promptly and effectively, by giving generously to the Belgian Relief Fund.

More contributions than ever are needed, because the higher prices of foodstuffs, particularly wheat, have seriously increased the cost of feeding these millions of dependent Belgians. How much can you spare the victims of one of the blackest, most cold-blooded crimes?

ST. VITUS DANCE AFFECTS MANY CHILDREN

This Trouble Can Be Cured Through The Use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

St. Vitus Dance is much more common than is generally imagined. The trouble is often mistaken for mere nervousness, or awkwardness. It usually attacks young children, most often between the ages of six and fourteen—though older persons may be affected with it. The most ordinary symptoms is twitching of the muscles of the face and limbs. As the disease progresses this twitching takes the form of spasms in which the jerking motion may be confined to the head, or all the limbs may be affected. The patient is frequently unable to hold anything in the hands or walk steadily, and in severe cases the speech may be affected. The disease is due to impoverished nerves, owing to the blood being out of condition and can be cured by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which enrich the blood, strengthen the nerves, and in this way restore the sufferer to good health. Any symptom of nerve trouble in young children should be promptly treated as it is almost sure to lead to St. Vitus Dance. The following is proof of what the power of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to cure this trouble. Miss Hattie Cummings, R. R. No. 3, Peterboro, Ont., says:—"I was attacked with what the doctor said was St. Vitus Dance. Both my hands trembled so as to be practically useless. Then the trouble went to my left side, and from that to my right leg, and left me in such a condition that I was not able to go out of the house. I took the doctor's medicine without getting any benefit. Then I tried another remedy with the same poor results. At this stage I was advised to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and did so, with the result that they fully restored me to health, and I have not had the slightest symptom of nervous trouble since. I can recommend these pills to anyone who is suffering from nervous trouble, and hope they will profit by my experience."

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills from any drug dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

FANNIE WARD AT GRIFFIN'S MONDAY, PALACE TUESDAY

"Witchcraft" is the title of the photo-drama by Dr. Ralston H. Reed and will be seen at Griffin's Monday night and Palace Tuesday, matinee and night, with the brilliant Lasky star, Fannie Ward, in the leading role. Prof. W. C. Freeburg, the head of the Columbia University class in photodramatics conducted this contest under the auspices of the Jesse L. Lasky Play Company. Mr. William C. De Mille and Hector Turnbull of the dramatic department of the Lasky Company, and several others familiar with photo-dramatic requirements were selected as judges. The scores of manuscripts were read by each judge and then classed as to their worth. After all the judges had read the scenarios the winner was selected. Strange to say Dr. Reed's story was marked No. 1 by all the judges. Besides the above offering, Charlie Chaplin appears in "The Fireman," which will be presented along with the Mutual News Weekly.

"ALADDIN—AND HIS WONDERFUL LAMP," RETURNS TO GRIFFIN'S TUESDAY

F. Stuart Whyte's elaborate presentation of the famous English pantomime, "Aladdin—and His Wonderful Lamp," will be given a return engagement at Griffin's next Tuesday night, March 6th.

In preparing this piece for production in Canada Mr. Whyte has spared no expense to make it the biggest musical event of the year. He engaged Pierre Bayard, Clive Hamilton and Sydney Blythe to compose the score, which means that "Aladdin" will have a musical setting worthy of its stage environment, as these three composers have been credited with more pantomime and revue successes than any other trio of composers in the Old Country.

The scenic investiture is a very elaborate affair, indeed, in addition to the usual gaily-dressed song numbers the dialogue is all written in rhyme and talked to music.

Next in importance comes the stage settings. For this production they were designed by Mr. Whyte and built and painted under the direction of Major MacKay, formerly master-artist at the Drury Lane Theatre in London.

Those there is the costuming. No less than two hundred and eighty individual costumes had to be fitted and made for the various members of the cast and chorus.

The company which will present "Aladdin" is headed by the charming comedienne, Miss Zara Clinton, and includes those two star comedians Mr. Billy Oswald and Mr. Harry Hovland, and the same great cast, and chorus, as last time, including the seven Royal Eyens Japs.

PRICE OF COAL AT TRENTON

The Trenton Courier in its issue of this week states that coal is being delivered, and sold in Trenton from Smithfield at $9.50 per ton. This is a cheaper price than is paid in most places, including Belleville.

A QUICK JOB

The Trenton Courier says:—Messrs Harvey and Allen have just completed on a 30 day limit, a Club House 70x25, two and a half storeys high. It is beautifully furnished in approved wood in city style with all modern conveniences. The same contractors are building the main office of the plant 60x42 and two and half storeys high. The latter gentleman referred to is Mr. L. E. Allen of Belleville.

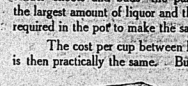
A Well Merited Recognition As It Should Be

Corporal Ernest Carr, who returned to his home in Belleville a few days ago, minus two legs, which he lost in battle while fighting in the trenches in France, has been recommended by W. B. Northrup, Esq., M.P. for East Hastings to fill the vacant Postmastership at Corbyville made vacant by the resignation of the Postmistress, owing to ill health. This is as it should be and Mr. Northrup deserves credit and the thanks of his constituents for what he has done.



There were many applicants for the position, and one of whom, under other circumstances, would have claims on their representative for the position but will relinquish them in favor of the returned crippled hero. Mr. Carr was an assistant engineer in the employment of the Grand Trunk Railway when he enlisted. It is such men whose services to King and country, who should be not only recognized but rewarded. Let the policy be continued

Economy

Many women think they are saving money by buying cheap tea, forgetting that it is not the cost per pound but the cost per cup that determines a tea's economy.

You may pay 5 or 10 cents more per pound for Red Rose Tea than for common tea. But because Red Rose Tea is a blend of Indian-Assam teas with Ceylons, consisting of the choice tender shoots and buds—the parts of the tea plant that yield the largest amount of liquor and the finest flavor—one-third less is required in the pot to make the same number of cups.

The cost per cup between Red Rose Tea and common tea is then practically the same. But the flavor—what a difference!

And this distinctive and delightful flavor and rich strength is protected by the Red Rose sealed package. No air, odors or dust can get in to injure Red Rose Tea's splendid quality and economy.

Found Wife Dead

Mrs. Wm. Shea of Peterboro, Succumbed to Heart Attack

Mrs. Wm. Shea died very suddenly on Thursday morning at her home, 211 Reid Street, Peterboro. For some time she had been troubled with her heart, but on the best few days seemed to be much better and able to attend to her household duties. That morning Mr. Shea, who is a motorman on the Peterboro Radial Railway, left his home about 4.30, after bidding "good-bye" to his wife, who was still in bed. Mrs. Shea resumed Retiring about eight o'clock for breakfast, he was surprised to see the decorators, whom he had expected at the house, standing on the verandah. He tried the door and found it locked. Not having a key with him he had to get in by one of the windows, after which he found his wife lying in bed in the same position as when he had left to go to work. An examination showed that she was dead.

Large Canadian Club Meeting

The War, and Canada After The War — Splendid Address by Mr. E. F. B. Johnston, K. C.

An appreciative audience assembled at the High School last night, to listen to the address of Mr. E. F. B. Johnston, K. C., of Toronto, under the auspices of the Canadian Club. The chair was occupied by the president, Rev. C. G. Smith.

Mr. Johnston discussed "the war and Canada after the war," in a thoughtful and forceful address, and placed before his hearers his conceptions of freedom, democracy and the principles and forces underlying the present world conflict of today. He referred, at the outset, to his visit to Belleville just four years ago and contrasted the changed times and the changed conditions, and the new factors that have entered into the life of the world since that peaceful year period. He instanced the advent of the submarine, prohibition and equal suffrage. He emphasized the idea of Canadian democracy and autonomy and her intelligent position with the Empire.

"Canada is at war, because she believes in the principles and ideals of democracy, liberty, and moral justice," he declared, "and for these she will contend faithfully and unflinchingly until the victory comes, be it sooner or late." This war was inevitable. German militarism and despotism being what it is, and what it has been developing into, during the last forty years. The speaker gave a descriptive definition of democracy, namely, that it is that form of government which desires to make all the people contented, and tries hard to make them so, and is reciprocal—according the commonwealth and enriched by every citizen. The Kaiser, he declared, is a product and fruitage of the antithesis of democracy; namely, politics, despotism and the rule of the mind and the doctrine that might is right, and the will to power is divine. He gave a trenchant and scathing portraiture of the Kaiser's traits, foibles, and palaces and showed clearly that he is a traitor of the worst type, debasing all before him for vanity to blasphemy. "But the Kaiser's worst mistake is that he has revealed his utter incapacity to appreciate or appraise realities, and the depths of humanity," declared the speaker, witness his miscalculations in regard to Belgium, England, Ireland and Italy also the self-governing colonies and this evident desperation of chagrin to see adversity welded together. HERE IS A CERTIFIED CURE OF CHRONIC SALT RHEUM

By Use of Dr. Chase's Ointment—Also a Bad Case of Eczema Just Reported Cured.

Eczema and Salt Rheum are different names for practically the same disease. Small pimples or vesicles form in groups, break and run watery sores, scales, crust, is formed. Healing is intense and the disease shows a strong tendency to spread over the body.

Whatever may be the cause, Dr. Chase's Ointment will cure for it heals and destroys the germs that infect the skin and cause the trouble.

Mr. Geo. E. Cornish, Brooklyn, for two years with Salt Rheum. Lot, 61, P.E.I., writes:—"I suffered enough. I consulted three different doctors and tried many medicines, it was all to no effect. A friend advised me to try Dr. Chase's Ointment, and I am glad to say that when I finished the sixth box the Salt Rheum was all gone. There can be no doubt that the cure was entirely due to the use of this Ointment."

Mr. Geo. Hume, J. P., Brooklyn, Lot 61, P.E.I., writes:—"This is to certify that I know Mr. Geo. Cornish and believe his statement to be true and correct."

Mrs. Allan Weber, whose husband is proprietor of the Manitoulin Woollen Mills, Shegiandah, Ont., writes: "I have had a bad case of Eczema on my right leg below the knee. I tried all kinds of ointments and liniments but to no avail, and was pretty well discouraged. Hearing of Dr. Chase's Ointment, is curing Eczema, I decided to give it a trial, and I am glad to say that it made a complete cure. The sores healed up completely, and I have had no trace of the old trouble for over a year."

It takes a little patience to cure a severe case of Eczema or Salt Rheum, but you soon obtain relief by using Dr. Chase's Ointment, 60 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Company, Limited, Toronto.

FINAL CHURCH PARADE

The members of the 235th Battalion who are stationed in Belleville, will have their final church parade in this city tomorrow morning, when they will attend divine service at St. Thomas Church. The rector, Rev. Ven. Archdeacon Beamish will officiate.

TRAMPS ARE SCARCE

Members of the tramping fraternity are exceptionally scarce in Belleville this season. One was given assistance at the police station last night. Since the 1st of January of this year only 10 have applied for protection, whereas a few years ago this number would often be in the tramp room at one night.

A SUCCESSFUL TEA PARTY

On Friday afternoon a most successful tea party, under the auspices of the Quinte Chapter, I.O.D.E., was given at the residence of Mrs. D. M. Walters, Alexander Street. A substantial sum was realized, and a very enjoyable time was spent by the many guests, who all brought their knitting. During the afternoon a very handsome tea cloth, donated by Mrs. W. N. Perry, was on exhibition. This cloth will be disposed of by raffle for the benefit of the Chapter.

TEETHING TIME A TIME OF WORRY

When baby is teething is a time of worry to most mothers. Baby's little gums become swollen and inflamed; he becomes cross; does not sleep well; is greatly troubled with constipation; colic or diarrhoea and sometimes even convulsions seize him. During this period nothing can equal the use of Baby's Own Tablets. They regulate the bowels and stomach and make the teething so easy that the mother scarcely realizes baby is getting his teeth. Concerning the Tablets Mrs. Arthur Archibald, New Town, N.B., writes: "I used Baby's Own Tablets when baby was cutting his teeth and I found them an excellent medicine." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

RITCHIES

MARCH

The First Spring Month Finds Us Prepared for the Largest Season's Business in the History of the Ritchie Store!

THAT MAY SEEM a rather far-reaching assertion, but it is exactly what every department in our store has done. For weeks past every day has seen many boxes and bales brought to the Ritchie Store—opened, marked and the goods placed in their various departments in readiness for a heavy Spring and Summer's selling.

GOODS OF A HIGH STANDARD OF QUALITY at prices within reason have been exceedingly hard to obtain, but by scouring the markets, both home and foreign, our buyers have gathered together a magnificent assemblage of the very latest and most dependable merchandise at prices much below what you had thought possible.

MANY OF THE STAPLE LINES, such a Linens, Cottons, Woollens, Hosiery, Gloves, Underwear, Cotton Blankets, Rugs, etc., were bought many months ago previous to the recent increases in prices on this class of goods, and while present stocks last you are assured of exceptionally low prices on any of these lines.

IN THE LADIES' READY-TO-WEAR SECTION our Spring stocks of Ladies' and Misses' Suits, Coats, Dresses, Blouses, Skirts, etc., is rapidly nearing completion. In fact, many of the New York Suits are now to be seen, and once you see and price them you will be quickly convinced that for Styles, Qualities and Reasonable Prices our showing is unexcelled.

MISS THOMPSON, of the Millinery Department, has just returned from New York and other style centres where she went in quest of the latest novelties in Millinery for Spring 1917 wearing. That she was successful in gathering together a charming collection of new ideas is evidenced by the large showing of Early Spring Millinery now displayed on the second floor and in the show windows.

LARGE SHIPMENTS of pretty New Silks in all the much-wanted qualities and patterns and the latest weaves in Spring Dress Goods have just come to hand and are ready for your early inspection at the Dress Goods Counter.

THE HOME FURNISHING DEPARTMENT on the third floor was never better prepared to cater to your requirements for the Home Beautiful. Dozens of pretty new patterns in American Chintz and Cretonnes are here for your choosing, as well as the more expensive Silk and Velour Draperies. When it is Draperies or Floor Coverings, think of Ritchie's this Spring season.

The Canadian Army in Action and the Advance of the Tanks

THE OFFICIAL MOVING PICTURES OF THE BATTLE OF COURCELETTE AND PRELIMINARY OPERATIONS SEPT. 1916, 1916, AS ISSUED TO THE PEOPLE OF CANADA BY THE CANADIAN WAR RECORDS OFFICE IN COMMON TRIBUTE TO THOSE OF HER SONS WHO FOUGHT TO VICTORY AND TO THOSE WHO DIED VICTORIOUS, AND TO BE A LIVING IN THE NATIONAL ARCHIVES OF CANADA FOR ALL TIME.

ON September 15 and 16, 1916, was fought where in France in the region of the "the Battle or Courcelette," somewhere in Somme.

What signifies the Battle of Courcelette?

The correspondents said something about it—a little—not much. They suggested a great deal more than they said. General Haig praised the soldiers who took part.

What was the significance of Courcelette?

The Battle of Courcelette was part of a larger operation, called the Battle of the Ancre, when Martinpuich, Belmont Hamel, Flers and other villages were taken as well as Courcelette. The Battle of the Ancre, itself a big engagement even in this war of wars, was but an incident in the Battle of the Somme, which has been raging since the preliminary bombardment last June. The Battle of the Somme again is but a "movement," an emphatic passage in a struggle 300 miles long stretching across the face of France from the North Sea to Switzerland.

Then, what signifies Courcelette?

Courcelette is a point on the western front. The western front is the chiefest bulwark of civilization at the present time—a 300-mile section of a battle line which encircles central Europe from the Baltic to the Mediterranean, from Gibraltar to Mesopotamia, and a war that envolves, directly or indirectly, the whole wide world entire.

But what of Courcelette? Was there a great victory there? Does the campaign hinge on the results of that victory? Was there greater than usual bloodshed there? Were the casualties unusually heavy? What is the significance Courcelette?

Courcelette? Yes, it was a glorious victory, there at Courcelette, September 15-16. That victory fulfilled its part in the scheme of the general staff, and great results turn upon every detail in a great campaign. More ground was gained on the days Courcelette and Martinpuich were taken, than in any other single operation of the entire previous period of the Somme offensive. There were many casualties in the taking of Courcelette how many has not been officially disclosed. But they were comparatively light, it is said, in comparison with those of the'enemy.

Is this, then, all that distinguishes this battle of Courcelette from other big battles in this, the greatest of all wars?

No, there is something else.

The heart and soul of all Canada lies "somewhere in France." And on September 15-16 last, "somewhere in France" meant Courcelette. It was there that the Canadians were fighting. Canada learned that fact in tears and in exultation from the casualty lists. Not till then, when the names of the killed and wounded on the Somme front, September 15, were published, did the Canadian people know that the Canadian troops had been moved from the Ypres salient to the Somme. The Battle of Courcelette was a Canadian battle all the way. They won it. Many Canadians laid down their lives there. It was a Canadian action, a Canadian achievement, a Canadian victory and for the people of Canada Courcelette became the heart-centre of the whole world-cataclysm.

AND now, comes Canada's first war film. The people of Canada will have a record of the Battle of Courcelette, a permanent historic record. At the request of the Canadian Minister of Militia, at that time General Sir Sam Hughes, a moving picture was taken of the action by an official cinematograph operator of the British army. This film is his best, most vivid and close-up work to date. You will recognize these pictures.

Fighting, marching, resting, charging, smiling, dying—these are your own, the boys you sent to war, the lads you pray for, the lads you'd starve yourselves to feed and maintain there on the battle line, if need be, "somewhere in France"—the very flower of Canada's manhood, her hope and her glory. This is their first moving picture—the Canadians in action. At St. Julien there were no pictures. Pictures were impossible. The story of St. Julien was told, and told brilliantly in words There is no such Eye-witness story of Courcelette. But the eye of the wonderful motion picture camera saw it all, recorded it as it was, preserved the vision imperishably on him.

THESE, too, are the pictures for which the whole world has waited. On that day last September and in that battle—Courcelette, Martinpuich, Flers, Belmont, Hamel—first appeared a wonderful new engine of war, the tank. Tanks accompanied the Canadians. This will be the first moving picture ever exhibited in Canada, showing these new monsters in action. Great, armored, irresistible snails, crawling over the shell-smashed surface of the earth, crashing through destructions, bridging shell holes and trenches, facing the hail of machine gun and rifle bullets, spitting death into the German trenches and driving the terrified German soldiers before them in demoralized mobs—this was a new thing in war, an added terror for which there is yet no answer or defence.

The first official film of the Canadians in action shows these monstrous tanks at work. All the world has heard and wondered. Belleville will now have an opportunity to see what manner of thing is the Tank, on Monday and Tuesday, March 12th and 13th, matinee and night at Griffin's Opera House. The official film of the Battle of Courcelette showing the Canadian Army in Action and the Advance of Tanks—the first picture —will be presented at the Griffin Theatre by Messrs. Jule and Jay J. Allen, under the auspices of The Intelligencer. Transcending in world-wide interest any war film yet exhibited, this picture is the first official production of the Canadian War Records Office, the first showing our own soldiers actually engaged in battle. These are the men who are striving and dying for you. And this is the first showing of Britain's new engines of victory, the tanks. This film is your national record of these heroic days.

Full List of Articles Banned From Britain

OTTAWA, March 2—The full list of articles prohibited from importation into Great Britain was received by the Trade & Commerce Department. The prohibition is, of course, not absolute, that is, the articles mentioned below may be sent to Great Britain under license, application for which should be made through the department here. The articles are: agricultural machinery, Antimony ware; aprons; all waterproofed; except boots and shoes; works of art; baskets, and basket ware; printed books, and other printed matter, including posters, daily and weekly, and other periodical and publications otherwise than in single copies through mail; boots and shoes of leather and leather materials; brandy; clocks; cloisonne ware; pewter and raw cocoa; coffee; cotton hosiery; cotton, lace, and articles; cutlery; diatomite, and infusorial earth; embroidery, and needlework; fancy goods, known as Paris goods; ornamental and down feathers; fire extinguishers; artificial flowers; fresh flowers; raw fruit of all descriptions, except lemons, and bitter oranges; photographs, and maps; painted and gilt ware; live quail; quebracho, hemlock, oak and mangrove extracts; rum; canned salmon; manufactures of silk, part not included; manufactures of silks and furs; Soya beans; stereoscopes; straw envelopes for bottles; straw plaiting; sugar articles, and preparations containing sugar, except condensed milk; tea; tomatoes; unprecedented number of submarines during the month of February, though the Admiralty censors still decline to permit the figures to be given out. The British have unbounded confidence in the power of the navy to overcome the menace, and a familiar phrase is "Leave it to Jellicoe," when the depredations of submarines are chronicled.

Typewriters; Wine; Wood and lumber of all kinds hewn, sawn, or split, planed or dressed.

WOMEN'S HOTEL OPENS

Dawes Establishment is Chicago Cuts Living Price

CHICAGO, March 2—The Mary Dawes hotel for women, the gift of Charles G. Dawes in honor of his mother, has been opened for guests.

The hotel, modelled after the Dafoe hotels for men in Boston and Chicago, is a $500,000 stone and brick building, with rooms for 250 guests. It is run on the same principle that the other Dawes philanthropic institutions are—that clean, wholesome hotel accommodations can be furnished at much less than the prevailing cost, if operated without profit under scientific management.

Rooms rents for from 10 to 30 cents a day, and guests may be either permanent or transient. Each room has a window, rugs, lockers, mirrors, beds with an abundance of clean linen, and access to toilet and bath facilities. A cafeteria in the basement provides wholesome meals at cost. Breakfast may be had for 5 to 6 cents, and dinner for 10 or 12 cents. Sewing rooms, a beautifully furnished lobby and a complete laundry for the use of guests are provided.

ARREST PROMOTER ON SERIOUS CHARGE

Dominion Police Hold Alleged Man Bag Robber

MONTREAL, March 3—Paul Emile Thibault, promoter and broker, Victoriaville, has been taken into custody by Post Office Inspector Green, and detectives, acting under instructions from Col. Sir Percy Sherwood, K.C.M.G., Chief of the Dominion police, on a charge of having stolen three mail bags containing $1,000 from a sleigh at Drummondville.

Others are implicated in thefts from the mails during the past few months, so the Dominion police claim, not only at Victoriaville, but at other points in the eastern townships.

Thibault will come up for trial early in March. He is being held in jail at Arthabaska without bail.

Once Office Boy But Now British Peer

Sir Hugh Graham, First Native Born Canadian in House of Lords.

Sir Hugh Graham, proprietor of the Montreal Daily Star, who was named as a British peer by King George on Feb. 14, will be the first native born Canadian to sit in the House of Lords. Moreover, he is the first newspaper man of any British overseas possession to receive the distinction. The rank of baron was conferred upon him. He has not yet announced what title he will assume.

Other Canadian peers, Lord Strathcona, Lord Mount Stephen, Lord Shaughnessy and Lord Beaverbrook were less wholly Canadian either by birth or career than is Sir Hugh. Strathcona and Mount Stephen were born in Scotland; Shaughnessy became a factor in transcontinental railroading while still an American citizen, and Beaverbrook, known long in Canada as Sir Max Aitken, received his elevation after years of residence in England.

Began As an Office Boy.

Like the traditional American capitalist, Sir Hugh Graham started life as an office boy. He was born in the country, a few miles from Montreal. At 15 he came to the office of the Montreal Daily Telegraph—literally a bref oot. Yet it was only two years before he became general manager of that little newspaper—when 17—and in two years more he had acquired a half interest in the Montreal Star. By the time he was 21 he had obtained full control of the Star and he has exercised control for forty-eight years. He is now 69.

Like Lord Northcliffe, however, he did not rest content with a single newspaper. After originating the weekly edition of the Star he bought several other newspapers and has exercised an influence in eastern Canada somewhat like that of Northcliffe in England. He has been identified with all the great patriotic movements in the Dominion in the last thirty years, and since the early '90s he has been particularly devoted to the upbuilding of the British Empire. For these services he was knighted in 1908; and his patent of nobility just granted bears this reason: "For active philanthropic initiative and zeal in promoting and supporting measures for the safeguarding of imperial interests".

Sent Armies to Europe

The strengthening of imperial ties has been perhaps the chief of Graham's long journalistic work. It was he who was primarily responsible for forcing the Canadian Government to send an army to South Africa in 1899. He also inaugurated the policy of Canadian naval assistance, and his newspapers for several years were urging the need of preparation against the German menace.

He has been exceedingly active in civic and charitable enterprises and is identified with the founding and maintenance of one of the largest children's hospitals in Canada. Lady Graham before her marriage was Miss Annie Bodman Hamilton of Montreal. The pair have one daughter.

Fighting, dying—these are your own, the boys you sent to war, the lads you pray for, the lads you'd starve yourselves to feed and maintain there on the battle line, if need be, "somewhere in France"—the very flower of Canada's manhood, her hope and her glory. ONTARIO WOMEN MAY VOTE IN DOMINION ELECTIONS TOO

Federal Authorities Will Have to Use Ontario Lists, or Else Have Separate Registration.

The extension of the provincial franchise to women by the Ontario Government will automatically give them the right to vote in the Dominion elections at the earliest moment, unless the Federal Government before going to the country amends existing legislation.

That fact stands forth in the consideration being given details of the Government measure, which, like the Dominion Election Act, makes it clear.

Not Use The Lists?

The Ottawa Government is faced with the alternative of abiding by the existing law, which would mean voting by women in a Federal election in one part of the country and not in another, or resorting to registration of its own. While there is no definite information upon the point it is understood in Ontario Government circles that the Federal Government may, before the next general election, provide for the taking of a registration of all voters, disregarding the provincial lists. In this registration the claims of women could be dealt with, without regard to provincial statutes.

The machinery necessary to give votes to the women of Ontario on the lists in time for the next provincial general election will require a good deal of consideration. There are two courses open, the extension of the time for completing the lists in order to add the names of qualified women, or the wiping out of the whole existing system. The latter course would mean that instead of the present antiquated system which requires one name to register and permits another the right to a vote without taking any trouble at all, simply because he is on a municipal voters' list, there would be registration for every voter, man and woman, before an election. Further than to admit that it was one suggestion that had been made, members of the Government would not discuss the matter.

EDWIN GOULD JR., KILLED

Son of Capitalist Victim of Hunting Accident

BRUNSWICK, Ga., March 3—Edwin Gould, Jr., son of the New York capitalist was accidently killed while hunting near Jekyl Isand, Saturday night.

Mr. Gould was hunting coons on a small island near Jeykl. He struck a coon on the head with the butt of his gun and the weapon was discharged, fatally wounding him. His companion had to row two miles in a small boat for help.

Hon. Robert Rogers as a Militia Head

That several more important changes in Canadian military circles may take place almost immediately, is the report around the London offices. The main one, which is neither denied nor confirmed by the Hon. Mr. Rogers, is that he will soon take up duties as Canadian Minister of Militia overseas.

It is felt that with the extra work in the High Commissioner's office consequent on the Imperial War Council, Sir George Perley will devote all his time to that duty.

Another change coming relates to France. The Canadians' main base with a larger establishment, having been changed, the duties will be divided up, and one command will be given Col. Reid, who was formerly acting Adjutant-General.

While nothing confirmatory to the report has yet come to the Cabinet at Ottawa, there is a disposition in Parliamentary circles to put considerable credence in the casie advices from London that the Hon. Robert Rogers may take over the duties of Overseas Minister of Militia.

STURDY CHILDREN

Oxo Cubes mean health, strength and irrepressible vitality to the little folk, and an immediate ending of time and trouble for mothers and nurses.

Oxo Cubes are also a splendid safeguard against the little ailments which give mothers such anxiety. A daily cup of Oxo during the long dark winter months will ward off many a chill, and lessen the danger of being exposed to damp, inclement weather.

An Oxo Cube in a cup of hot milk is a nourishing and easily-digested one. For delicate and anæmic children it is invaluable.

KINGSTON WON AND LOST

To Napanee Curlers in Napanee on Wednesday.

Kingston seniors won from Napanee and Kingston C. C. C. I. juniors lost to that club in the postponed games played on Wednesday afternoon at Napanee. Napanee plays Belleville now, and if the former wins this district will be a three-cornered tie. If Brockville wins the games against Eastern district (Brockville) the winners of the eastern district will come here on Saturday to decide the championship of the C. C. C. I. The Napanee games resulted as follows:

In the competition for the Ogilvie Curling Shield, Prof. J. F. MacDonald is now leading having a record of forty-one points for January and a large February score to be yet recorded. He is being followed by E. C. Gildersleeve and J. F. Matheson, with thirty-eight points each.

One game in the doubles series was played on Wednesday, when Dr. Carswright and W. J. Drysdale beat from E. W. Henderson and J. MacDonald by 14 to 10.

In the regular club series games, W. Jackson and E. O. Sliter are skipping rinks that have not lost at game in their series. There are still five or six games to be played in each series, but most of these will be run off this week.

WINE IN FRANCE

(Westminster Gazette)

Monsieur J. Lemaitre, writes to the Times to correct a very common misapprehension. We are constantly told that alcohol has been prohibited in France, which is only true if we quite understand that by alcohol French men do not conversationally include wine. There is no prohibition of wine in France—nor will there be, adds M. Lemaitre. The fine fesaith of the French troops in Gallipoli and in France is considered to have been largely due to their consumption of red wine—our light "Burgundies and Bordeaux." It is certainly desirable that we should all understand that alcohol in France does not cover wine.

THE SITUATION IN GERMANY

C. W. Barron, in Boston Post.

I think I am now at liberty to tell you something very few people in the world would be able to tell you. In the latter part of last year there was a very important conference of German military leaders on their western frontier. The general staff had fixed out that if the German defences were removed from the line of the fiomme to the heights of the Meuse, 400,000 men could be transferred elsewhere or held in reserve. This conference was presided over by the Emperor. Von Hindenburg was brought up from the southeastern front for his opinion, while another great German general advocated the plan of the general staff. Von Hindenburg said: "We do not now need 400,000 men in the southeast or elsewhere." The reply was, "Unless you retire now, you will not be able to get the 400,000 men when you do need them. Why not shorten your lines and thereby increase your reserves?" The Kaiser decided the conference with the declaration: Four hundred thousand men are of less importance to us than the maintenance of popular support which would be weakened by any drawing in of our lines." The Prussians have clamored for the last weapon of defence—ruthless submarine warfare to strike terror to old England. The Zeppelins failed. The promised indemnity from Paris failed. The attempt on the Channel ports failed. The attempt to weaken the union of the Allies failed. The Roumanian wheat supplies were burned, and the Roumanian oil wells were dynamited ahead of the German invaders. The proposals for a peace dictated by Germany failed. And now the German submarines are to attack the world's commerce, not as an effective weapon of offence or defence, but to satisfy German sentiment and keep the Hohenzollerns in power.

"Every one who goes to Niagara," says a novelist who has recently come to America, "hears some absurd, ridiculous and inept remark there. You stand and gaze at the falls, profoundly moved, and then of a sudden something is said, and, the effect of the grandeur goes forever.

"The day I first saw Niagara, a man touched my arm as I looked up at those white waters, and turned, philosophically. He had the smile of the confirmed joker.

"'It seems a shame,' he said, 'to see all this going to waste.'

"'What are you?' I said, 'an electrical engineer?'

"'No,' he answered, 'milkman.'"

LICENSING FELINES

The Law Against the Vagrant Cat Bills Everywhere.

They want to license cats down at Kingston, with a view to increase the taxes. There are a number of bills before various U.S. legislatures asking power to license and tax the feline tribe. New York has a cat bill before its legislators licensing all cats. New Jersey has such a bill; a like measure is being discussed by maine legislators, and in Massachusetts a bill has been reported favorably to banish cats entirely from Muskegee Island in order to protect the tern gulls and other birds that breed there. The city of New York has legislation for the "harrel cats, those rovers that are a menace to health, fire bitten, mangy and diseased. On night raids in tenement districts more than 5,000 rovers are taken a year and destroyed. But the marauding coat of the fields and woods are left alone, except in game preserves, parks, and other bird sanctuaries. The roving cat is a menace to bird life and this cat legislation is no joke to the cats at least.

WINCARNIS gives New Health to all who are

Weak, Anaemic, Nervous, Run-down

THE wonderful results of Wincarnis in cases of Weakness, Anæmia, Nerve Troubles and that Run-down Condition, are due to the four-fold power that Wincarnis possesses. Wincarnis is not merely a tonic—it is a Restorative, a Blood-maker, and Nerve Food all in one. Therefore, when you take Wincarnis you derive new strength—and at the same time new nerve force—and at the same time vitality. Thus the whole system is invigorated, and re-vitalized, and becomes surcharged with a feeling of new life. That is why over 10,000 Doctors recommend Wincarnis.

A very important feature about Wincarnis is that it gives a definite amount of good to all who take it, and does. And every additional dose gives more strength than you had before—stronger doses than you had before—and more vitality than you had before. This Wincarnis is not a luxury, but a positive necessity to all who are Weak, Anæmic, Nervous, Run-down—to invalids to ladies—to all enfeebled by Old Age—and to invalids striving to regain strength after an illness. Don't forget that the health Wincarnis creates is lasting health—not a mere "flash-in-the-pan"—not a temporary "whipping up" of the system—but real vigorous health that makes you feel it is going to last. Take Wincarnis and experience the new and lasting health Wincarnis gives. Don't suffer needlessly. Remember that Wincarnis has an unrivalled reputation of 30 years' standing. Don't accept substitutes.

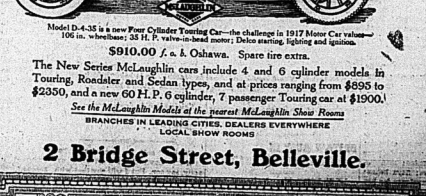
McLAUGHLIN



RESERVE POWER

THE McLaughlin valve-in-head motor actually develops from 15% to 20% more power with the same fuel consumption than any other type of motor of the same bore and stroke. This fact has been established by engineers, by block tests and tests in actual service. This means fuel economy and power.

Because this power is sometimes vital, it is found in abundance in McLaughlin Motor Cars, ready for instant application. It is "RESERVE POWER" and marks the dependable and efficient car.

ACCESSIBILITY

Both the Series "18" FOUR and the Series "18"-SIX Chassis are the evolution of four years' experience and concentrated study.

Mechanically, these cars have been improved, refined and perfected, until today we believe that the Chassis represents the finest piece of motor car mechanism on the market. This continuous study, based on the experience of 250,000 owners, is manifest in simplified design and wonderful accessibility. You can easily get at every part of the Studebaker car for adjustment or for inspection.

It is distinctly the "Owner's car"—distinctly the car for the owner who likes to take care of his own car. The design is so simplified, the function of each part so obvious, and the detail so easy to get at, that you can very soon understand your car and learn to know it, and especially so when you are taught by the Systematic Service System, which every Studebaker Dealer has established for Studebaker owners.

TWO CANADIANS COOLIST OF ANY ON STEAMER LACONIA

Lieut. Duggan Kept Up Spirits of Weary Croaps—Pull Away Sonnies, Sang Old Captain—Dr. B. E. Hawke, Late of Toronto, Was Among Survivors.

In a graphic story of the sinking of the Cunard liner Laconia, Floyd P. Gibbons, staff correspondent of the Chicago Tribune, in the New York World pays a tribute to the coolness and usefulness of two Canadian passengers.

"Pulleys Stuck in Fastenings

"In our efforts to get our boat lowered from the side of the sinking Laconia," says Mr. Gibbons, "we found the pulleys stuck in their fastenings. Then a man with an axe, aided by the glow of my flashlight, was able to sever the tangled ropes, and we lowered the lifeboat top of a rising swell. The man whose axe had proved so effective, was left on the steamer's deck, but a moment later he jumped. We huddled together to avoid the impact, but the man had gauged the distance well, and struck the water scarcely three feet astern. As he quickly bobbed to the surface, I turned my flashlight upon him.

"Recognized, Lieut. Duggan

"'It's Duggan,' shouted a man next to me, and again I flashed the light on the smiling, ruddy face and plastered hair of Lieut. Edmund S. Duggan of Toronto. We pulled him over the side. He sputtered out a mouthful of water, and the first words he said were:

"'I wonder if there's anything to that lighting three cigarettes with one match? The boat went down sooner than I expected, and I jumped for it.' Duggan's reference to the match here is a conversation we were engaged in just as the torpedo struck the ship. His smiling face and cheerful manner did much to allay the fears of the passengers of our sea-tossed boat.

"As we pulled away from the doomed Laconia, I made my way to the stern with a view to establishing some authority in our boat. There I found an old white-haired ex-captain from the Maritime Provinces of Canada. He was bound from Nova Scotia with codfish. His sailing schooner, the Seven, had broken in two, but he and his crew had been taken off by a tramp steamer. His name was Captain Dear.

"'Pull Away, Sonnies.'

"'Pull away, sonnies,' sang out old Captain Dear, his gray chin whiskers literally bristling with joy in the light of the round lantern which he held aloft to make sure that all the seven points of the boat were as comfortable as possible under the circumstances. Then we moved away from the ship's side. We pulled, pulled, lustily forgetting the strain and pain of insomnia and racked from pain, vomiting—oblivious of blistered hands and wet, half-frozen feet. Then a nodding of that finger of light; happy, snapping finger that seemed to say; 'Come on you men,' like a dice player scoring the bones—led us to believe that our lights had been seen. This was the signal and sink each other with submarines and big shells. And now they crawl over the broken face of nature and fight in armored tanks!

IN OFFICIAL FILM

"What a tank looks like in action as it rumbles over the face of the country will be revealed when the official film, The Canadians in Action and the Advance of the Tanks," is shown here. What life inside a tank is may be gathered from the diary of a member of the crew of one of these tanks a young Australian, as published in the Manchester Guardian.

"Monday—Out for first time. Strange sensation. Worse than being in a submarine. At first unable to see anything, but imagined a lot. Lights began to rain like hailstones on a galvanized roof at first, then like a series of hammer blows. We passed through it all unscathed.

"Suddenly we gave a terrible lurch. I thought we were booked through. Looked said we were astride an enemy trench. 'Give them hell,' was the order. We gave them it. Our guns raked and swept trenches right and left.

"Got a peep at frightened Huns. It was grimly humorous. They tried to bolt like scared rabbits, but were shot down in bunches before getting to their burrows. Machine guns brought forward. Started vicious rattle on our 'hide.' Not the least impression was made. Shells began to burst. We moved on and overtook some more frightened Huns. Cut their ranks to ribbons with our fire.

"They ran like men possessed. Officers tried to rally them. They waved on our coming for a while. As soon as our guns began to spit at them they were off on some mad scare.

"Experience was not altogether pleasant at first. Tank sickness is as bad as sea sickness until you get used to them.

"Thursday—Got into the village, and passed down between two irregular rows of wrecked houses. Hundreds of Huns came running out from the cellars and from behind ruins to see us. Some had eyes staring out of their heads. Looked surprised and even frightened.

"One blighter made a rush at us with a clubbed rifle. Made a horrible swipe at the tank. Subashed his rifle and made a nasty noise on our roof. Hurt himself more than he hurt us.

"Friday—Early afternoon. Usual shower of bullets and a few shells on the way. Got right across a trench. Made the sparks fly. Went along, paraded routine the Huns everywhere. Enemy terrified. Tried to run, but couldn't keep up our pace. Gave it to them with the sponge and surrendered in batches.

"One cheeky chap said he didn't think it was fair to fight with such things. We said that was our affair, and we could stand the racket. Germany seized to make 'ow it.

"Saturday—Came home before breakfast. Terrible crash first go off. Thought we had collided with a wandering world. Wrenched the starboard door off its hinges. Fresh shell dug over us. Enemy trench strafed by artillery—Yorkshiremen seized it for attack. We tried a surprise, but did not come off first.

"We waddled into their lumbers in the attacking troops. Never saw such so frightened. Had panic-stricken in all directions. Only a few stayed behind and tried to stop us by machine-gun fire. Smashed them to bits and left their machine guns to be picked up by the Yorkshiremen, they hoped to surprise.

"Were constantly after the enemy wherever we could find them. Fresh losses were terrible. Later sponge on tachments tried to make their way back, supported by big guns. Lined up across the road and gave them a hot time. Every time they tried to rush through we ripped their ranks to bits. At last they gave it up. Very wise of them.

To be seen at Griffin's Opera House on Monday and Tuesday, March 12 & 13, afternoon and evening.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

Part

INFANT WELFARE—ARTICLE No. 6.

WET-NURSE.—If for any good reason the baby cannot be nursed by his own mother, milk should be secured from a wet-nurse. The most important requisite in an otherwise healthy wet-nurse is that she is well, and especially that she has no disease such as syphilis. To be certain of this a blood test should be made in every case. The wet-nurse's baby must be well and near the same age as the new baby to be nursed.

Weaning the Baby.—The period of weaning should occupy two or three weeks. It must not be carried out suddenly. A bottle feeding should be substituted for a nursing every third or fourth day until all the feedings are from the bottle. Thus the baby has gradually become accustomed to the change, and the mother's breasts will not give any trouble if she is careful to limit the quantity of food she has been taking. Every effort must be assumed by the mouths, and in no case should a baby be nursed longer than a year. It is best not to wean the baby in the hot summer weather.

Proprietary Foods.—The writer has little use for the numerous so-called baby foods in the market. They are of two kinds, those to be added to cow's milk and those without. The former simply add greatly to the expense of cow's milk without increasing its value as a food, and those made without milk are not satisfactory. Some of the proprietary foods are exceedingly expensive. If they are used at all it should only be in cases where the baby cannot digest cow's milk, and then only on the advice of a competent and responsible physician. Just here I might remark that for some reason or other, (perhaps indifference or a busy mother) physicians are too ready to advise the use of these patent foods. They should think twice or three times before doing so.

Condensed Milk.—Condensed milk is milk from which the water and often some of the cream has been removed. To many cases sugar has been added and the condensed product is frequently made from an inferior grade of milk. It should not be used as infants' food except in travelling or in countries where it is impossible to obtain fresh cow's milk.

Goat's Milk.—The milk of goats and asses may be used where cow's milk cannot be obtained, but strictly under the advice of a physician.

Feeding for Hot Days.—On very hot days, etc., baby should not be urged to take too much. Give him cooled boiled water frequently. Dilute the feeding by replacing one ounce of the formula with one ounce of boiled water in each bottle.

Hours of Feeding.—The hours of feeding for a bottle-fed baby are the same as for a breast-fed baby. By the end of the third day he should be fed every two hours in the day time and every four hours at night, the feedings in the twenty-four hours. At one or one and a half months he should be fed every two and a half hours, or nine feedings in the twenty-four hours. At about five or six weeks or as soon as possible the time should be changed to every three hours. The feedings will then be at 6, 9, 12, 3, 6, 10, and 2 a.m. The latter feeding should be omitted as soon as the baby will go from 10 at night to 6 in the morning. After nine or ten months the baby will usually sleep through the whole night. Then the 10 p.m. feeding will be omitted.

Things to Remember.

Buy for the baby the freshest milk you can get, but not necessarily the richest milk.

If your town has not a Milk By-Law, or if it is not enforced, have the mothers unite and get after the town council about it.

Endeavor to have milk delivered in bottles. Milk milk is not safe. Dirt and flies are sure to get into it. When milk is received put it on ice at once and keep it there until used. Warm milk sours quickly, and spoiled milk is sure to make the baby sick.

Never leave an open pitcher out of doors for the milkman to pour the milk into, and never allow milk to stand about the house in open vessels or on the steps in the sun.

If you must feed your baby on other than breast milk don't use a bottle with a tube. Use rubber nipples and go to the greatest trouble to see that nipples, bottles, and all utensils used are absolutely clean.

SCURRYING GERMANS

Australian Describes Life in Latest Instrument of Destruction

Life in a tank from descriptions of soldiers who have survived the experience in battle at the Somme front, must be a combination of the existence led in a boiler factory, a tractionengine, and a torpedo boat. There is absolutely no room to spare. There is an incessant roar and clang of machinery, and of steel echoing on steel with the continual tearing and rending of the tank's metal walls and armored roof. And when it gets into the battle-zone there is the thumping over rough ground the jolting, pitching and heaving, the climbing and diving, are partly those of a land wagon and partly those of a ship, but intensified. The bumps, however, would imply that the tank is a living thing.

Then, when the tank waddles across No Man's Land, rifle the bullets from German rifles and machine guns pattering on its armor plate like hailstones on a tin roof, the din is absolutely deafening.

Men can adapt themselves to any circumstances on earth, the heavens above or the waters under the earth as this war has witnessed. Men travel and fight under the sea. They tunnel and undermine the ground. They fight in ditches and sleep in long dugouts. They fly in the air and fight battles above the clouds. They go to sea in

Why Petersburg Is Now Petrograd

Before the war Russia's capital was Petersburg.

Which is to say that Germany had fastened the name upon it, since "burg" or "berg" is pretty fair German for fortress or city.

Today it is Petrograd. The chief city has become Russianized in name, that is to say.

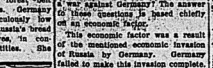
And that is an allegory, as is pointed out by our friend Tom Levine in the following truthful and convincing article.

Russia was not, it is no longer to be Germanized. That is in part at least, the war. Germany is to be Slavized, though it will be necessary to go back to near the beginning to make the Slavic quite orthodox.

Prussia aimed simply at world domination. This aim was to be achieved through an alliance of the "three Emperors"—Germany, Austria and Russia. Germany controlled Austria politically. Germany's influence in Russia was at one time so powerful as to bring Prussia's designs near to realization.

For Russia and Germany, so far as the ruling classes were concerned, have been closely affiliated for generations. Historically and politically the governments of the two nations has much in common. The Russian Czar according to the findings of his historians had in his veins only a small fraction of Slav blood as compared with German. His present wife is German. Most of his family are married to German princes and princesses. The functionaries and counsellors at the court were largely men and women of German origin or German education. The bureaucracy is full of men and women of German origin or German sympathies. The whole governmental machine was before the war permeated with if not dominated by, Prussianism. Among all the great powers of Europe official Germany came nearest to official Russia in spirit. This fact alone would have sufficed to create a bond of mutual affection between Russia and Germany.

An Economic Bond



But besides the historical and political bonds that existed between the two powers there came into existence in recent years a new bond, the economic bond.

Germany had made gigantic strides in the field of industrial progress.

Germany was successfully competing with Great Britain in the realm of international commerce. Great Britain had her vast colonial possessions from which to draw raw materials.

Germany had found in Russia no substitute for that deficiency in her system. So Germany invaded Russia economically. She monopolized Russian trade legally and illegally. Her commerce with Russia surpassed that of all other nations combined.

Germany had the advantage also of territorial proximity. She drew on Russia's vast timber wealth, which she floated down directly into Germany from the Pripet forest belt along a system of rivers. Germany got this timber at relatively low price. She drew on Russia's bread resources, cattle reserves, in constantly increasing quantities. She

FAREWELL RECRUITING MEETING AT GRIFFIN'S

The farewell recruiting meeting held in Griffin's Opera House last night under the auspices of the 235th Battalion was one of the best ever held in the city. The spacious building was filled to the doors with representative gathering and the addresses given were in keeping with the occasion. Expressions of regret were general that the Battalion is leaving the city, as the officers and men alike have, by their manners, found a warm place in the hearts of the citizens of Belleville. The addresses were delivered by three of the officers of the Battalion including Lt.-Col. Scobell officer-commanding; the Chairman, Mr. D. V. Sinclair and Rev. Venerable Archdeacon Beamish.

After a selection rendered by the fine band under the able leadership of Bandmaster Laugher and the National Anthem, the meeting was opened.

Mr. Sinclair in assuming the chair said he considered it a great privilege and pleasure to preside as chairman at the farewell meeting of the 235th Battalion in Belleville. For several months the Battalion has been in our midst, and all citizens had learned to esteem the officers and men: We will wish them good speed to their destinations at Ottawa and also to their trip overseas. We all regret their removal from Belleville, but like good soldiers they had to obey the call where duty called them. The chairman referred to the fact that word had this day been received that Lieut. Ketcheson, son of Mayor Ketcheson had been dangerously wounded. The sympathy of all citizens would be extended to the Mayor and his family in this their hour of trouble. Three sons of the Mayor had answered the call of their country, which was a proud record for all would hope and pray that the wounded soldier's life would be spared. Mr. Sinclair then read the following letter which speaks for it self:

Belleville, Feb. 4, 1917.

To Lt.-Col Scobell,
Officer Commanding 235th Battalion,
C.E.F., City.

Dear Col. Scobell:

On behalf of the City Council and all the citizens of Belleville and myself personally, I desire to express the regret on the eve of parting from the officers and men of your splendid battalion.

You have been living among us for several months, and we have learned to respect and honor you. The conduct of your men have been most exemplary. They are gentlemen and soldiers, and we know that wherever duty may call them, they will give a good account of themselves.

We wish you God speed and a safe return, and trust that after this unhappy war, in which we are now engaged, to see you may be able to welcome you back here again.

Yours sincerely,
H. F. KETCHESON,
Mayor

Capt. Stewart being called upon said the officers and men of the 235th Battalion regretted the departure from Belleville. He would like to see the young men present take the place of the young men and others who have all been wounded. The Germans are not beaten yet. It behoves all to get into the game before it is too late. God help pity the young man who does not do his duty at the present time. We have the money and the munition but have no men. The Empire is facing the great job before it, and she will make good. We will show to the world we are not a declining people. There are young Canadians to-day who should enlist, but they do not. What is the trouble? Are we too wealthy? Are they Canadians? If they are, they should be in the ranks of the British army. What privileges we enjoy under the old flag. If the Militia Act is put in force we are hopeful the young men will enlist. If they do not enlist then it will be conscription. We have got to get the women and the old men to help in recruiting if the young men will not. If a store keeper has a young man who is able to enlist, he should be allowed to go, and a young lady may be able to take his place. Don't buy baby ribbon from a young man over the counter when a young lady can just as well sell it. In leaving you, it is with regret, and especially the colonel who has a large heart. This little trek is only a move nearer the German trenches, which will be ours. Go to reach. Join up with the 235th Battalion, of'it not, join the 254th Battalion, or some other military unit. After this war is over there will be great problems for the Government to face. We want to live under the same old flag, the flag saved by the Canadian boys at the front. (Applause.)

Lt.-Col. Scobell, upon rising to speak, was most enthusiastically received. In his opening remarks he said it was hard to say good-bye to Belleville. Four happy months had been spent in Belleville. All citizens had done all they could for the members of the 235th Battalion. He referred to the Khaki Club and its good it had and was doing. Some of the boys of the Battalion had no home in this country, but the Khaki Club was a home to them. We owe much to the ladies of Belleville who have done so much for the officers and men. For this he was thankful. We are sorry to go, but as good soldiers we must obey orders. In a few weeks we will go overseas. No matter where we go we will look back on Belleville, and hope to return to the city and shake your hands.

Every officer and man of the Battalion will go overseas, even if the colonel and other officers has to be reduced to the ranks. We have a young men walking around in Belleville who should be in khaki. If the young men have not enlisted in the 235th then go and enlist with the 254th Battalion. We hold no bad feelings towards the 254th Battalion as we hope to meet them in France and fight side-by-side with them in this struggle for the Empire. There are thousands of men in the trenches to-day who are looking over to their chums in Belleville and other places, and wonder why they do not come and relieve them. The boys returning will have the running of this country, and why should they not. This privilege belongs to those remaining at home. It behoves the young men to enlist and enlist at once. There is no sacrifice too great to make at the present time. This war is by no means over, and it may last for another year. Look at the tonnage that has been sent to the bottom of the waters by the submarine warfare. It is a war of barbarism against civilization. Do we want to be under the heels of the Huns. If he has his way down his life for his country he was prepared to do so. Good-bye to all, I wish you very much. (Applause.)

Capt. McLean, in his opening remarks, stated that he was the first officer of the 235th Battalion to address a Belleville audience. He desired to thank the citizens of Belleville for the co-operation they had taken in the recruiting meeting held under the auspices of the 235th Battalion. In referring to recruiting, Capt. McLean said there were many young men present who were recreant in their duty to the nation and themselves by not enlisting. He would advise all to get their duty in this respect. He would endorse all that had been said in regard to the soldiers who came from Belleville. When they come home they will take what they want, take what is their rights. They deserve all that can be given them, and even more He could not understand how a young man would hang back at the present time and not assist in fighting for the principles of liberty and justice. The gift you can give the 235th Battalion which is leaving the city, is to give us more recruits to help swell our numbers. He desired to repeat what had been said in reference to the citizens of Belleville, and how they entertained them on their departure from city. There are a few slackers in the city. The speaker referred to the patriotism of the citizens of Belleville, and the generosity displayed in rising funds for patriotic purpose. He hoped that when the war is over the 235th may have the privilege of returning to Belleville. (Applause.)

Venerable Archdeacon Beamish, Rural Dean of Hastings, was the next speaker. He would reinforce what Has been said by the previous speaker in reference to having young men enlist. Whosoever will give out the best in him and give his life, as the Good Man said he will find it. The first sacrifice was made on Calvary, and sacrifices are being made at Gallipoli. He had refused to attend recruiting meetings when they were not meetings of that descriptions. This was a truly patriotic meeting and he was pleased to be present. Glad they the boys; we were proud of them. He would like to have gone overseas, and offered his services for overseas's work. We never had better men and boys in our city than the 235th Battalion. The Venerable Archdeacon pronounced the benediction.

The meeting closed by the band playing the National Anthem.

The selection played by the band were: "Oh Canada," "Stilly Night," "You bet Your Life," by Rev. J. D. Morrow, the fighting Parson of Toronto, and patriotic airs.

FIVE KILLED IN DETROIT FIRE

Floors of Building on Woodward Avenue Give Way—Damage $500,000

DETROIT, March 5.—Special—Five firemen were killed and three seriously injured in an early morning fire of undetermined origin on the west side of Woodward avenue, in the spacious shopping district, yesterday, which, before it was controlled, had done damage estimated at approximately $500,000.

U. S. Ships to Sink U-Boats

Officials Admit Orders to Merchant Gunners Make War Almost Certain

WASHINGTON, March 3.—The decision of President Wilson to order the arming, fore and aft, of American merchant ships as soon as Congressional authority is given, makes war with Germany practically inevitable in the view of Administration officials.

While no formal official announcement has been made there is high authority for the statement that when American ships are sent out armed with United States guns and manned by naval gunners the orders these gunners will have will be to fire at any hostile submarine at the first menacing action.

This, officials agree, would precipitate hostilities, but so far as the United States Government is concerned it'll die is cast.

The only thing that can prevent hostilities is for Germany to permit the passage unmolested of armed American merchant ships.

While the Administration long view'd with alarm the armed ship question, finally tentatively accepting the German argument that armament on a merchant ship gave that vessel the character of a warship owing to the fragility of the submarine, the position now adopted by the United States, though not yet officially proclaimed, is that a merchant ship is entitled to treat a submarine as it would a pirate ship.

WOMAN AND SOLDIER KILLED BY TRAIN

LONDON, March 5.—Special—The inquest was opened Saturday into the death of John Edward Lockyer, twenty-seven, private, Canadian Medical, who was killed with Katherine Mawe, twenty-two, banking clerk, London, on the electric railway at Mornington Crescent tube. The couple became engaged at Christmas, and had been off in January. Lockyer had since visited the girl at the station where she worked. This morning her, but she never said Lockyer threatened her. On Tuesday both were on the platform, the soldier appearing to her the-woman's pass-mate. She attempted to avoid him, one witness said. The soldier took the girl by the arm, and both jumped in front of a train which arrived, and did not attempt to save themselves. Lieut. Holmes, Canadian Medicals, said Lockyer was devoted to his work, was most reliant, and had been invalided from the front. The inquest was adjourned.

ZEP. EXPLODES CREW ALL LOST

Two Belgian Witnesses of Disaster Arrested and Taken to Germany

LONDON, March 5.—Special—A new Zeppelin, on speed trials at Ghent, caught fire on Monday and was completely destroyed, according to reports from Berlin received by the Exchanges Telegraph by way of Copenhagen. The despatch says that the crew of the Zeppelin perished with their airship, and that two Belgians who witnessed the disaster, were arrested and taken to Germany.

CIVIC TRADING IN FOOD AND FUEL

Legislation to Give Municipalities Chance to Curb Cost of Living

TORONTO, March 3.—Legislation giving municipalities the right to go into the business of storing and selling coal and all kinds of foodstuffs, will be passed at the present session of the Legislature. Hon. W. D. McPherson has in course of preparation legislation extending the provisions of the Municipal Act to give municipalities the necessary powers.

The authority will permit municipal councils, with the approval of the Lieutenant-Governor in Council, and within the limitations and conditions prescribed by borrowing the necessary money to pass by-laws for "buying, manufacturing and storing fuel, oatmeal, flour, bread, milk butter, cereal and potatoes, and such other articles of food as may be designated in the order-in-Council, and for selling the same to dealers and residents in the municipality."

The by-laws may also cover the buying of land and establishment and maintenance of depots, warehouses, yards, machinery, etc., needed. Such by-laws will not have to have the assent of electors, but must have a two-thirds vote of the members of the Council, and debentures issued shall be repayable in not more than ten years.

Would Gladly Step Out

And Give His Position to a Returned Soldier

Immigration agent George Hunter of Kingston, is very much discouraged in the problem of securing help for the farmers.

"I have been doing the very best I can," he said, "but I have found it impossible for me to secure help. I have been able to get a few men, but some of them, although paid big wages, have refused to stay on the job. I have a number of the best farmers in this district but he only stayed a few days. This is most discouraging. I do not know what the farmers are going to do. Action of some kind will have to be taken."

Mr. Hunter stated further, that he was quite willing to resign his position as Immigration agent and give it over to some returned soldier, who might be able to do more good in the position. He thought that perhaps a returned soldier would be in a better position to get soldiers to work on the farm.

Prohibition In Sask. Defeated

REGINA, March 3—The fifth division of the present session of the Legislature took place yesterday afternoon on the following resolution submitted by W. B. Willoughby, leader of the Opposition.

"That in view of the pronounced temperance sentiment of the province and the evils resulting from the importation into it of intoxicating liquors, this House is of opinion that immediate passing of a law making it illegal to consume or have for consumption at any time in the province any intoxicating liquor save for medicinal purposes, subject to strict regulations."

When the resolution was called Attorney-General Turgeon stated he had no further remarks to make in the matter and Mr. Willoughby intimated he was in the same position. The resolution was lost on a straight party division.

CHINA BREAKS WITH BERLIN

Its Action is Opposed by the President, So It Resigns

PEKIN, March 5.—Special—The Cabinet yesterday decided that China should join the United States in breaking off relations with Germany. This decision was submitted to the President, who refused to approve the Cabinet's action, saying such power rested entirely with him. Premier Tuan Chi Jui immediately resigned, and left for Tien Tsin, accompanied by several other members of the Cabinet.

The resignation of the entire Cabinet is expected.

Parliament is virtually unanimous in favor of the opinion of the Cabinet Ten leaders of all the political parties are adversely criticising the President's position. The Vice-President of the Republic supports the action of the Cabinet.

HEAVY ENGINE ORDERS

These With Shell Orders Will Keep Canadian Locomotive Co. Busy

KINGSTON March 5.—Special—The Canadian Locomotive Co. here has concluded a contract with the Grand Trunk Railway Co. for ten large Mikado type engines. These engines together with those that are are building for the Canadian Government railways, the British War Office, and the Toronto, Hamilton & Buffalo Railway, and additional shell orders taken within the past two weeks, ensure capacity operations for both plants for a considerable time. There are 2200 men employed at the works.

WINDSOR PRISONER

Has Five Wives and Fort-one Children

WINDSOR, March 3.—Waldo Schipo, a full-blooded Zulu, who says he is sixty-one years old, looks not more than thirty-five, appeared before Police Magistrate Legris in police court charged with a violation of the Canadian immigration laws.

He told an interesting story not the least part of which was a statement that he is the husband of five wives and that these children, of various kinds and colors, call him "Daddy."

Schipo expressed surprise that the court should show signs of shock when he explained his numerous matrimonial entanglements, but assured the magistrate that his wives and progeny are still in South Africa.

As a soldier of fortune, the Zulu has fought for the British flag and beneath it for twenty-eight years, he said, his most active participation being in the Boer war, where he served under Lord Roberts.

Schipo was brought into court because he had been in trouble with the authorities at Welland over a little stabbing affair following which he had gone into the United States. His anxiety to mix up in the present war prevented for his remaining in Canada, he said. The chances are that the man will be given the opportunity he craves.

BIG MINING DEAL AT KIRKLAND LAKE

Buffalo Man Parts With Hundred Thousand

COBALT, March 3—A claim which adjoins the Wright Hargraves property at Kirkland Lake has been sold to Frank L. Cohen, and his associates, of Buffalo.

The transaction is said to involve over $100,000 a portion of which has already been paid over to the vendors. Contractorwork will commences on Monday, and in the early spring operations will be conducted on a somewhat larger scale.

MORE PROGRESS FOR TROOPS BRITISH ON THE ANCRE

Gains on an Extended Front East of Gommecourt on Saturday and Sunday Capture Enemy's Front and Supporting Lines

LONDON, March 5.—Special—The British troops in their forward movement in the Ancre area in France have made another advance east of Gommecourt along a two-mile front of about two-thirds of a mile according to the official report from Headquarters last night. This is in addition to the advance in the same region reported on Saturday night on a front of nearly five miles to a depth of a quarter of a mile. Nearly two hundred prisoners were captured in the latest operations. The texts of the reports read:

"Sunday—This morning we attacked and captured the enemy's front and support lines east of Bouchavesnes on a front of twelve hundred yards, taking 173 prisoners and three machine guns. During the day we repulsed with heavy enemy losses several counter-attacks.

"East of Gommecourt the enemy continues to yield ground. In this neighborhood we advanced along a two-mile front to an average depth of twelve hundred yards.

"Six prisoners were taken in a successful raid last night northeast of Ablaincourt. During the last twenty-four hours we have captured a total of 190 prisoners, five machine guns and two trench mortars."

KINGSTON UNIT WON HUGHES CUP

Recruiting in District Falls Below Standard

KINGSTON, March 3—Recruiting for the last two weeks of February went away below the standard that has made the 3rd military district lead in Canada in the months past. There were 473 new men signed up in the various units.

72nd 30; 73rd, 2; 74th, 2; 75th, 3; 50th Ammunition Column, 6; 253rd, Q.U.R., 48; Q.F. A., 48; C.A.D.C., 1; C.A.S.C., 4; Cyclalists, 2; 2nd Battalion draft, 18.

The list of other battalions reads: 220th, Brockville, 2; 235th, Belleville, 14; 240th, Renfrew, 28; 247th, Peterboro, 18; 252nd, Lindsay, 64; 254th Belleville, 20; 257th, Ottawa, 14.

Won Hughes Trophy

The winner of the Hughes Trophy for the last two weeks in February is the Queen's Field Ambulance Corps which secured 48 recruits. There are now 1,200 men in Canadian Universities training in this district. Of the 400 men enlisted in the Queen's Highland Battalion it was found that the Church of England leads with 104, the Roman Catholics are next with 101, Methodists 64, and Presbyterians 60. Eighty per cent of the recruits are Canadian born.

TURK AMMUNITION BARGES ARE SUNK

LONDON, March 5—Special—The Admiralty announces that in the Mesopotamian operations the river Euphrates Tarsandiah, Akaraiis and Mosh came into contact and passed the Turkish army, while it was retreating to the westward of Shumran on February 26. The gunboats inflicted heavy losses and captured or destroyed four Turkish steamers and a number of barges full of ammunition. The gunboat Firefly was recaptured.

OUTWITTED HIGH COST OF LIVING

GLOUCESTER, Mass., March 3.—Here's chrits for you. A man here advertised in a local paper he would give $5 for the best specimen potato sent him during a certain period. Despite the present value of tubers, fine specimens came in every day until at the close of the contest he had six barrels of choice potatoes—all for $5.

A PATRIOTIC FAMILY

COBOURG, March 3.—Special—Pte Chas. Bennett, son of Mrs. Westlake of this town, who was reported wounded last November, is now reported killed in action. His brother Frank was killed in action last summer; another brother, William, was wounded and a brother-in-law, W. L. Palmer, is a prisoner of war. It is thought that Pte. Frank Bennett, who has also been killed in the heavy fighting around the Somme last November. He was twenty-nine years of age, and unmarried.

WILSON GIVES CALL-DOWN TO A FILIBUSTERING MINORITY

WASHINGTON, March 5.—President Wilson last night informed the country in a statement that he is without power to arm merchant ships and take other steps to meet the German submarine menace, in the absence of authority from Congress, and that he was mistaken when he said in his recent address that he could act under broad constitutional authority.

An extra session of Congress, the President says, is required to clothe him with authority, but it is useless to call one while the Senate works under the present rules which permit a small minority to keep an overwhelming majority from acting.

The President proposes, therefore, that the special session of the Senate which he has called to meet today revise the rules "to supply the means of action and save the country from disaster."

"A little group of willful men," says the President in his statement, "representing no opinion but their own, have rendered the great Government of the United States helpless and contemptible."

ATTACKS AND COUNTER ATTACKS VICIOUS ON FRENCH FRONT

Special to The Intelligencer

PARIS, March 5.—Official statement.—Artillery fighting resumed during detachments made several successful attacks, particularly northwest of Tracy Le Val and in Avocourt wood. Near Troyon in the region of Rheims and at Hill 304, we broke attempts of the enemy to make surprise attacks. In the course of these actions we took a score of prisoners.

On the right bank of the Meuse a bombardment directed principally by the enemy against our positions in the region of Cauriers wood was re doubled in intensity. It was followed at 9 o'clock by a violent attack on the front of three kilometres between Chambettes Farm and Beaonvaux.

Between Cauriers Wood and Beaonvaux, repeated German efforts were broken up by our curtain of fire and machine guns. The enemy gained a footing in our advanced positions north of Cauriers Wood, but his efforts to penetrate the Wood were defeated by our fire. Loses of the enemy were heavy.

Lt.-Col. Barrager, who is stationed at Kingston, spent yesterday in this city with his family

The engagement is announced of Mr. G. S. Clarke, of Detroit, to Miss M. Crosby of this city.

At The Queen Alexandra

Address by Mr. Sneyd and Presentation to The Cadets

A very pleasing function took place Friday afternoon at Queen Alexandra School, No. 2. The occasion of the school assembling in the auditorium was to see the crack shots among the cadets, receive the prizes they so well merited by their excellent shooting. The boys not only covered themselves with laurel, but their school as well, by taking ten out of fifteen prizes given to the cadets of the Public Schools in the city. To win a prize it was necessary to make at least nineteen out of a possible twenty-five. All referees will admit that the boys' shooting augurs well for the future marksmen of Belleville.

Mr. Sneyd, Chairman of the School, and Inspector H. J. Clarke, B.A., officiated in the presentation. They were pleased with the boys' work and encouraged them to do even better. The books given as prizes are excellent works, well bound, instructive and amusing, by the best boys' authors.

Mr. Sneyd gave a very interesting talk to the pupils. He complimented them on the amounts of their savings in the Penny Banks, and exhorted them to bank more, as every penny saved means so much towards assisting the war. He told them about the special war bonds now issued by the Government, which, by buying, each child can materially aid in financing the war.

The speaker then encouraged the boys and girls to have vegetable plots of their very own this summer, and spoke of the probability of prizes being awarded to the pupil growing the best specimens. This all aids in winning the war.

Mr. Sneyd then delighted the children and riveted their fingrest by a vivid description of the submarining menace to England. They listened breathlessly as he described in detail the British method of netting a submarine.

A hearty vote of thanks was unanimously given Mr. Sneyd, voiced by the Principal, Mr. Mott, and our Inspector. All greatly appreciated his talk, and only hope to see him call again.

The following cadets received prizes:

235th Battalion Leave For Ottawa

Despite the inclement weather this morning hundreds of citizens of all classes were present at the Canadian Northern Ontario Railway Station for the purpose of saying good-bye to the officers and men of the 235th Battalion, who entrained for Ottawa, where they will be stationed until they leave for Overseas. Owing to the prevailing storm the proposed march out through Front and other streets was abandoned. Many present at the station expressed regret that the Battalion was leaving the city. The hour of 9.30 was set for entraining but the train which came from Cobourg with the detachments from that town did not arrive until 10.15. From Cobourg the officers and men totalled 83, and a fine body of soldiers they were. As the officers and men marched in front of the station they were loudly cheered. Many of the ladies of the Belleville Khaki Club were present and the soldier boys were remembered with a supply of oranges and cigarettes, which gift it is needless to say was much appreciated. Col. Scobell, officer commanding of the Battalion, thanked the ladies for their kind remembrance. At eleven o'clock the train moved of en-route to the Capital. This will be the last appearance of the Battalion in Belleville. It is expected that the Battalion will go overseas in about six weeks' time.

CALLED BY DEATH.

JOHN J. NEWTON

A well known and much respected citizen in the person of Mr. John J. Newton, passed away on Sunday morning at his late residence, 46 Hillcrest Avenue. Deceased, who was in his 59th year was born in Sherbrooke, Quebec, being a son of the late Mr. John Newton. For the past 35 years he had resided in Belleville. Mr. Newton was by trade a machinist and for years was employed in the Moira and Heathorne Foundry. Of late years owing to ill health, he had been unable to work. Deceased was a member of Belleville Lodge No. 81, I.O.O.F. and in religion an Anglican, being a member of St. Thomas Church. Surviving is a widow, two sons and one daughter. The sons are Harold a member of the 1st Brigade, 2nd Battery in France and Rodney a prisoner of war at Minden, Germany. The daughter is Mrs. R. A. F. Edyvean of this city. The many friends of deceased will regret to learn of his demise.

CAPT. JOHN BONAR

Capt. John Bonar, a former well known and highly esteemed resident of Belleville, died at Cobourg yesterday, and the remains will be brought to this city tomorrow per C.P.R. for interment in Belleville Cemetery. Deceased, who was 83 years of age lived the greater portion of his life in this city. He was a well known captain and was the owner of the tug Ellen Bonar. Of late years he had resided in Cobourg. Mr. Bonar was a well known curler, taking an active interest in the roaring game. He was a member of the Presbyterian Church. He was a member of the Orange Society. One son and one daughter survives.

OBSEQUIES.

JOHN R. SHAW

Mr. Jones, and Rev. Mr. Currie Interment took place at Victoria cemetery. The bearers were Messrs. Cals. H. Gardner, N. Davis, F. Asbley, R. Thrasher, E. Sills and J. McKeown.

The Head of The Church

Clearly Defined by Evangelist Johnston at Campbell Street Advent Hall

The question as to "whom did the Lord appoint as the infallible head of the Church when he left this earth and ascended into heaven?" was very clearly explained last night by Evangelist Johnston in Advent hall two doors west of Y.M.C.A. Taking as his text John 16: 13, 14. He first of all declared that a false and unscriptural theory has been abroad in the earth that Christ before he left appointed Peter as the head and that Peter and his successors have conferred this authority upon various ones right down through the various ages. This position he said is altogether wrong and cannot be supported by the testimony of scripture. It would hardly be likely that Christ would appoint Peter, a man whom he knew would deny him, as someone will say if he did not appoint Peter he would have to appoint someone else, and that someone else would have to be infallible. True and so the Lord did, and our text very clearly proves who this is. John 16:13, 14 says "When he the spirit of truth is come, he will guide you into all truth. For he shall receive of mine and show it unto you." What need therefore is there of having a pope as head when Christ appointed the Holy Ghost, as teacher and guide to the Church. If a Pope is absolutely essential to teach the truth of God and a proper understanding can't be gotten without one, inasmuch as some say here was no Pope before Peter, what did the world do for the first 4000 years of the world's history? Didn't they have a guide? Most assuredly they did, and a number of texts were produced to show that the Spirit of God led the patriarchs and prophets. If, therefore, these people could understand without a Pope, so can we. At least we can understand the epistles of St. Peter if what a Pope says is clear and intelligible and needs no explanation by another, and this is what we contend for in reading the whole Bible. Any man, not a clergy, who studies the Word of God, and is guided by the Holy Ghost, can by this divine help understand the Word of God. Mr. Johnston denied this monstrous claim that a man could be invicted with infallibility, and spoke of many points showing the absurdity of it. A good audience was present.

ONTARIO HAS 800 UNDERTAKERS

TORONTO, March 3.—The Embalmers' Association, which collects for the Provincial Government undertakers' licenses in the province, has turned in to the Provincial Board of Health a sum in excess of $800 as the amount collected for licenses during the past year. As licenses are only $1 a year this shows there are over 800 licensed undertakers in Ontario.

SAY NEW SUBS ARE NOT VERY STRONG

The Crews Are Less Efficient As Well

LONDON, March 3—England has sunk and captured a vastly greater number of German submarines since the German submarine war went into effect February 1, than at any time preceding that decree. It is known that more than one submarine supply station has been discovered and put out of business by British naval vessels.

Evidence is plentiful that the British navy, engaged in the most colossal shark hunt ever known to the high seas, is making a successful hunt of it.

In other words England is getting the German submarines. She is getting them—and she is "getting" them; that is to say she is capturing them and she is sinking them.

What proportion of the number of German submarines mastered by the navy may be catalogued as captures and what proportions as sinkings, can not be given.

The personal disposition of naval officers is to sink rather than to capture, but the size of the captive hauls stowed away in one or two British harbors makes it difficult to believe that more than their number has actually been sent to the bottom.

More than one reason is given for the unquestioned success of the war of extermination against the submarines. One is that the new ocean boats are inefficient of themselves by reason of hasty construction to met the new programme and that their crews are less efficient because of hasty training for the purpose.

Traffic by Air Across Atlantic

VIENNA, March 2.—Herr Fokker, the builder of one of the most successful military flying machines used in the German and Austrian armies, predicts an era of aerial passenger traffic after the war. Speed, he says, is bound to make aircraft a popular vehicle of travel, but only for great distances, for which reason the inventor predicts the successful operation of aircraft on routes between Europe and the United States, which will run in competition with trans-Atlantic liners.

Herr Fokker believes the first attempt to fly from Europe to New York will be made immediately after the war, and asserts the route can be traversed in two days at the outside. He is of the opinion that all technical handicaps will be easily overcome.

NEWSPAPERMAN DEAD

KINGSTON, March 3—Albert E. Shannon, a well-known newspaperman here for many years, died suddenly at Tichborne last night where he was visiting. He was born in Kingston and was engaged on the reportorial staff of The Standard. Two years ago his health broke down. He was an active worker in St. James' Church. He was 51 years old. Col. W. L. Shannon of London is a brother. Three other brothers also survive, R. W. Shannon, Regina; Dr. John R. Shannon, New York; and A. J. Shannon of this city.

JUSTICE DECLARES MARRIAGE INVALID

Case Was Defended on the Ground That Former Husband Had Been Divorced

VANCOUVER, B. C., March 3—Mr. Justice Murphy of the supreme court gave judgment yesterday, declaring a nullity the marriage of Thomas M. Miller and Alice Geneva Allison in Washington. Miller, a British subject, was a petitioner, and the marriage was defended on the ground that Mrs. Allison has secured a divorce in Oregon from her former husband. Mr. Justice Murphy held that the Oregon law requiring a continuous residence of a year had not been complied with as Mrs. Allison was then living with Miller in Victoria, B. C., as his wife, and paid only transient visits to Oregon. In British law, the petition being a British citizen and a British matrimonial domicile intended, the Washington marriage was invalid ab honer declared.

SHOT IN THE HEART LEAVES HOSPITAL CURED

Surgeon, With Aid of X-Rays Performs Wonderful Operation

PARIS, March 3.—Surgeon-Major Buverger, professor to the faculty of medicine at Bordeaux, recently performed an operation at the military hospital at Arts-sur-le-Dour of great interest to medical science.

The doctor, with the aid of X-rays, extracted a bullet from the heart of a wounded soldier which had been there for several months. It was lodged to the depth of fifteen centimetres. Now the man has been able to leave the hospital entirely cured.

THE CREW WAS SAVED

MONTREAL, March 3—Many inquiries have been made respecting the safety of the crew of The Canadian Pacific Steamship Mount Temple, which was recently torpedoed by a German raider. It is officially announced here today by the C.P.O.S. Ltd., that telegraphic information has been received stating that Capt. Sargeant and crew, with the exception of one steward and two sailors are safe and well, but as prisoners are interned at Neu Strelitz. The Canadians, ships' men are practically all horsemen, and all are reported safe.

THREE MONTHS TO BUILD A FOE SUB

New Ones 350 Feet Long, and Well Armed

AMSTERDAM, March 3—The Telegraaf publishes an account of an interview with a German soldier who was for some time serving as a clerk at the Vulcan dockyard in Hamburg, and preferred, to escape across the frontier, than be sent back there in February. There were then in the Vulcan dockyard eight large submarines on the stocks.

These latest submarines are nearly 350 feet long, armed like a small cruiser. They can take 30 torpedoes and a crew of 32. Gangs of 120 men work day and night in each submarine. The completion of a submarine requires three months.

Besides submarines, small cruisers are now building in the Vulcan dockyard of a new class, the so-called Stadt class. These are 420 feet long.

To Abolish An Abuse

Newspapers to be Sold to Offices at Two Cents Per Copy

KINGSTON, March 3.—The While has always been a 2c. evening paper. The rate, of course, to book stores and newsboys has been the wholesale rate of 1c. per copy, thus giving the dealer and the carrier a profit of 4c. a week on each subscription. During the past number of years, owing to the cheapness of newspapers, several abuses have crept into the business. For instance we have paralleled here at this very hour—more smokers are trying Murads for the first time than all other high-grade cigarettes combined.

Almost 100 per cent of these new Murad smokers continue Murad smokers.

What is happening to-day has happened every day since Murads were first introduced.

What is responsible for this?

Not advertising—Quality!

buy papers at the wholesale rate. This practice soon spread to several adults, and as the years went by their number increased. We find now that the abuse has grown to such proportions as to be unjust and unfair to the newsboys who have to tramp the street in all kinds of weather, and again, owing to the increased cost of production the Whig cannot afford to reduce its retail rate now to 1c.

On and after Monday next, March 5th, no papers will be sold over the counter for less than 2c. per copy. The legitimate newsboys and girls can purchase their week's supply as usual at the office on Monday afternoon, receiving tickets therefore. Those who do not receive those tickets will pay 2c per copy in each instance. This should have gone into effect long ago, as it is the only fair method of dealing with the matter. We trust our good friends who have been in the habit of calling at the office each afternoon for their paper, will understand present conditions and smilingly accept the necessary change.

AN INSPIRING ADDRESS

As the war progresses, it is requiring more and more the efforts of every individual citizen of the nations engaged in combating the menace of Prussian militarism. The distantly plot just revealed by which Germany hoped to strike, through Mexico, at the United States, the one great civilized nation that has not yet joined in the fight for civilization, emphasises again the lengths of which Germany is prepared to go for the realization of her ambition. It makes more emphatic than ever the necessity of putting down once and for all this power that recognizes no moral right, that is willing to sacrifice anything on the altar of its aspiration for world domination. Setting out on the policy of utter ruthlessness against neutrals as well as belligerents, the German Government entertained a faint hope that by the practice of hypocrisy, it might keep the United States out of the ranks of Germany's adversaries, but, should this hope be shattered, it was still determined to continue its ruthlessness, minimizing the effect of the entry of the United States into the war by engaging her in a fight with Mexico.

How are we in Canada who are not engaged in military duty to help in this great fight against Germany and Germans? asks the Ottawa Journal—Press. We are not in the ranks of the fighting forces. In what way may we assist?

Sir Thomas White, Minister of Finance, pointed the way in his inspiring address in the St. James' Methodist Church, Montreal, on Sunday last. Speaking from a pulpit, the Minister had a subject that might well be the text of every preacher in the land—"Self-sacrifice and self-denial." It is by self-sacrifice and self-denial that we can do our share, we who are not making the supreme sacrifice in the trenches of Northern France. And as Lloyd George said in his epoch-making speech in the British Parliament the other day, if we do not make these self-sacrifices and those self-denials, we shall be rendering futile the supreme sacrifices that thousands of our men are making in the battle areas.

"This war," Sir Thomas White correctly declared, "is going to be determined as nearly all great wars are determined, notwithstanding the fluctuating swaying fortunes of battles here and there, by attrition, the wearing down process, the preponderance and force of every kind of man power, industrial power, money power, agricultural productive power."

What is the part of non-combatants in this? The Minister answers:

Every man and every woman in Canada can help win this war by practising selfdenial. What I mean by that is that I want the hundreds of thousands of every man, of every woman in Canada, to work harder and spend more to cut down luxuries, unnecessary expenditures, to save their money for the purpose of the war.....

The duty of every man, who can, is to produce anything useful or essential for the nation to strengthen the nation and put forth his utmost effort.

Every citizen who uses more in his household than his household actually needs is increasing the cost of living for those less fortunate and he is hindering the progress of the war. He may not look at it that way but he is doing it. He is creating the very thing that is not good for him and he is depriving something to his neighbor who may have a small salary. Let the rich and the well-to-do help to keep down the cost of living some down. In war time there is a great circulation of money and people spend more, consume more, where they should conserve.

Sir Thomas concluded his Montreal address very appropriately when he pointed to the change in the relationship between the state and the individual that the war has brought about. In the case brought about by Britain's unquestioned security as a nation, "individual liberty was carried to the extreme." Each individual pursued his own purposes having first place in his cohabitation. "The bee became, in his own estimation, of more importance than the hive." Now, our security is menaced. The state must exert itself in self-protection. And so, the nation assumes control again. Again, "the hive is of more importance than the bee."

Current Comment

A despatch to the Central News from Amsterdam says that as a consequence of the sinking of Dutch vessels by German submarines orders have been issued that bread shall be baked in Holland from potato flour.

The Dominion census estimate of the woman's vote in Ontario as a result of the Ontario Government's Women Suffrage Bill is 730,000. The standing strength of men in Ontario is about 700,000, of which forty thousand is at present overseas.

Lieutenant-General Jan Christian Smuts, former commander of the British forces in German East Africa, and a member of the South African Cabinet, has made a party loss-leader of Prohibition.

The sale of all spirits and other alcoholic liquors has been prohibited in Denmark according to a Reuter despatch from Copenhagen. The order is temporary and calls for returns to be made on all stocks of spirits in the country.

The exportation of cyanide of sodium, from Canada to countries other than the United Kingdom, France, Russia and protectorates, has been prohibited by Order-in-Council. The order is proclaimed in the Canada Gazette.

The London, Ont., City Council has unanimously adopted the report of the civic finance committee recommending the voting of $100,000 as the city's share to the Canadian Patriotic Fund and Red Cross Society. Although the campaign has not been officially opened $251,602 unsolicited subscriptions have been received, including the city's grant.

Germany is now drawing upon church bells for war requirements, the order appropriating bronze church bells after March 1st is published in the German press. One bell in a chime may be retained in default of other means for summoning the congregation to worship.

NEW CONCERN IN CHARGE

Dickson Bridge Company Plant Being Rebuilt

CAMPBELLFORD, Mar. 3—Work has begun on the rebuilding of the Dickson Bridge Company's plant here which was burned some weeks ago. It is stated that the National Manufacturing Company, of Ottawa and Brockville, have purchased a controlling interest, but that the firm will still be known as the Dickson Bridge Works Company, Limited.

Men are now at work reconstructing the plant, and A. J. McIver has charge of the work. As the pay roll of the works formerly amounted to about $4,000 per week the industry is a big asset to the town.

TANKS IN ACTION

Widespread Interest Occasioned by Governor's Latest Release

Readers of The Intelligencer and other Canadian papers have noted recently in London cable despatches enthusiastic accounts of this film. It is the first moving picture of the Canadian army in action, and the advance of the tanks, taken at the battle of Courcelette last September.

The film is amazingly vivid," cables F. A. McKenzie, the special despatch to The Toronto Daily Star. "The picture will sweep through Canada like a prairie fire, showing the actuality of war as never before.

This is a film which introduces the tanks—the first picture which has ever been shown. Here in action, the British people all over the world have been wild with curiosity to see what manner of creatures they were. This film shows the tanks on their first and overwhelming introduction to the German at the Somme, Sept. 15 and 16, in conjunction with the victorious attack of the Canadians.

It is for the benefit of theatre managers to secure bookings is said to have exceeded that which met the "Battle of the Somme."

Most Important Picture

The Canadian War Records Office has the handling of rights for Canada in Messrs Jule and Jay J. Allen, of the Famous Players Film Service and the Monarch Film Company, who operate film exchanges throughout Canada from coast to coast, and have large theatrical interests in the chief cities of the west. All the official war films issued by the British Government for exhibition in Canada have been distributed through the agency of the Allens' organizations. This new picture is the first one produced especially for the Canadian War Records Office. It will be handled in the same way as the British pictures, including "British Prepared" (the first of the official series,) "British and Canadian Armies in France," "The Battle of the Somme" and "The King's Visit to the Front." The Intelligencer in lending its auspices to the presentation, believes that this is a picture of greater importance to the Canadian people than any other that has been shown. 16-YEAR-OLD LAD DETERMINED

Father writes That He Will Enlist in Spite Of Age

"He wants to go and he will go with some unit if you won't take him, and moreover, I am proud to say that I have a son who is willing to die," was a sentence in a letter received at the 253rd U.H.I. headquarters from the patriotic father of James T. Gillard, Cardinal. James Gillard enlisted in the 253rd, but was rejected on account of his age, and somehow he was proving to be an excellent Highlander. Though well built and sturdy, he was too small to reject him, and the determined letter came as a result.—Kingston Whig.

ALADDIN AND HIS WONDERFUL LAMP AT GRIFFINS TO-MORROW

When asked the difference between an old country pantomime and an American extravaganza, F. Stuart Whyte (whose production of "Aladdin" will again be seen at Griffin's tomorrow night, March 6) replied that it was "merely in the spelling." "The American Musical Extravaganza, or Broadway Revue, is principally English pantomime painted over with a thick coat of local color," continued Mr. Whyte. "Take for instance Montgomery and Stone's 'Chin Chin' it is simply "Aladdin" localized and tailored to fit those two musical stars."

In speaking of his production here, Mr. Whyte explained that the old country pantomimes were rewritten every season, the dialogue and musical numbers being brought up to the minute and the action being interspersed with bits of satire on the foibles and follies of the day.

"The setting always remains the same—China. For there, anything may happen, both within and without reason. In Mr. Whyte's "all fair-" etc." Among the characters introduced, in addition to the always faithful Aladdin, Widow Twankey, Princess See Shi, etc., we have General Han Tuse, commander in chief of the Chinese Army; The Kaiser. In the guise of a mad musician, and numerous political potentates, whose favorite pastime is putting their hands into the public purse and extracting therefrom the golden shekins, yen, kopecks, century notes, etc.

While on the subject of money, it is opportune to state that Mr. Whyte spent over ten thousand dollars on his "Aladdin" production, and we are assured of a presentation of this piece that would be a credit to any London's Theatre's mid-winter pantomime season.

FANNIE WARD AND CHAPLIN AT GRIFFIN'S TONIGHT

In the production of "Witchcraft," which will be the Paramount attraction at Griffin's Opera House tonight and Palace tomorrow matinee and night with its brilliant and captivating Lasky star, Fannie Ward in the stellar role, it is necessary that she be frightened by a wolf. A thoroughbred animal was procured, but unfortunately it had been raised a household pet by a mother of some little girls and promptly tried to make friends with Miss Ward. It was up to Director Ward to make the wolf snarl at the star, but the animal instead was licking her hand. The feat was finally accomplished by tying a long cord to the wolf's tail and giving it a severe jerk at the psychological moment. Charlie Chaplin also appears on the same programme tonight and tomorrow in one of his guaranteed blood killers entitled, "The Fireman." The Mutual News Weekly will also be presented.

NOTHING BUT HIS LIFE

A "cub" reporter on a New York newspaper was sent to Paterson to write the story of the murder of a rich manufacturer by thieves. He spread himself on the details and naively concluded his account with this sentence: "Fortunately for the deceased, he had deposited all his money in the bank the day before, so he lost practically nothing but his life."

Died Somewhere In France

Sergt. Chas. K. Assselstine of this City Victim of Death—Expired in Base Hospital

A few days ago a message was received in this city that Sergt. Chas. K. Asselstine, who left Belleville with the 155th Battalion, was seriously ill, and yesterday a telegram from the Record Office, Ottawa, conveyed the sad intelligence that he was dead. While it is not definitely known, it is surmised that he died at a base hospital in France, as cards recently had been received from him from France. The brave soldier was well known in this city, where he had resided for the past six years. He, for two years, with Mr. Robert Goudy, conducted the Crystal Hotel in Belleville, and was decidedly popular with the travelling public. Sergt. Asselstine was born at Strathcona, near Napanee, where he resided until moving to this city. He was the second son of Mr. and Mrs. John Asselstine, who reside on Pinnacle street, Belleville. Deceased was a member of the Orange Society, and was a man who was esteemed by all who knew him. His demise will be regretted by a host of friends. A widow and young daughter survive, also his parents, four brothers and two sisters, all of whom live here. To bereaved will be extended the heartfelt sympathy of all citizens.

CITY COUNCIL

A regular meeting of the City Council will be held this evening. There are several matters of more or less importance to be dealt with.

A SLIGHT BLAZE

At 11 o'clock Sunday morning the fire brigade was called out. It appears that a quantity of straw was being burned in rear of the barrack premises on Pinnacle street, when the flames ignited a shed near by. The blaze was fortunately extinguished before any particular damage was done.

A BURGULAR SCARE

At a few minutes before 10 clock this morning the police answered a call to Mr. George Lee's residence, Cedar Street, it being reported that some person was making an attempt to gain admission to the house by the cellar window. The officer answering the call was unable to find any trace of the would-be burgular.

CHURCH PARADES

The 235th Battalion on Sunday morning attended divine service at St. Thomas Church, where the pastor, Ven. Archdeacon Beamish, officiated and delivered an appropriate sermon. The 254th Battalion attended services at Christ Church, were the rector, Rev. Dr. Bingham, officiated and preached. Large congregations were present at both services.

DEATH NOTICES.

Penny Bag Collection For February

"If at first you don't succeed, try, try again."

Not in the least discouraged that we fell a little short of the $300 mark in February, we propose trying to reach that amount in our March collection.

We are much gratified in having the past months collection amount to $275.00, in view of the extra demands for patriotic purposes in February.

We welcome Avondale as a new contributor to our fund for soldiers' requirement, and again wish to thank everyone for the generous assistance given in this effort.

Lieut. Ketcheson Seriously Wounded

Latest Word From Overseas Gives Cause For Fear as to Recovery of Belleville Boy

On February 28, Mayor Ketcheson received word from overseas that his son, Lieut. David Vandervoort Ketcheson, had been wounded on February 22, 1917, and was in a hospital. On March 2, notice was received that his wounds were gunshot-wounds, right arm and back. On the fourth of March the following notice was received: "Wounded, dangerously ill; Fourth General Hospital; may be visited. Will send further particulars when received." It is evident that Lieut. Ketcheson is in a serious condition, but his people and many friends are hoping for the best.

Wright Has Gone Wrong

S. H. Wright, a resident of this city, was today by Magistrate Masson remanded to jail for a week, unless in the meantime he is able to secure bail. The charge preferred against him is theft. It appears that a five gallon cask of liquor was shipped to Belleville for a man who resides some distance outside of the city whose name is the same as the accused. Accompanying the intoxicant was a letter explaining the shipment, etc. This letter was delivered to S. H. Wright, of Belleville, who took same to the proper authorities and secured the cask, from which he extracted some of the beverage. When the real owner arrived in the city and learned of the transaction a warrant was issued for S. H. Wright and he was arrested. The liquor was found in his house.

Belleville Wins From Kingston

KINGSTON, Ont., March 3—Special—In one of the best games of basketball played here this year, the ex-B.H.S. Boys of Belleville, defeated the local Y.M.C.A. team by a score of 21 to 13.

At 8.15 referee Roy Day called the game, and right from the start he was kept very busy for both teams had set a very fast pace. The local's gunner's soon found the range and were leading at the end of the first period by a score of 10—7.

The visitors came on the floor for the second period with a very strong determination of winning and once they found the range it was all up with the locals. In the second period the best that the local forwards could do was to get 3 lonely fouls, while the visitors' forwards ran in 14 points.

The visitors had a strong defence man in Hugh Rogers, who worked like a war horse, while his brother Arthur was not far behind. "Ev." Barlow sped around like a motor boat, and was right there when it came to playing combination with his partner "Pat" Wells who made most of the visitors' points, being right at home on the old Kingston floor. "Nip" French, the visitors centre man, worked hard, but thought basket-ball was too slow, so mixed in a little rugby with the result that he had a number of personal fouls chalked up against him, but nevertheless he is a great pivot man when it comes to playing combination.

Lyle Macaren, of Queen's, was the official timekeeper, and was entirely satisfactory to both teams. After the game the locals entertained the visitors to a dainty banquet.

The line up was as follows.

Kingston.—Forwards, A. Paynter and C. Sutherland; Centre, H. Trotter; Guards, C. R. Powers and G. Clarke.

B.H.I.S.—Forwards E. Barlow and L. Wells; Centre, G. French; Guards H. Rogers and A. Rogers.

Reciprocity is Farmers' Plank

Resolution of Ontario United Farmers—Want British Free Trade

TORONTO, March 3—Reciprocity was unanimously adopted by the 400 delegafes of the United Farmers in convention today accompanied by the demand that the question be submitted by the Government to a referendum.

1. By reducing the customs duty on goods imported from Great Britain to one-half the rates charged under the general staff tariff and that further gradual, uniform reductions be made in the remaining tariff on British imports that will ensure complete free trade between Great Britain and Canada in five years.

2. That the reciprocity agreement of 1911, which still remains on the United States statute bookr, be accepted by the Parliament of Canada.

3. That all the foodstuffs not included in the reciprocity agreement be placed on the free list.

4. That agricultural implements, farm machinery, vehicles, fertilizers, coal, lumber, cement, illuminating oil and lubricating oils be placed on the free list.

5. That the customs tariff on all the necessaries of life be materially reduced.

6. That all tariff concessions granted to other countries be immediately extended to Great Britain.

In the afternoon an address was delivered by Mr. H. W. Wood, president of the United Farmers of Alberta, in which he emphasized that in the future class mobilization for the purpose of serving the great system of trade and commerce would be essential.

To provide additional revenue the convention passed the following recommendation for direction taxation:

"By a sharply graduated income tax upon all incomes over $5,000.

"By a heavy graduate inheritance on large estates.

"By a gradual income tax on the profits of corporations over ten per cent."

They also endorsed the following policies: Nationalization of railway, telegraph and express companies; short term loans granted by auction of natural resources; direct taxation including initiative, referendum and recall; publicity of campaign fund contributions before and after elections; abolition of the patronage system; provincial autonomy in liquor legislation; prohibition of manufacture, export and import; that the extention of the franchises to women shall automatically admit them to the federal franchise.

HOW HE'D FIX IT

A member of the business staff of Robert Mantell, the actor, tells of a conversation he overheard "in front" on the occasion of Mr. Mantell's production of "Hamlet" in a Western town. "Oh, Harry," said the young woman. "I think it's an awful shame to drown Ophelia and kill Hamlet. They ought to have been married."

Whereupon Harry heaved a sigh and looked earnestly at his companion. "I ain't going to say," said he, "but that's how I'd fix it."

BOY HAD CONVULSIONS THREE OR FOUR IN A DAY

Doctors Gave No Hope of Recovery—Used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and Cure was Complete Six Years Ago

Belleville, Ont., Feb. 12—This report will touch the hearts of all parents who are anxious about their weak, puny or nervous children. Because it is so gentle in action and yet powerful in its restorative influence, Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is admirably suited for the treatment of children who are pale and anaemic and lacking in vigor and nerve force.

You can scarcely imagine a better test case than the one described in this letter. This should convince the most skeptical of the certainty with which this food cure nourished the exhausted system back to health and strength.

Mrs. Capt. Smith, 99, John street south, Belleville, Ont., writes: "From the age of one month my little son used to take convulsions, and would sometimes have as many as three or four convulsions in one day. We consulted doctors, but they could give us no hope of the boy's complete recovery. I saw in the newspapers that Dr. Chase's Nerve Food had helped many growing children who were afflicted with nervousness, so I commenced using it with him. From the time I started giving him the Nerve Food, Croft has had only two convulsions, and it is now six years since he has had any trouble at all. He has been going to school for three years and is growing quite strong. I would most highly recommend Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to all people having children effected as was my son."

So many cures of this kind have been reported to us that we can with the greatest confidence recommend Dr. Chase's Nerve Food for the treatment of St. Vitus' Dance, Rickets, Convulsions and all diseases resulting from thin, weak blood and exhausted nerves.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, a full treatment of 6 boxes for $2.50, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting substitute. Imitations only disappoint.

CHAIR DEAL CAUSES A HEATED DISCUSSION

A Motion For An Investigation Before Judge Wills—Allowed to Stand as a Notice of Motion—Insinuations of Graft are Made—Tender Puzzle the Aldermen

The following motion, introduced at the City Council meeting last night, caused one of the most heated discussion that has taken place in the Council Chamber for some time:

Ald. Robinson moved, seconded by Ald. Parks, that charges having been made in the Belleville newspapers that the tenders for chairs for the City Hall, received unfair treatment; therefore that His Honor Judge Wills be requested to investigate the same, under the provision of section 360, chapter 192 R.S.O., 1914, Municipal Act, providing that the cost of said investigation be no more than $100.

As it required a two-thirds rate of the Council to introduce the motion, there was some discussion, but it was carried on the following division:

Yeas—Aldermen Deacon, Parks, St. Charles, Platt, Robinson and Marshall.

Nays—Aldermen Smith and Whalen.

Ald. Robinson, in speaking of the motion, said he had no ill feeling against any person in this matter, but he had been even found fault with in regard to this chair deal. In Mr. Tickell's window there is a chair on exhibition which causes much comment. We cannot allow remarks to be made against the Council and we are being made. He presented the resolution so that the matter can be cleared up. Those interested should welcome an investigation into this matter. The Messrs. Tickell are most respected citizens, their father being mayor of this city at one time. The first are heavy taxpayers, and he (the speaker) thought they had a grievance. It was time that something was done for the good name of the Council for this year. It has come to a pitch that something should be done.

Ald. Parks said this matter should be cleared up. We started last year to decorate the hall, and in mid-summer he asked ex-Ald. Duckworth to ask for tenders for chairs for the hall. Immediately after the speakers left on a meeting of the Council last year, the Council rented, and instructed the janitor to go around and get tenders. The speaker left on purpose to see what would be done. Tenders were received and opened by ex-Alderman Duckworth. The order for the chairs, he was told, was sent in by the city clerk, which was not the fact. The chairs were shipped to the city, and set in the basement of the building, and had to be carried up into the hall. The account was squeezed through the Council, and when he (the speaker) asked what the account was for, he was told it was for chairs for the City Hall.

Ald. Marshall asked that Ald. Robinson leave the matter over until the Mayor is here, as allusion had been made in reference to him. The Mayor was absent from the meeting, and should be present when this matter is discussed.

Ald. Woodley said he was sorry that the Mayor was absent from the meeting. He (the speaker) did not know who was responsible for anything wrong, if there was a wrong in the tender. He read the following:

Methods of Robinson and Ald. Smith tried to influence improperly, either directly or indirectly to the slightest, the action of the Market and City Property Committee in regard to the purchase of chairs for the City Hall.

The transaction was made in perfect good faith, with a view to the best interests of the city. If an error was made, which in our opinion is still open to question, it was due to Ex-Alderman Duckworth's misinterpretation of the tender of Messrs. Tickell Sons Co., who quoted four prices, ranging from $1.35 to $2.00 per chair.

The action of the Committee was unanimous, and thereby, we, the undersigned, at that time assumed, and we hereby reaffirm our full responsibility in connection with the transaction.

(Signed)

W. A. WOODLEY.
E. O. PLATT.
W. B. DEACON.
JAS. O. ST. CHARLES.
CHAS. WHELAN.

Ald. Robinson—I did not say a word about the Mayor or any person else. All the motion asked that the matter be investigated by Judge Wills. Perhaps Ald. Smith did something illegal in the transaction, and perhaps not. This was not the place to investigate the matter. We should speak of the resolution and nothing else.

Ald. Woodley—The tender of Messrs. Tickell & Sons appeared to be complicated, and he would like to have it read.

The tender was read, and is as follows:

In reply to requisition, we advise that we will supply chairs, similar to those in the City Hall, with the bent rungs, supporting legs, at $1.35 each; if required with the rungs as supporting legs, at $1.85 each. If chairs are required to be an exact match of those already in the hall, we quote $2.00 each with straight rungs supporting legs, and $2.00 each if required with the rungs supporting the legs.

Yours respectfully,
TORKELL & SONS Co.

Ald. Smith asked if any member of the Council ever heard him submit any other price than $1.50 per chair. He said he did not want to have anything to do in the transaction. He did not buy them, and did not supply them to the city.

All the aldermen, who were present, stated they did not hear Ald. Smith give any other quotation than $1.50.

Ald. Platt—No member of the Council last year made a cent on the transaction, and we will be throwing away $4000 if we have an investigation to satisfy curiosity. That would be a reckless expenditure of the city's money.

Ald. Parks—I never was notified of a meeting of a committee meeting, when chairs were spoken of, or any tender submitted.

Ald. Woodley—I want this matter ferreted out but I do not thing $100 should be thrown away.

Mr. J. L. Tickell was allowed to speak and in speaking of the chairs said the city supplied said they were billed in by the Dominion Bedding Company of which Ald. Smith is connected with. This matter might have been settled if the Mayor had not got mighty and hot under the collar. The Mayor told the speaker that he would not answer any communications in the newspapers. The Mayor stated to him that neither he (the speaker) nor members of the Council got any profit on the chair deal. He (the speaker) would like to know where the profit went. The chairs were quoted at $1.50 and were procured for a less figure. Did the K.K.K. Company of this city, of which the Mayor is a member get the profit? He was asking for an investigation from a higher authority than the Mayor of Belleville.

Ald. Platt asked Mr. Tickell if the chairs were the same, was they shipped back to the city or some charitable institution if that would settle the matter.

Mr. Tickell—If the entire profit is handed back to the city that will satisfy me. We put in an intelligent tender and it was not accepted.

Ald. Smith—I put no interpretation on the tender of Mr. Tickell. Ald. Duckworth put the interpretation on the tender at $1.55 per chair. The transaction was made in perfect good faith.

Ald. Woodley—Ex-Ald. Duckworth was the one that had the tender and if there was a mistake, he, Alderman Duckworth must have made it.

Ald. Deacon—It is a serious thing to accuse a Mayor or an Alderman of graft on the street. He (the speaker) heard ex-Ald. Duckworth say that $20 could be saved the city on the chair deal if the matter was virtually left in his hands. Last year the council spent upwards of $200,000 and there was nothing so great, but it is alleged there has been graft in this transaction. Ald. Parks said he knew there was nothing to be something wrong and he runs out of the city building.

Ald. Parks—Yes. To see what you would do.

Mr. Tickell in referring to the tender submitted by his firm, and explaining the three different kinds of chairs referred to said that Ald. Smith was a furniture dealer should know

SPLENDID LECTURE DELIVERED BEFORE WOMEN'S CANADIAN CLUB

Those of the Women's Canadian Club, who last evening dared the weather and ventured forth were rewarded with a rare treat in the lecture of Rev. Dr. Arthur Phelps on "The Poets Of Today."

This talented young speaker who resides in the village of Bath on the Bay of Quinte, in opening, stated that he had driven fifteen miles facing yesterday's blizzard in order to keep his engagement with the club, and asked the indulgence of the audience if he should not bring quite all his usual energy and enthusiasm to the task before them. Later, however, only the highest praise for his charm and manner and his masterly use of English was heard from the members.

He very much deplored the melancholy view taken by most people of their own. They view the accomplishments of the past with joy and pride, they gaze abend and trust that the future will bring to us the greatness that was ours in the past—but the present age is only sordid and material.

He then stated that his object was three-fold, first to prove the real poetry of our material age; second, to show the function of the poet in releasing the latent poetry which everywhere surrounds us; thirdly to show that our own age is full of promise and tremendous power waiting to awake and receptive to the poetry of life as expressed for us by our great poets.

He quoted an exquisite gem written by Francis Thompson an English poet, entitled, "The Kingdom of God," showing that it is not in the great, incomprehensive things that we find God, but in the wonder of the commonplace. In our shops, on our streets, in all sorts of queer byways of life, are our poets. They have not yet learned to express themselves as greatly as we should wish, but as we learn to demand this of them, they will rise to our requirements.

Who has not stood under the broad blue sky, the vaulting dome beneath their feet thrilling with new life, and longed for expression? Or gone suddenly into a room to be held breathless by the unfolding beauty of a bowl of roses, it is the function of the poet to interpret. He is possessed, musical rhythm those emotions which we cannot express for ourselves. The mechanic working surely, steadily on the dark web of steel dizzily outlined against the blue sky far overhead, is a poet; but how shall he express the wonder of his work or put in words the joy of life that fills him? Only the gift of the poet can do that.

The world has been doing business for a long time, it is almost ready to live now," said Walt. Whitman. This is very true. The materialism has been necessary and certain in a new country where there is still pioneer work to be done. But this war is bringing us back to deeper spiritual values, painful though the process may be, and when it is over we shall have no more aristocracy, no more of the shifting of values, not the plutocrat, but the man of real wisdom and noble sympathy will be held in honor. We have again with us the wandering singer of other days, for many of our returned soldiers, crippled, unable to do their work, are going about with a song in their hearts and long to give it expression. We, too, shall be eager to hear.

He then gave a brief outline of the outstanding poets of our day, dividing them into four classes, those who are wedded to the conventional methods of the past, the mystics and symbolists, the realists, and the idealists or free verse poets. He pointed out the virtues of each, naming examples and quoting from their works.

We said we were lucked any really great poets id Canada, any world fixures, but had many of those who were really wanting in the right direction, and with the encouragement of the public would some day attain to greater things. He mentioned among them Dr. Wilfrid Campbell, who addressed the Club a short time ago. Our part is to endeavor ourselves to the appreciation of good work and then to demand a high standard.

A hearty vote of thanks was tendered the speaker and Miss Nation sang Anthem closed the evening.

The Women's Canadian Club have had, during the past season, a most excellent succession of lectures. They have been in nearly every case, as is to be expected at this time, on some phase of the great war. Dr. Phelps offered, however, a very acceptable and, certainly, a most excellent touch of variety to the season's programme. It is greatly to be regretted that the unfavorable weather prevented a large number attending.

LIVELY MEETING OF THE BELLEVILLE LEGISLATURE

Numerous Matters Submitted to the Tribunal and Disposed of Session Lasted Until Near the Midnight Hour—What Was Accomplished

It was near the midnight hour last night when the order of business of the City Council to adjourn was reached. The greater portion of the time of the session was taken up in a heated discussion on the chairs purchased for the City Hall last year. A report of this discussion appears elsewhere in this issue. The general business of the Council was despatched without much discussion.

In the absence of Mayor Ketcheson Ald. Woodley acted as Mayor protem. The other Aldermen present were Smith, Deacon, Marshall, Robinson, Parks, Whalen, Platt and St. Charles.

After the reading and confirming of the minutes of the last meeting, the communications, petitions, reports of committees, &c., were on motion laid upon the table.

On motion the Council went into committee of the whole on reports, etc. Ald. Parks in the chair.

The accounts recommended to be paid by the various committees were passed as were also some recommendations which have already been published.

Two accounts for hauling of coal from Massassaga Park to the pump house amounting to $45 were passed.

A complaint that water was allowed to remain on the sidewalk near the corner of West Bridge and Everett street was made, and some was asked to be remedied—Referred to Public Works Committee.

The Legal Department of the City Solicitor Council in reference to the construction of a new highway bridge over the railway tracks on North Front street. The city was asked to sign one of the orders of the Railway Board.

A report was presented by a committee composed of Ald. Whalen and Street Foreman, who had made an examination of the plan of the proposed new bridge. It would be 20 feet in width. The grade would be two feet higher than at present.

Ald. Parks spoke in favor of having two foot walks and also stated that the city should see that it was protected in every way.

Ald. Whalen—What about having a sidewalk on the west side of the bridge.

Ald. Woodley—The city must be protected in this matter. The committee should report on having foot walks on both sides of the bridge.

Ald. Parks—The C. P. R. builds the bridge and maintains it.

Ald. Parks—The Dominion Board has accepted the plan of the bridge. The Council should ask for two walks and also see that the grading is properly done and not exceeding the extra raise of two feet.

The report of the committee was adopted, recommending that two-foot walks be built on the new bridge.

Mr. J. Butler was present on behalf of the Trades and Labor Council in reference to the P. Cote property near the rolling mills, which is flooded at times, and asked to have same remedied, or an action would follow.

Ald. Whalen—When the water is high on the bay there will be, water in the above property.

The matter was referred to the Public Works Committee.

Mr. Lockie Wilson wrote the Council urging that all vacant lots in the city of Belleville be this year put under cultivation.

The matter was allowed to remain on the table for further consideration.

The letter of Mayor Ketcheson to Lt.-Col Scobell expressing regret at the removal of the 235th Battalion to Ottawa was read and ordered to be filed.

RE FIRE HORSES

The Special Committee appointed to make a report re the city purchasing horses and making other recommendations reported as follows:

Belleville, March 5th, 1917.

Mayor Ketcheson,
and Members of City Council.

Your committee beg leave to submit the following report re. the contract for horses for the Fire Department:

At present this contract calls for an expenditure of $2050.00 per annum for the use of six (6) horses—three for drivers in the Fire Department assume the duties of looking after the horses.

(1) This committee would recommend that the City purchase at once four (4) horses at a price to be agreed upon.

(2) One (1) fully equipped Motor Fire Truck, 1½ tons capacity with chemical equipment—to cost not more than $3500.00.

(3) We would also recommend that the Auxiliary Firemen be reduced from ten (10) to five (5) men—at an annual salary of $75.00 each.

(4) That the duties of the Fire Chief and Assistant Fire Chief be defined—and embodied in the By-Laws employing them.

The purchase of the horses and Motor Fire Truck will entail a capital expenditure of about $4000.00.

The annual charges for same would be:

Interest 6 per cent. on $4000.00 ..... $240.00
Upkeep of four (4) horses 600.00
Expense of maintaining truck 150.00
Total $900.00

There will be annual saving over present contract for horses of $1060.08
Saving in Auxiliary Firemen 825.00

Making a total saving of $1885.08

The above recommendations have been arrived at after careful consideration—and after consulting the Fire Chiefs of Toronto and Hamilton.

We feel the city would have a much improved equipment and without increasing the efficiency of the Department.

Yours respectfully,
ALD. ST. CHARLES,
ALD. DEACON,
ALD. WHALEN,
Committee.

Ald. St. Charles moved that the report be referred to the Special Committees to be held next Friday evening and he would have catalogues at the meeting and also prices of motor trucks.

Ald. Parks said he had examined the list and had seen a number of trucks and the one proposed by the committee he thought would do for this city.

The report was referred to the Special Committee.

A report re contemplated improvements to the pump house by way of installing pumps was referred to the Water Works Committee.

On motion a tender of the Ontario Typewriter Company to print loose cheque books for $24 was accepted, and Ald. Parks, chairman of Printing and Supplies, was authorized to procure same.

Mr. J. L. Tickell, who was present, being called upon said he was waiting to see what would become of a resolution which he understood was to be introduced in the Council.

The committee rose and reported. The report was received and adopted.

ENQUIRIES.

Ald. Parks asked that the order books were gotten for?

Ald. Woodley—They were got for the various committees and are being used.

Ald. Parks asked why Alderman Duckworth did not stay at the Council Committee meeting and answer questions re the chair deal?

Acting Mayor Woodley—I cannot answer that question.

Ald. Parks—Does any one know the name of the Company that has bought out the Maple Leaf Tire Limited?

The inquiry could not be answered.

Ald. Whalen asked for new stationery for the Council proceedings.

Ald. Parks—The same will be procured.

MOTIONS

Ald. St. Charles duly seconded by Ald. Smith that a committee composed of Aldermen St. Charles, Parks and Whalen be appointed to get samples and prices of suits for firemen and report to the Council—Carried.

Ald. Deacon moved, seconded by Ald. Marshall, that the re-City Engineer Mr. J. W. Evans be reengaged as manager of the water works department at a salary of $50 per month.

Ald. Robinson moved and amendment that it be referred to the special Salary Committee on Friday night. He considered the motion was important at present. He (the speaker) before Mr. Evans re-engaged would like to know what was being done with large accounts presented to the Council by Mr. Evans. It was an outrage to engage him at the present time. The motion should be withdrawn.

Ald. Parks, asked if there was any immediate need of a manager right away. Would any mains be put down now?

Ald. Deacon—No mains would be put down until the frost is out of the ground. We have a $300,000 water plant and some one must manage it. He (the speaker) had been doing the work, but his business was such that he could not attend to all details. The water works department at present is in a rather critical condition, and he would urge that Mr. Evans be engaged.

Ald. Platt was of the opinion that the Council should not reengage Mr. Evans. On Friday next the matter could be discussed.

The amendment of Ald. Robinson prevailed.

Ald. Smith moved, seconded by Ald. Platt, that the Council having heard with deep regret that Lieut. Sgt. V. Ketcheson has been severely wounded, hereby record its expression of sympathy with the Mayor and family and hope for a speedy recovery of his valiant son.

ACTED RATHER STRANGELY

Pew Owner of Church Did Not Welcome Stranger.

An incident in a Kingston church last evening caused some unpleasantness among the members. A strange lady attended the church and was shown by an usher to a pew rented by a member. Shortly afterwards the pew owner arrived, and after much fussing and "snobbing" informed the stranger that she owned the pew and paid for all of it. There was room for three more in the pew and the action of the owner of said pew has caused some to wonder just where church people, professed followers, etc., draw the line of brotherhood and Christian hospitality.—Kingston Standard.

BELLEVILLE MANAGER WON THE PRIZE

At a meeting of the Griffin Theatrical Managers held in Toronto a day or two ago, Mr. H. J. Perham, of the Belleville Opera House and Palace Theatre was awarded a substantial prize by the Head Office. The best operating figures given by the Griffin's chain of theatres, an honor well deserved, for a more painstaking manager cannot be found throughout the system. Mr. Perham's innumerable Belleville friends will, with The Intelligencer, extend hearty congratulations, feeling assured that the splendid service to local patrons will be continued.

"ALADDIN AND HIS WONDERFUL LAMP," RETURNS TO GRIFFIN'S TONIGHT

An attraction unique in the annals of the Canadian Stage, will be F. Stuart Whyte's production of the famous pantomime, "Aladdin and His Wonderful Lamp," which returns to Griffin's tonight, March 6th.

As most everyone knows, an English pantomime is closely allied with the American Musical revue, or extravaganza; in fact such productions as are staged at the New York Winter Garden and similar places of amusement, are based entirely upon the old pantomime.

Mr. Whyte has built a production and assembled a cast for his "Aladdin" that would be hard to excell, even in New York or Chumley.

The costumes are by Madame Celestine, the book and lyrics by F. Stuart Whyte, and the music and numbers are the collaboration of Pierre Duval, Clive Hamilton and Sydney Roche, the three composers responsible for more English Musical successes than any other trio of song writers in the world.

The seven Royal Hyena Japs are also with the production.

FANNIE WARD AND CHARLIE CHAPLIN AT PALACE TONIGHT

Fannie Ward appears at the Palace tonight in a five part Lasky photo-play entitled "Whom to Marry." Besides this offering Charlie Chaplin also appears on the same programme in one of his very best comedies entitled "The Floorwalker." The Mutual new weekly and a selected program of two-reel dramas will also be exhibited.

A wonder play of diplomatic intrigue, with the secret of an American invention of a tremendous destructive engine of war at stake, fought for by the representatives of two warring countries, with Leonore Ulrich, the popular dramatic star, as the Countess Sonia Varnli the intermediary for one, is the latest Pallas picture offering, which is announced for exhibition at the Palace tomorrow and Thursday matinee and night. Miss Ulrich's role teems with exciting incidents and situations. Sent to obtain the secret of the invention from the American engineer, she finds a strange combination of circumstances confronting her, chief of which is that in the young American inventor she discovers her ideal of manhood. The outcome of a serious, deep laid international plot, with the countess lose and yet victorious provides the main theme to a wonderful story. Besides this offering the 15th chapter of the mysterious Crimson Stain" series will also be exhibited, along with an amusing comedy.

"THE BUGLER OF ALGIERS", AS INSPIRATION TO LOYALTY, AT GRIFFIN'S FRIDAY

The bugler a prisoner in the hands of the enemy, was ordered with his kit, the reward, to sound the "retreat," that his countrymen, giving battle with in sound of his bugle-calls, might hear, but the brave boy sounded, instead, the "charge," and defeat was turned into glorious victory. On this incident hinges the patriotic appeal of "The Bugler of Algiers," a Blue Bird photoplay, to be exhibited at Griffin's next Friday and Saturday, with a matinee performance on Saturday, with Ella Hall, Joseph Singleton, Kingsley Benedict and Little Zoe Rae playing the principal roles. Here is a gripping story that appeals to loyalty and love of flag—a military drama bringing patriotic inspiration to man, woman and child of every nation.

Prevention of Coal Shortage

This winter we have had a coal "famine" and that suffering has accompanied the shortage of this necessity is undeniable. The average citizen has a notoriously short memory, but now is the time to impress upon him that, in many cases, the suffering was due to lack of foresight. In Canada, many people buy in small quantities—often only one ton. If, for any cause, there is a shortage of coal, improvident householders demand that the coal dealers do the impossible, namely, that they supply fuel that is unobtainable. Whereas, had they purchased their coal in the summer or autumn, there would be ample supplies available.

While some large consumers, such as manufacturers, cannot store a six months' supply, most householders can, with their present bins or with enlarged bins, store coal to meet their requirement till March or April.

In recent years, we have had two coal "famines," first in 1901-02, the year of the coal miners' strike, and second, this year, when the severity of the weather and the extraordinary prosperity of the United States caused an unprecedented congestion of the freight. A survey of conditions in the United States destinonstrates that in the future there will be more coal "famines" than in the past and that they will occur at shorter intervals. For this there is only one remedy: BUY YOUR COAL IN THE SUMMER. IF YOU HAVE NOT SUFFICIENT STORAGE, ENLARGE YOUR COAL-BIN.

FINE SLIDES TO BE HAD FREE

An Ontario minister of the gospel the other day borrowed from the Military Hospital's Commission, a set of lantern slides. These slides show what goes on at the hospitals and sanatoria. That is, they show something of how our injured soldiers are being restored to health and to power for self-support, how every serious their injuries may be. The minister exhibited the slides at three country churches under his charge. Returning the slides he writes:

"My recording steward, who is also the post-master and chairman of the local recruiting league, says they should be shown in every community. They meet the unrest in many families who have feared that the maimed soldier return will be forced to sell lead pencils or such like.

"What I should have done was to ask for them for a longer period and put them on in every available church in this district. A man with a well prepared lecture and a set of local slides could render a valuable service to the country, both in allaying the unrest above referred to and in removing the prejudice in some families from which recruits might be secured."

The slides, with explanatory notes, may be borrowed by ministers and other responsible persons free of charge. Application should be made to the Military Hospitals Commission, 22 Victoria Street, Ottawa.

WILLARD IS HEAVY DISLIKES TO TRAIN MUSCLES ARE SOFT

Could Not Get Ready for Fight on Very Short Notices

NEW YORK, March 5—Despite the stories that Willard has been training hard and could get ready to fight at short notice, it is known that he now is between 200, and 300 pounds. His muscles have softened and have completely disappeared under the thick layer of fat that covers his body. Always slothful and having a great dislike for the hard grind of training, he is less inclined than ever to begin hard work.

If Willard fights again it will take many weeks for him to round into as good shape as he was in when he met Frank Moran last year, and even then he was many pounds over weight. Unless he begins at once to prepare, it will not be possible for him to do the public justice in a battle during April.

From the fact that the members of Jess Willard syndicate are so busy trying to form new connections, it is apparent that the big champion intends to retire in the very near future. Willard has not as yet signed a contract to travel with a circus this year, and it is not certain whether he will.

At the close of last year's tour Will lard was thoroughly disgusted with conditions and he told friends that he was through. Perhaps, after having a long rest, he has changed his mind, but from the actions of the syndicate it would appear that he is about ready to cast the gloves aside for all time and retire to private life.

The assertion that only a giant could possibly have a chance with either Jesse Willard or Fred Fulton is a marked reflection on the ability of the reverend John L. Sullivan, Jim Corbett and Bob Fitzsimmons, all of whom are supposed to be for superior to the present-day set of heavies. It is a physical impossibility for any man, of normal proportions to annoy the two giants now on top; then the old-timers must now be regarded as second raters, for none of the three was particularly big.

If the proposition that Willard and Fulton are too big is upheld, the proposition in regard to the sounding of Sullivan, Corbett and Fitz must be repudiated. As a matter of fact, the truth probably lies between the two ideas. Few of those who have seen Fitzsimmons in action would care to wager that Fulton could have stayed in the same ring with him for ten rounds.

That Fitzsimmons, even though he weighed only middleweight limit when at his best, would have had more than a good chance to defeat Willard is disproved by the freckled warrior's two battles with Jim Jeffries. The latter was not as tall a man as Willard by several inches, but he was even more rugged and probably much stronger. By the time that Jeffries and Fitzsimmons fought their second battle the one-time boilermaker had become as clever as Willard is today, and yet the only thing that saved him from being knocked out by the ancient middleweight was that the latter's middle hands could not stand the strain.

Willard and Fulton stand out today partly because of their great size, but more because there are no other first-class men to furnish any opposition. Billy Miske, while a good all-round man, is not a great fighter by any means. But give Miske something of Fitz's hitting ability and there would be no talk of Fulton being too big for him.

CONVICT FONDLED HOUNDS

MOULTRIE, Ga. March 5—Warden J. B. Lamar, of this county, has no more patience with blood hounds. Here is the reason: H. D. Beeres, a prisoner escaped from the chain gang.

Two bloodhounds were put on the fleeing man's trail. It was hot and they followed it easily. Beeres found the convict he quickly made friends with the two dogs.

Beeres was then joined by a clever idea that resulted in his making good his escape. He decided that he would pretend he was a trusty in search of a prisoner that escaped, so he came boldly into the open and asked every person he met:

"Have you seen an escaping convict?"

So well did Rogers' bluff work that some of those he questioned thought he was sort of assistant warden, despite the fact that he wore a "zebra" suit.

The prisoner finally reached a house where the family was away, and here he got a suit that was not quite so conspicuous. He took the dogs on with him.

MRS. J. W. BELL

WOMEN workers have been so successful in the factories in Great Britain that they are being tried in the great workshops of Canada. Everywhere they are proving themselves to be keen rivals to men, and it is now evident that the boom is not the only place where a woman may excel in work calculated to advance the welfare of mankind. The Canadian Pacific Railway Co. has sent thousands of its male employees for service in Europe, and as a consequence male workers have become scarce in various departments of industry. In 1916 women workers were introduced into the Canadian Pacific Angus Shops at Montreal. At present there are two hundred of them engaged in the shops.

These women workers have been organized and work under the supervision of Mrs. J. W. Bell, wife of Mr. Bell, superintendent of the Montreal Windsor Street Station building. Mrs. Bell is enthusiastic over the success of the efforts of those entrusted to her charge, and considers that the field of manual labor requiring skill and application is one in which women will yet exercise a wide influence.

A visit to the women workers in the Angus Shops is inspiring. The women punctually reach their labors at 7.15 a.m., and finish at 4.45 p.m., allowing for the lunch hour, between 12 and 1 o'clock. They work eight and a half hours a day. Watching the women girls doing cheerfully to the scene of their exertions one might feel that he is observing the world-march away from the old era of prejudice and convention and entering a period of freedom and common-sense. The spheres of the activity of the Angus Shops women workers are made cheerful and comfortable as it is possible to make them. Each woman has a locker in which she places her belongings before donning her overalls and cap. At the outset of the experiment it was difficult to induce some of the women to take kindly to the garments which tradition had marked out as male preserves, but after a little while every woman found these working dresses were more convenient than skirts. The overalls have been a distinct recommendations; they are tidy, they are sanitary, and they are safe, allowing their wearers to move amongst the machines without danger of being drawn into them by loose clothes.

The women work on the piece system, and they are paid at the same rate as their brothers. They work amongst the men with the harmony that prevails in offices where there are female and male clerks. In the Angus Shops the women are to be found sweeping, coach washing, coach painting, working on drills at lathes, at various kinds of machinery, filing and drilling in the brass shops, brass polishing, operating nut-tapping machines, cleaning dynamos in the electrical department, assisting in the steamfitting centre, and making mattresses and pillows. No woman is asked to do heavy work.

Each has to bring the material for their lunch with them, and in this they may prepare in the lunch room which accommodates two hundred. Soup and bread are provided by the Company at cost price. Attached to the lunch room is a rest room, and near the rest room is a first aid room, where any accidents that may occur are treated. No less than seventeen of the women workers hold certificates of proficiency in first aid work. Should any accidents occur the services of these trained women are very valuable.

There has been no scarcity of applications for work at the Angus Shops. Hearing of the liberal treatment which they receive women have been attracted to secure work there, but only those who are specially in need of employment are taken on. Many of the workers are widows, soldiers' wives, or women who are the sole means of the support of others. These plucky and industrious women honest for considerable distance to strain on the Patriotic, Red Cross, and other charitable funds.

Mrs. Bell makes a thorough investigation of the circumstances of each woman before she is given employment, and the utmost care is kept on each worker for the first month after her appearance in the workshops. This is done so as to guard against the danger of alien sentiment, for many nationalities are represented among the female employees at the Angus Shops. Mrs. Bell says that every effort is made to have each woman placed at the task that is most congenial to her tastes and ability. Those who show exceptional talent and skill are promoted. There have been instances where girls entered as such washers and in a short time found themselves installed as office assistants. Many of the workers, says Mrs. Bell, "are one hundred per cent efficient, and this standard is in no small way due to the suitable conditions under which the women perform their tasks. The women are reliable and models of punctuality, and only in rare cases there is illness of the worker or some member of her family that keeps absent themselves from duty. Women are decided success in the Angus Shops."

NO BOXES FOR TWO

She was a careless girl to put the subscriber on the wrong number. Being in a hurry, the subscriber promptly asked for a box for two. "But we don't have boxes for two," said the girl, and at the other end of the line, "Why, isn't that the theatre?" he inquired. "No," was the reply "this is Blank's, the undertaker."

WOMAN'S SUFFRAGE.

Does it Extend to Dominion Elections?

Mr. Johnson in moving the second reading of his Bill enfranchising women, said it should be brought about by a simple change of a word in the Manhood Suffrage Act to make the word "man" where it occurred in the Act read "person." "A simple stroke of the pen will do it," remarked Mr. Johnson, "and bring about this great and important step in legislation."

This seems to be doubted by some lawyers. A correspondent in Ottawa, writes to the Daily News of Toronto of date March 2nd as follows:

Constitutional lawyers are of the opinion that, contrary to the general understanding, women's suffrage, although granted by five Provinces, does not, under the Dominion law, extend to the Federal franchise in these Provinces. In Saskatchewan and Alberta there is no doubt that under the Dominion Act the women have not been granted the ballot for Federal purposes. While the Provincial lists are accepted by the Dominion as the Federal lists, an exception was made by the Laurier Government of Saskatchewan and Alberta. In these two Provinces the Dominion prepares the list. The law is clear that the franchise is extended only to "every male person."

In Manitoba, British Columbia and Ontario, where the women are or are to have the franchise the law is not so clear. A hurried examination would look as if the fact that the Provincial lists are accepted as the basis for the Federal lists would mean the inclusion of the women but constitutional lawyers of undoubted standing who have been making a study of the subject have come to the contrary conclusion. They believe the Dominion Act, as it now stands, would not give the franchise to women for a Federal election.

It can be stated definitely that the Cabinet has not considered the question of a new Dominion Franchise Act, as has been intimated. The Government will be extended for another year and in such a case there would be no necessity of considering the revision of the Franchise Act when Parliament reassembles.

SYRNEY'S CONFESSION.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier is fond of posing as the farmer's friend. One of the most oft-repeated tales in Liberal mythology is the claim that the late Government was the benefactor of agriculture, that under it farmers flourished, and, that, if there is at present a falling off in production in Canada it is directly traceable to Conservative lethargy when the interests of the farmers are concerned.

Some interesting, not to say amusing, light was shed upon these claims the other day by no less a personage than the Hon. Sydney Fished. Mr. Fisher was Minister of Agriculture in the Laurier Administration from 1896 till its defeat in 1911, and what he says in regard to his party's attitude and achievements for agriculture will be accepted as fairly strong evidence by most fair-minded Liberals. Here is what he had to say on the subject in an address to the Westmount Canadian Club recently, as reported in the Liberal Montreal Herald:

"Canada is said to be an agricultural country, but we have progressed less in agriculture than in any other country. A study of the census figures between 1901 and 1911 revealed some startling facts. During these years the population of the country had increased nearly 50 per cent. The number of people employed in transportation had increased 300 per cent; those employed in distribution systems had increased 250 per cent.; those engaged in manufacturing had increased 115 per cent.; while those engaged in agriculture had only increased 27 per cent.; thus proving that Canada was stimulating every other industry except agriculture and this was gradually being crushed."

Here we have in the bluntest possible language the confession from Laurier's own Minister of Agriculture that the late Government, this "friend-of-the-farmer" administration, adopted such an attitude toward agriculture between 1901 and 1911 that it was "gradually being crushed." And Mr. Fisher, in further proof of his assertion, goes on to say:

"In 1901 the rural population of Canada was 62 per cent of the whole, and the remaining 38 per cent was an urban population, but in 1911 the rural population had decreased to 55 per cent while the urban population had increased to 45 per cent."

It will be well to fyle away Mr. Fisher's confession of the plain truth about the Laurier Administration and the farmer. It may come in handy at the next election when counterfeit reformers will again be shouting about Sir Wilfrid as the "farmer's friend."

The Poet's Corner

NOT HIS JOB

"I'm not supposed to do that," said he
When an extra task he chanced to see,
"That's not my job, and its not my care,
So I'll pass it by and leave it there."
And the boss who gave him his weekly pay
Lost more than his wages on him that day.

"I'm not supposed to do that," he said,
"That duty belongs to Jim or Fred."
So a little task what was in his way
That he could have handled without delay
Was left unfinished; the way was paved
For a heavy loss he could have saved.

And time went on, he kept his place
But he never altered his easy pace,
And folks remarked on how well he knew
The line of the task he was hired to do;
For never once was he known to turn
His hands to things not of his concern.

But there in his foolish rut he stayed
And for all he did he was fairly paid,
But he was never worth a dollar or more
Than he got for his toil when the week was o'er;
For he knew too well when his work was through
And he'd done all he was hired to do.

If you want to grow in this world, young man,
You must do every day all the work you can;
If you find a task, though it's not your bit,
And it should be done, take care of it:
And you'll never conquer or rise if you
Do only the things you're supposed to do.

Does it Mean New Execution?

Was This Britisher Done to Death? Germans Say He Died Insane

BERLIN, March 5.—The death of Captain William Martin, skipper of the British trawler King Stephen, a prisoner of Germany, is announced by the Lokal Anzeiger. The Overseas News Agency quotes the Lokal Anzeiger, on his death, as follows:

"Captain Martin, according to reports in English newspapers, died as the result of persecution. They say that he received threatening letters from English people, who mean well toward the Germans, and he was so deeply moved by them that he finally became insane.

"Captain Martin on February 2, 1916, ordered that the crew of the disabled airship L-19 should perish miserably. His death perhaps will be a warning to some of his comrades."

Captain William Martin, of the trawler, King Stephen, according to despatches from London, dated February 4, 1916, declared that he saw the German, Zeppelin L-19 in a wrecked condition in the North Sea, and that he did not save the crew of the Zeppelin because he feared the Germans would overpower the small crew of the trawler if he took them aboard. An official announcement from the German War Office on April 26, 1916, said that the German naval forces had sunk the King Stephen on the previous day. The announcement added that the crew of the fishing steamer were taken prisoners.

GIRL DIES FROM BURNS

LUCAN Ont. March 5—Alice MacKey, aged twenty yonngest daughter of Timothy MacKey, five miles east of here, died last night from the effects of burns received when their home was destroyed by fire. One other sister, a brother, and her father were in the house at the time and it was with great difficulty that they escaped from the building, the flames having reached the bedroom of the girls upstairs before they were aroused. Walking more than half a mile in night apparel to a neighbor's house had a fatal efect on the younger girl.

THOUSANDS OF IDLERS IN CANADA YET SAYS SIR SAM

Scores of Gamblers, Bartenders, and Racing Followers Who Should Be Working or Fighting—Thinks National Service a Failure

OTTAWA, March 5—Lieut.-General Sir Sam Hughes, former Minister of Militia, delivered a strong address dealing with the conduct of the war, at a banquet under the auspices of the Ottawa Royal Black Perceptory No. 227 in Victoria Hall last evening.

Sir Sam was cheered when he made the statement that there were thousands of bartenders, race track sports and others who were available for labor and who might be used to good advantage in connection with home production this summer.

Fighting for Liberty

Sir Sam said he thought Orangeism in Canada had every reason to feel proud of its part in the war, as 80,000 out of 380,000 members had enlisted. In addition, many ex-Orangemen, brothers, sons and relatives of Orangemen, were doing service at the front.

"Let no enemy or opponent of an Orangeman," said the speaker, "ever utter a word against the order, because the world has never produced such an object lesson as 80,000 Orangemen and kindred fighting and dying for defence of, and for the liberty of the Belgian Roman Catholic people."

In Sir Sam's opinion, Canada has done well, and some Canadians have done exceedingly well, but there are still some who have not done well. He paid a tribute to those French-Canadians who had enlisted, but said he regretted that they were not enlisting in larger numbers.

No "Overt Act" Yet

Sir Sam termed the present agitation to defend Canadian borders, as all "nonsense." Not one overt act had been committed against Canada so far. Speaking of applying the Militia Act, he declared that some people were quoted as saying that the Canadian Government could not go one step farther than the people themselves were prepared to go. This, he said, sounded like the doctrines of an autocratic opportunist, and not like the doctrine or responsible Government leaders. Under responsibility Government a leader should assume responsibility, and stand or fall by his principles. Responsible Government should not mean inaction, or lack of action.

Home Defence on Rhine

"The time has come," said Sir Sam, "when Canada must no longer delay recruiting. We must not hide behind empty words, such as National Service, or 'people's wishes,' or the labor question, or to the Quebec issue. Canada has millions of men available, and has hundreds of thousands of men idle. The Empire needs them; humanity needs them; the cause of civilization needs them, and vengeance for outraged womanhood needs them. Let us not hide behind quibbles.

"Some people say that men are wanted for home defence, but I say the home defence of Canada is on the Rhine. Some say the bottom has fallen out of the war. I say nearly one million men have gone down in gaining a few hundred yards of depth along a front of less than 15 miles on the Somme. How long will it take at that rate to reach Berlin. We now have munitions in overwhelming quantities, but our men in the trenches need a rest. Human flesh and blood cannot stand night and day work, month in and month out without change. Every true Canadian demands that Canada train and send men, and if necessary more men, and still more men."

Many Available for Labor

Touching on the question of production Sir Sam said that men clerks in dry goods stores, grocery stores, book stores, pool rooms, jewelry and piano stores, could all take a turn in the fields during the harvest and senior class school boys and perhaps preachers, too.

"Bartenders, racetrack sports, and thousands upon thousands more," he said, "are easily available for labor."

Proud of Sir Sam

Rev. W. P. Garrett paid a tribute to Sir Sam, saying General Hughes was a big man who had done big things, which other men could not do. Orangemen, he said, were proud of Sir Sam, and the country was proud of him.

Premier's Return To Be Delayed

Imperial Conference Postponement Upsets Calculations in Ottawa

OTTAWA, March, 5—The delay in the holding of the Imperial War Conference will mean that Sir Robert Borden will not return to Canada until probably the middle of May. The delay upset all political and parliamentary calculations as the House was adjourned until April 19. There will not likely be another adjournment and the House will proceed with Sir George Foster acting as leader.

However, in the absence of the Premier it will be impossible for the Government to proceed with any of its important legislation and it will mean that much vital legislation and measures growing out of the Imperial War Conference cannot be introduced until nearly June 1.

As a result the Parliamentarians see ahead that dreaded spectre, an all summer session. While no one in particular is blamed—and least of all the British authorities—yet Ottawa is provoked over the turn of affairs. As things have turned out there apparently was no need of the Premier leaving until April 1. Parliament could have completed its labors by that time and adjourned.

Pressing cables were sent to the Premier to leave at once for London and under the circumstances there was nothing he could but ask for an adjournment and depart for England when he did.

A BEARER OF DISPATCHES

The Difficulties in Reaching His Destination

By ALAN HINSDALE

When the pair-European war broke out I obtained a position in the war department of Great Britain for secret service. My reasons for doing so were that I was traveling abroad and found myself stranded in London, circumstances my salary had suddenly been reduced, and I was unable to get home. I felt myself powerful that I always had a desire to do my best at secret service work.

My friends in the British at this time and in this field was that I was an American and had an American passport.

I made my offer through an official in the office of the foreign secretary who knew something of my antecedents and was in a position to vouch for me. He was pleased at my offer, as by these and plenty of would be workmen. The trouble with the government was to know whom to trust.

One day I received a note from my friend in the foreign office to call upon him in his office in Downing street. Upon my reporting to him he told me he to one of the chief men in the foreign department, who asked me a number of questions about myself with a view to establishing my trustworthiness. I drove if he would have employed me had it not been that I told him my mother had been born in Canada and lived there till she was twenty years of age. That seemed to satisfy him. He knew the strong affection for the British had among those who have been born and raised under it and agreed that a man would not be likely to turn traitor to a cause with which his mother sympathized.

When he had satisfied himself with regard to my fitness for the work he said to me:

"We wish some one to take certain important instructions to our embassador at Athens. You are probably aware that there are certain Italian nations for whose support Austria-Hungary and the central allies are struggling. France is one of these countries. We desire to offer to the king of Greece certain advantages for his support in case we are victors in the great struggle upon which we are entering. If a knowledge that we are negotiating is had into the hands of the Teutons it would give them certain intentions of ours which they will of course endeavor to forestall. London, every route to Greece is in the capital of that country is beset with spies. We are not sure but that we have them right here among our clerks in the government offices. You are liable to be watched, spied upon, possibly murdered on the way."

The commission was given me, and I accepted it. I had there none on the understanding it I should not have been interested in it." I was handed two packages, the one somewhat bulky, inclosed in an official envelope, and bearing the official seal; the other a slender letter, evidently written on thin paper.

How the notes got on to the fact that I was commissioned was to leave the foreign office and I was to carry it was a matter of mystery to me. I was told that no one employed to copy the paper, which was written by the undersecretary himself. Nevertheless the matter was known to some one who inclosed the proper person outside, who at once set in motion certain agencies to get possession of the document I carried, or at least prevent my delivering it.

As to my route, it was uncertain. I might go all the way by sea, but there was some danger of being submarined. I could go through Northern France and Italy, but in the beginning of the war no one knew how the Italian cabinet would jump. Italy did not join the allies for a year after the beginning of hostilities. I resolved to go through France to Marseilles direct and decided by what route I would continue my journey.

I had scarcely seated myself in the train for Southampton—I proposed to cross the channel there to Havre rather than I noticed a man in the same compartment as myself casting curious glances at me. I mistrusted at once that he was a spy of the foe, but I was not sure of that. In fact, I believed that if he had not have let me see his observing me. Still I anything to fear from his personality. It was enough that he was intending to draw my attention to himself while I carried out my secret instructions. During the ride I passed my seat case and felt for the dispatches. I found enough to satisfy me it was there. He left the train at Southampton, and I did not see him again till I was on board the steamer for the French coast.

On reaching Calais I stood looking my baggage, a suit case, in the crowd of passengers waiting to leave the boat for the shore. Suddenly I felt the suit case wrenched from my hand. Turning, I observed the man I spoke of having taken it, but saw no one near. Those behind me were comparatively quiet. Evidently the fellow's manner had excited no comment, for I heard no cry of alarm. I was doubtless passed from person to another till it was at a safe distance from me.

My first attempt to outwit my watchers was a success. They had got a dummy instead of me, and I had the one sewed in the lining of my vest. However, this did not accord with my plans. I had intended to use the dummy to deceive my spy and further on in my journey to get rid of him, and my enemies had possession of evidence that I was a messenger from the British government. Further detaining me then did not trouble me much, for it was clear that they knew all about me.

However, there was one situation in their having the dummy. They must have believed they had the dispatch I carried, for I saw nothing more of them till I arrived at Marseilles. I thought it best they were undisturbed, with no authority to open the dispatch, but took to a man one who had such power, and this occasioned delay while I went my way.

But they did not lose track of me, for the man I had seen observing me on the train from London to Southampton kept me in sight. At Marseilles I had two problems to settle. Should I go farther by land or all the way by sea? And how could I throw my enemies off my track? I concluded that, whichever way I went, I would endeavor to make him believe that I had gone the other.

I had a trunk with me, and as soon as I could get possession of it I called a cab and, putting the trunk in it, got in the cab and told the driver to drive to the station of the railway running eastward along the Mediterranean. On reaching the station I bilked the driver, who, as I had expected, was so long for several hours, I strolled off, purposing to divest myself of the feeling of being followed or dogged into it.

I fell in with a set of gamers who received my intrusion so eagerly that I concluded to enlist them, if possible. I was in great need of money for my patriotism. I told them that I was a messenger of the English government and was followed by certain persons who were bent on possessing themselves of what I carried. They were not convinced till I showed them a letter addressed to the British minister at Athens, in which I wrote that I wished to go out unknown on a boat that I had been told left Marseilles that night for Greek ports.

When I departed from the house in which I had taken refuge, I did so dressed in the apparel of one of the women after dark and under the guidance of another. I had not lost my way to the dock. About 9 o'clock I went on board, carrying my own mail valise closely in my grasp.

I had succeeded in my maneuver in respect to the man who had been watching me in Downing street and Charing cross. But the enemy had left nothing to chance. He had given an agent on the boat. Unfortunately I did not suspect that he would do this, I consequently felt safe in my isolated cabin, and it was a dead giving of myself away to go on deck before one, for there is nothing feminine about me, and as soon as my enemy saw that I was a man he would greatly clear that I was the man who was wanted.

I was sitting in a secluded corner on deck when a gentleman approached me and, politely raising his hat, asked if I could speak his language. Though he wished to accept as an acquaintance, I reckoned that his purpose was the dispatch I bore. I must decide at once whether I should send him about his business or pretend to be deceived with a view to outwitting him. I did the latter, for, of course, he had an advantage of me in the fact that I was a man in disguise in woman's clothing. I did not regret him, but after a few casual remarks I excused myself and went to my stateroom.

The first thing I did after reaching it was to doff my woman's apparel and put on my own. I knew the man who had spoken to me would be on the lookout for me, and when next I appeared on deck, seeing him at a distance, I walked toward him. Passing him I said that he recognized me. I returned his gaze with one which said plainly, "Keep out of my way, spy, and all will go well with you." He said nothing, and I received no further attention from him. I doubt if he cared to commit any act that was not covered by duplicity, and I was determined if he did I would leave him on the other side of the water.

Upon reaching Athens I found that I was the only person to whom I could intrust the dispatches. I was received by the embassador with a warmth which showed that I had been looked for with interest. I was told that I had done well, and that the dispatches I carried were of the greatest importance. I was told that I had done well, and that the dispatches I carried were of the greatest importance. I was told that I had done well, and that the dispatches I carried were of the greatest importance.

A MYSTERIOUS DISAPPEARANCE

A Pioneer Story for

By WALTER WILCOX

One hundred years ago a young couple left Virginia, crossed the Allegheny mountains and settled in Harrison county, Ky. It was a wild country in those days, but very beautiful, native scenery to tempt the pioneer with its virgin scenery, its immense trees, its profusion of wild flowers. And such temptation was necessary. The settlers never knew at what moment the yell of the savage would break the stillness of the wilderness or the whoop of his family might be cut down by a tomahawk without even a whisper of warning. These were the inducements to offset the drawbacks to settlers in the new country, though there is a fascination in danger that draw the fearless.

John Lewis and his wife Mary journeyed to their new home down the Ohio river on the only means of locomotion known at that time, a flatboat, and on reaching their destination built a log cabin. They were a queer section of land, built a log cabin and proceeded to make a living by the cultivation of the soil and hunting. Children were born to them. As more room was needed their cabin was extended, and within a few years the location assumed the semblance of civilization.

Abora brought with him to Kentucky a few slaves and bought others from time to time, for we must remember that in those days the only hands a farmer could depend upon were his own negroes. The community lived in fear of which there was abundance then in the hands of the unscrupulous and nuts and berries, which grew indifferently on tree and bush etc. If one was to occasion this desire, that would come of a fight with him. But I proposed to make him consider me dangerous.

What he did was this: He went to the captain of the boat and told him that I was an Englishman, a deserter from justice. Of course since I had come aboard as a woman and was now a man this was apolitical ground for the accusation. But my accuser had his documents to prove his case and could only ask that I be detained till the first port touched till the matter could be looked into. Whereupon the captain disposed to assent to this I showed him my sealed letter to the British embassy at Athens, and it served its purpose.

The next day we passed a French man-of-war. I induced the captain to signal her and send me on board of her. He did as I requested, and on board I was conducted to the officer in command and stated my case he volunteered to take me to Athens.

This ended my embarrassments, for I delivered my dispatch, and it was doubtless communicated to the king of Greece. But subsequent events showed that it did not win his majesty over to the allied cause.

Potatoes, turnips, and similar garden sass is the kind of shrubbery you should plant this spring.

WHY YOU SHOULD USE M.S.C. SHAMPOO

It maintains healthy hair, corrects unnatural scalp conditions, and assists nature in restoring normal, healthy conditions, by stimulating and nourishing the hair-growing glands.

HEALTHY HAIR NEEDS ATTENTION, and any disorder of the scalp or falling hair will grow worse by neglect.

M. S. C. SHAMPOO contains pure Cocoanut Oil and other hair-health ingredients, which by constant use will keep the scalp and hair in perfect condition.

Being in LIQUID form, it is easy to apply: You simply wet the head thoroughly in Hot water, then apply about two tablespoonsful, which will instantly create a rich lather that will thoroughly cleanse the scalp, and after thorough rinsing will leave the hair beautifully soft.

Ask your dealer and follow directions carefully, and you, like thousands of others, will be convinced of our claims.

A TREE AND A DISEASE.

Malaria and the Effect Produced by Destroying a Eucalyptus.

During the latter decades of the nineteenth century it was a common practice to plant trees in the dry districts. Trees in districts infected by malarial fever. It was held that the essential oil produced by the eucalyptus killed the harmful vapors rising from the swamps laden with the poison of the disease. The discovery that the malarial germ is introduced into the blood by a mosquito and breeds once and for all the origin of the disease.

The theory that the eucalyptus tree neutralized the poison vapors is nonsense, for the fact remains that where large areas were freely planted there was always a certain residue left in amount of malaria.

The idea is the explanation of this circumstance! It has been demonstrated that, of nearly all trees, the eucalyptus absorbs the greatest amount of water. Two seedlings—a blue gum and a plum were placed with their roots in water, and the height of the water was carefully marked. The plants were kept in a warm atmosphere and exhaled at the end of twenty-four hours. One little eucalyptus lost supposed four times the water that the plum had been able to take up.

Seeing that blue gums increase in height with great rapidity, often growing from seed as much as they is a lot protection, the amount of moisture taken up increases on a greatly progressive scale. And this is just what brings about the downfall of the malarial districts. To complete its life cycle it is necessary that the mosquito should pass its larval stage in pools of water. With the coming of the eucalypti these pools and indeed all marshy places disappear, the breeding spots of the mosquitoes are gone, and, in time the insects vanish altogether.

The knights of the days of chivalry were so well protected by their armor that they were practically invincible to all ordinary weapons. Even when dismounted they could not be injured save by the miserlicords, a thin dagger which penetrated the joints of the armor, and the battle-axe with which they carefully marked. The plants were kept in a warm atmosphere and enclosed at the end of twenty-four hours. One little eucalyptus lost supposed four times the water that the plum had been able to take up.

Seeing that blue gums increase in height with great rapidity, often growing from seed as much as they is a lot protection, the amount of moisture taken up increases on a greatly progressive scale. And this is just what brings about the downfall of the malarial districts. To complete its life cycle it is necessary that the mosquito should pass its larval stage in pools of water. With the coming of the eucalypti these pools and indeed all marshy places disappear, the breeding spots of the mosquitoes are gone, and, in time the insects vanish altogether.

PILES

Nothing known to science is better for this painful ailment than Zam-Buk. Its soothing, healing properties relieve at once. Wonderful! ends the agony. Easily applied and cleansing. Why go on suffering? Why not try it? Read the following cures.

Mrs. C. Bennett, Poplar, B.C., says: "I suffered for years with Piles, and tried all sorts of remedies, but I could hardly walk. I tried remedy after remedy, and finally got Zam-Buk. Before I had completed the first box I felt relief. Perseverance with this remedy completely cured me. I have had no return of the trouble."

Mr. W. J. Dobson, of New Edinburgh, Ont., writes: "For two years I suffered with Piles, and tried many remedies, but I tried one after another of no-called remedies, but with no effect. At last I decided to try Zam-Buk. This love quick relief from the dull, gnawing pain, and after using it a few days cured me. The cure has been permanent."

ZAM-BUK ALSO CURES ECZEMA, BLOOD POISON, ULCERS, COLD SORES, CHAPPED HANDS, SCALD, CUTS, BURNS, BRUISES, SCALDS, and all SKIN INJURIES and DISEASES. 50c. box, all druggists and stores, or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto. Beware harmful substitutes and preparations put up just "as good."

Chalmers is a car, a man, an institution

Success drives to business in a Chalmers.

For,

Chalmers is a symbol of success that attracts successful men.

The world knows this institution.

All men know this mounting Chalmers success to be the living product of an ideal. They know the man who had the energy, the will, the integrity, the honesty of purpose, AND the capacity to turn his ideals into reality.

Among business men, as among owners of cars, Chalmers is a name vibrant with action.

Where employers of labor study "Welfare" plans, Chalmers methods are adopted. Factories are built in every land—like the Chalmers factory. Wherever efficiency is the topic—Chalmers is the example familiar to all. In sales conventions, men are inspired by the sound business philosophy of Chalmers.

The Chalmers success is broader than motordom. It stands a beacon among the world's great industries. It is to be expected that business men should drive cars from the Chalmers institution.

Courage attracts. The pursuit of the Ideal is a magnet for leaders of men.

Skilled workmen came to Chalmers keen to produce the ideal car. The Chalmers ideal placed them in surroundings that breed a healthy ambition to excel.

The factory, planted in what was then the sunlit prairies of Michigan, grew a monster plant, with floor space a million feet. Around it was built a city peopled by master car builders and their folks—30,000 or more.

Ever growing, ever succeeding, this giant industry rose a pattern for all industries, a landmark in motordom. The very bricks are alive with the power impulse of the Chalmers ideal.

Far afield this force is felt.

In every city local success joins hands with Chalmers success. Big men in every territory represent Chalmers.

Men with the good sense to serve well their customers, are linked to the Chalmers organization. The Chalmers spirit of service to the public reaches out through these men.

NOW, CHALMERS CREATES A CANADIAN FACTORY

The institution bridges the boundary. The Canadian Chalmers is made in Canada. Chalmers owners in Canada are served by a Canadian organization.

Chalmers in Canada—Chalmers in Detroit—one institution—one ideal. There lives in both the high purpose that conceived, created and maintains the Chalmers organization.

Here, as throughout the world, Chalmers stands a name to be envied. Not only among motorists, not only among business leaders, but in the entire field of industrial activity.

Chalmers is a car, a man, an institution.

CHAIR DEAL CAUSES A HEATED DISCUSSION

what he was talking about or he was a block head.

Acting Mayor Woodley—Mr. Tickell must apologize to Mr. Smith for that remark before the discussion can be further pursued.

Mr. Tickell—As I am within the Council Chamber I will apologize to Ald. Smith.

Ald. Smith—I accept the apology.

Ald. Deacon—Even a man in the furniture business does not seem to understand the tender. He (the speaker) was frank to acknowledge that he did not understand it, but he believed the city got value in the $1.50 chairs. He was against a legal investigation into this matter which could be carried otherwise.

Ald. Parks—It all goes back to the same question. Where did the profit go? Ald. Duckworth says he bought the chairs for $1.10 and the city was charged $1.50 for them.

Ald. Robinson—It is getting worse and worse.

Mr. Tickell stated that in his letter to the press he showed that the profit on the transaction was $83, no one had answered his communication.

The Mayor said he was a member of the K.K.K. Company, as such, did he not get some of the profit?

Acting Mayor Woodley—It looks as if the Thompson Company got the money. Ald. Smith said he did not want to have anything to do in the transaction. If ex-Ald. Duckworth made a mistake he did it unintentionally. He was always looking out to see where he could save for the city.

Ald. Smith—I did not interpret Mr. Tickell's tender. The matter was left with ex-Alderman Duckworth.

Mr. Tickell—The T. K.K.K. Company to whom the money was paid for the chairs did not put in a tender.

Ald. Parks—The city got a $1.50 chair and paid $1.50 for it. What is the balance, and who got it? He moved an amendment to the motion that the party or parties who received the profit refund the same.

Ald. Woodley—A limited company can deal with the city even if a member of the company is a member of the Council.

At this stage of the proceedings 11 o'clock having arrived the time of the Council was extended two hours.

Ald. Parks in speaking to his amendment said if an excess charge has been made in this transaction then the parties that made anything should refund the same.

Ald. Platt—I think this will be done.

Ald. Robinson—We as Aldermen represent the citizens. There is a difference of $83 and the motion he made only means an expenditure of $100 and it would be money well expended and be to the satisfaction of all. The Council seems to wink at $83.

Ald. Marshall—It is not a matter of $83, but a matter of $22.50 as this is the difference between the price quoted and Mr. Tickell's tender.

Mr. Tickell—If the city thinks it cannot pay $100 for an investigation it will pay the $100.

Ald. Parks—I withdraw my amendment.

Ald. Deacon—I am in favor of this matter being investigated but not all together in the manner proposed. It can be settled in the Council, and if anyone has made anything it would up doubt be refunded. The Mayor in his absence is accused of graft. This is not justice or British fair play. We want an investigation, but let the Mayor be present.

It was suggested that Ald. Robinson allow his motion to stand as a notice of motion and the matter could be brought up again.

Ald. Parks—The motion was made out a month ago.. I knew about it.

Ald. Deacon—Why didn't Ald. Robinson or Ald. Parks speak to the Mayor and tell him they were going to bring this matter up.

Ald. Robinson—If a resolution was prepared a month ago he knew nothing about it. The resolution he presented was written this evening and it was worded on advice of a lawyer of the city.

The suggestion that the motion be accepted as a notice of motion was concured in by Ald. Robinson, who stated he did so in deference to the absence of the Mayor.

Council adjourned.

Film of Interest To Military Men

Local Officers Anxious to See Official Picture of Canada's Army.

COMING TO BELLEVILLE

Presentation Will Be Made at Griffin's Opera House

The announcement that the first Canadian war film will be presented at Griffin's Opera House, March 12 and 13, has aroused the greatest interest among military men as well as among those who have relatives at the front, and the public generally.

This film has met with a very enthusiastic reception in England, the press acclaiming it as a greater film than "The Battle of the Somme."

"We saw," says The London Morning Leader, describing the pictures, "thousands of stalwart men, dressed in what seemed to be the hides of prehistoric monsters, emerge from grave dwellings and trenches dug into hills and plains still in a condition of chaos. Countless numbers of them were armed, and to the drum fire of great guns they march to fight an unseen enemy. Batches come back triumphant, bringing with them captives and trophies; others returned wounded from the fray, but all the countenances, among the victors and vanquished, appeared to be none or less happy each in his own particular way. The 'iron mistre of our smile' was represented by batteries of howitzers sending their missiles for miles through the air; there were terrible looking tanks' moving resistlessly over the deeply pitted soil, crushing every obstacle in their path, and incidents and objects were represented with a vividness hitherto unequalled in any cinematograph pictures we have seen."

The fact that there are the Canadian troops, including the boys from Belleville, for the first time shown in battle by motion pictures, makes the film of special importance in this country. The further fact that this is the first appearance of the tanks on the screen makes the film of special importance everywhere in the world.

The British and Canadian Governments are both official sponsors for the film, which was taken by the foremost cinematograph operator of the British staff.

To be shown at Griffin's Opera House, Monday and Tuesday, March 12 and 13, matinee and evening.

NATIONAL SERVICE CARDS

The time for the return of the National Service cards by those who have not yet returned them or have returned them improperly signed, has been extended to March 21st, 1917, and further cards have been issued to the postmasters for distribution among those who have made default.

It is understood that the returns from this Military District have been most gratifying. There are however, even in this district, a number who have not made their returns. The National Service Board has expressed the wish that everyone in the District will use his or her very best efforts in order to make the returns from this district as nearly perfect as possible.

Nurse Forneri, C.A.M.C., daughter of Rev. Canon Forneri, is spending a few days in Belleville, before leaving for overseas. Miss Forneri's brother, Lieut. A. Forneri, has been twice wounded, but is at the front in France again.

LEARNED FROM A SAMPLE NINETEEN YEARS AGO

Maynooth, Ont., March 6—Living eighteen miles from a drug store, Mr. Carr found it necessary to keep in the house some treatment to regulate the action of liver, kidneys and bowels.

To the habit of keeping these important organs active by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, when required, he attributes the good health of his large family.

Here, surely, is evidence of the value of these pills as a family medicine to protect the members of the family who use it from the common ills, so many of which arise from constipation of the bowels and torpid condition of liver and kidneys.

Mr. James Carr, Maynooth, Ont., writes:—"About 19 years ago I received an envelope containing two of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. I was doctoring at the time with two bottles, and as they did me so good I used the Pills, but by the time I had finished one box I was cured of the pain in the back and shoulders.

"We have great confidence in Dr. Chase's Medicines. I have a family of ten children and have never had a doctor in the house for any of them. We live eighteen miles from a drug store and find that these Pills cure nearly all the ordinary ills by regulating the liver, kidneys and bowels. Hence we are all well and sound. I attribute to their use, and I have recommended them to hundreds and given away many a box, because I believe there is no medicine so good."

By awakening the action of liver, kidneys and bowels Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills cleanse the system of poisons and remove the cause of biliousness, headaches, indigestion, backache, kidney disease and rheumatism. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto.

3 Teaspoonsful of Red Rose Tea go as far as 5 Teaspoonsful of ordinary tea

Cheap Tea Not Economical!

Many people complain about the poor flavor of the cheap tea they are using, but are trying to put up with it because they think they are saving money.

While Red Rose Tea may cost a few cents more, or even 10 cents more per pound, than common tea three teaspoonsful of Red Rose Tea are equal to five teaspoonsful of common tea.

Less Red Rose Tea is required in the tea pot, because this master blend of Indian-Ceylon teas consists largely of the famous hill grown teas of Assam, India.

These Assam teas excel in vigor, richness and strength. Their leaves yield more liquor and a fuller flavored liquor. Blended with Ceylons they make the ideal tea for flavor and economy.

Try a sealed package of Red Rose Tea and keep count of the extra number of cups it yields in comparison with cheap teas. You will find that Red Rose is worth every cent asked for it—and that it costs no more to use this delightful tea.

Popular Figure Passes Away

"Bob" Stevenson Succumbs to an Attack of Pneumonia

Mr. Robert Stevenson, for twenty-three years manager of Balas Brewery of Kingston, and one of the best known and most popular business men in that city, passed away Monday afternoon at Toronto from an attack of pneumonia, and the sad news came with startling suddenness to his many friends in the city. Deceased's remains arrived late this afternoon and his funeral will take place to-morrow, the remains being transferred to Belleville, his former home, for interment.

It was only on Thursday last that deceased went to Toronto but he was then suffering from a serious cold, which later developed rapidly into his fatal illness. On Saturday his relatives were summoned to his bedside, and all that the best medical skill could do was insufficient to stay the progress of the malady.

Deceased was popular with all classes of citizens, being of a quiet disposition, and possessed of splendid traits which won him the esteem of all. In religion he was a Presbyterian, and he was a member of the Masonic order. He is survived by his father, Robert Stevenson, who with one sister, Jennie, resides at Belleville, two other sisters, Mrs. P. Balas of Kingston, and Mrs. T. J. Shanks of Hamilton, three brothers, George and John of Chicago, and William of Kingston.

COMPULSION NOT PLANNED

Sir Edward Kemp Contradicts Winnipeg Report

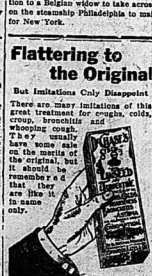
OTTAWA, March 5.—Sir Edward Kemp, Minister of Militia, who is in Toronto, called up the department this morning and gave out the announced that Rev. Findley's statement in Winnipeg last night that the Militia Act is to be enforced immediately is wholly unauthorized.

The department has several suggestions under consideration looking to the reorganization of the Canadian Militia. None has yet been adopted but when a scheme is evolved it is not planned that compulsion shall be the part of it. An official announcement as to the plans of the Government is expected soon.

INVENTS APPARATUS TO DESTROY SUBMARINES

Wonderful Claims Are Made For a Pittsburg Man's Discovery

NEW YORK, March 5—A special despatch to the World from Pittsburg, Pa., says:



Theodore Eichhols, a young engineer and architect of this city, has invented a wireless device that may be used to destroy submarines by causing an explosion of gases that are always present in submarines. For several years the inventor was connected with the United States Corps of Engineers.

Mr. Eichhols stated that a few days ago a small experimental apparatus in his home on Neville Island sank a small "dummy" submarine in the Ohio River five miles away. The destroyed model was built of steel and had been submerged to a depth of ten feet.

Flattering to the Original

But Imitations Only Disappoint

There are many imitations of this great treatment for coughs, colds, croup, bronchitis and whooping cough. But there is only one to have some sale on the merits of the original, but it should be remembered that they are like it in name only.

HULL TO BE DRY BY MAY FIRST?

Citizens Must Make Decision—Campaign Results in Early Vote

HULL, March 6—The final definite step to decide if Hull to determine the question of license or no license before May 1 next was taken on Friday, on behalf of the committee recently formed for this purpose, when Mr. George C. Wright, lawyer, of Hull, accompanied by Mr. Tennyson Smith (representing the Dominion Alliance of Quebec province), and Mr. F. B. Feeley, secretary of the newly formed organization, waited upon Mr. H. Bonlay, City Clerk, at the City Hall, Hull, and presented the necessary official requisition signed by over one hundred municipal electors of the City, including: Rev. Father Bernier, Rev. Father Carriere, Rev. Father Larocque, and four other Catholic priests; Rev. Canon Smith (Anglican), John R. Booth, and many other leading citizens.

The document was duly dated by City Clerk, in the presence of the deputation, and the poll must now according to law be fixed to commence before April 12.

Now the matter has been taken out of the hands of the city council, and it will be for the people to decide whether licenses shall be granted or not, and if they say no, then Hull will go dry on April 30th.

Canadians in Severe Fight

Dominion Men at Last Reports Were Stationed in the Vicinity of Loos

OTTAWA, March 5—The Canadians have been in another big fight. The Militia has so far received no details, but the despatches at hand would indicate that the Third Division has been in a heavy engagement with the Huns. The casualties while not heavy would show that there has been severe fighting. One commanding officer, Lieut.-Col. Beckett, of Toronto, is reported killed. He is the only commanding officer who lost his life in the fight. The last heard of at the capital of the Canadians was to the effect that they were in the village of Loos. They were moved from the Somme district several months ago in to what was supposed to be a quieter district. They refused to remain quiescent and inaugurated a series of daylight raids, which were highly successful and kept the Germans constantly on the alert.

The new method or raiding initiated by the Canadians was taken up by the British and according to the British commanders had much to do with the breaking of the German morale which resulted in the recent important retirement. The Canadians apparently have not been content with trench war and have made a general attack on the German lines. The total casualties were not more than 200. The fight took place last Thursday.

HAS GIVEN MILLION IN PAY TO SOLDIERS

Sir John Eaton Contributes Immense Sum to Upkeep of Families

OTTAWA, March 5—Sir John Eaton has spent one million dollars of his own private funds to date supporting the families of men in his employ who are at the front, it is here officially stated.

Up to one week ago 2,438 of his employes had donned khaki, and of these 1,200 are still drawing pay from him. These men, or rather their families, have been paid from Sir John's private resources. Their weekly payroll has averaged over $10,000, and for the last week, for which figures are available, Sir John was called upon to expend $11,042 for this purpose. On February 18 last, a total of $962,985.50 had been drawn from Sir John's personal accounts to fulfil the pledges he had given regarding payment of wages to those employes who joined the army.

The Toronto factories and store have sent 1,501 men to the front. Of these 286 have appeared on the casualty list, and 74 have lost their lives.

Field Marshall Von Hindenburg says the German operations against Verdun are rotten, or words to that effect. And just as the Kaiser was congratulating the Crown Prince.

BRINGS DOWN SIXTH AIRPLANE

Surprise Attack by Allies Results in Prisoners—Attempted Surprise Attacks by Enemy Checked

Special To The Intelligencer,

PARIS, March 7.—Between the Oise and the Aisne, we made a surprise attack on German trenches at Quennevieres and brought back fifteen prisoners, says to-day's official communication. In Argonne, in the vicinity of Four de Paris, we exploded a mine and occupied the crater. Germans attempted several surprise attacks southeast of Filery in Bonchet wood, north of St. Mihiel, and near Ammertsweiler. Attacks were checked at once by our curtain of fire, and losses were inflicted on the enemy. Everywhere else the night was calm. Adjutant Gasale brought down his sixth German airplane yesterday.

BODY FOUND IN BARN

Remains of Aged Widow Are Mutilated

BROCKVILLE, March 6—Bearing all the evidence of having been cruelly maltreated, the mutilated remains of Mrs. Hattie Hill, a widow, fifty-four years old, were discovered at 2 o'clock on Saturday morning last in a barn on her farm, three miles from Seeley's Bay. The body was found by Mrs. Arthur Free, who, with her husband, occupied one-half of the house in which the widow lived.

Coroner F. M. Young yesterday opened an inquest into the death of Mrs. Hill, but was not able to proceed with the evidence, owing to the fact that County Crown Attorney M. M. Brown, Brockville, got stalled in a snowstorm on the C. N. R. near Lyndhurst and had to return to Brockville.

OTTAWA MISSING MAN; WORKING AT TRENTON

Family Troubles Caused Joseph Saucier to Leave That City

OTTAWA, March 6—The Ottawa police received word yesterday that Joseph Saucier, whose strange disappearance a few days ago caused some alarm among his friends, was in Trenton Ont., where he went to accept a position.

Saucier, it is understood, had some domestic troubles and wished to get out of Ottawa without any of his relatives knowing about it.

Saucier, who is a returned soldier, and who was working in the Assigned Pay branch of the Militia Department, disappeared on Wednesday last and nothing had been seen or heard of him until yesterday.

Discover Plot To Kill Wilson

Bombs Were to be Sent to the President by Huns—Three Arrests Are Made

HOBOKEN, N.J., March 6—A whole sale bomb plot, including a possible plan of attack on President Wilson has been believed to have been revealed here yesterday afternoon in the arrest of Fritz Kolb, a German resident from Mexico, aged 36, in a local hotel room, in which were found several bombs and quantities of explosives.

"Kaiser a physical wreck," and "Harry Thaw a physical wreck," are two headlines that appear in the same paper. The stories might well have been reversed.

HUNGERFORD CASE BEING INVESTIGATED

Much Interest Manifested in The Proceedings—Many Witnesses Are Being Examined—Young Men Knew How Open Votes Were Recorded

The charges preferred against Mr. John W. Burley, a Deputy Returning Officer at the recent municipal election in Hungerford Township of allowing the violation of certain sections of the Municipal Act, namely: allowing parties to give an open vote without being sworn, was today further investigated before Police Magistrate Masson of this city. The police court room was filled with interested spectators during the proceedings.

Mr. Wm. Carnew, County Attorney, was prosecuting attorney whilst Mr E. J. Butler was present in the interests of Mr. Burley.

Wm. E. Kincaid testified he resided in Hungerford Township, and voted at No. 8 Poll, which is Marmora. He was an agent at the poll at the recent municipal election. At the opening of the poll witness was present. Witness remembered that Wm. Coulter took an open vote, and also Ernest Leveque, who is 21 years old. It was generally known that William Coulter gave an open vote. Mr. Burley, the Returning officer, asking Mr. Coulter who he intended to vote for, and Mr. Burley, marked the ballot. Ernest Coulter was in the poll when his father voted, Ernest knowing how his father was to vote. Ernest Coulter voted. Ernest and Louis Leveque gave open votes, Mr. Burley marking their ballots, after he had read the name of the candidates. The two, Leveques and other voters were in the poll at the time. All present could hear how they voted. Harry Horton also gave an open vote as did also Alex. Weir. Mr. Burley said to Weir "will you mark your ballot or shall I mark it." Weir said he would take an open vote and he did so. Mr. Burley also asked Harry Horton if he was going to take an open vote and he said yes. Three or four voters were in the room when Horton voted. Witness saw no constable about the place during the day. Witness was not present when the Shannons voted.

To Mr. Butler—It is a well known fact that there are four or five persons' sons who give open votes at that poll. Witness took the oath of secrecy at the opening of the poll. He offered no objection to the Deputy Returning Officer about persons being in the room when an open vote was given, as he did not think he had a right to object. When Thomas Sexsmith came to vote he took the ballot, but asked to give an open vote. There was an objection that Mr. Burley read the names over before voting. Witness saw a couch near the secret apartment where voters went in—He did not object to the couch being there but others did.

To Mr. Carnew—There may have been other voters in the poll when Mr. Sexsmith voted but witness could not remember all who were in.

Samuel Kincaid testified he was at Poll No. 8, on election day, but had no vote. He remained in the poll a short time. Witness was present when Harry Horton voted. John Carleton was also present. Horton asked the Returning officer for a ballot and asked to give an open vote. Witness heard who Horton voted for.

To Mr. Butler—Witness went into the poll with John Carleton and stood in the back door. Witness was not told to go out. He went out of his own accord.

John Weir testified he was a voter at Poll No. 8, Hungerford Township. He was an agent at the poll for Mr. Carleton. Witness remembered when William Coulter voted. He was accompanied by his two sons. Mr. Weir's name was called to receive an open vote. The two sons were present when their father voted. Mr. Burley asked Mr. Coulter what he desired to vote for and he (Mr. Burley) marked the ballot. Other voters were in the poll at the time. The two Leveques gave open votes. No declarations were made as to their inability to vote. Witness did not see how they voted. No person was put out of the room when open votes were given. Alexander Weir and Harry Horton gave open votes, but witness could not say who were present when these men voted. Witness made no application to have things rebodied. Witness remembered when Patrick Shannon and his three sons came into the poll. The father voted first and when Thomas Shannon asked for a ballot Mr. Preston objected to Mr. Burley giving a ballot until he was sworn. He was given a ballot and he marked same without being sworn. An entry was made in the poll book after the Shannons had voted, and left the poll room. The poll clerk made an entry after there had been considerable discussion.

To Mr. Butler—From his recollections the Shannons voted one after the other. The Shannon's names were not entered in the poll book until after they had left the poll.

EIGHT DOLLARS A HEAD

KINGSTON, March 5.—A new order just passed by the United States that all immigrants coming to the country will this year have to pay a head tax of $8. Until now it has been $4. The Grand Trunk Railway officials have to pay the usual tax of $4, but this has been doubled and the 500 Canadians who go from Kingston across the border to live will contribute $8 to Uncle Sam's treasury. To take care of the traffic and make sure that everyone is examined an office is being built at Cape Vincent and every passenger will be subject to examination separately to satisfy the immigration officers that he is either a bona-fide visitor or an immigrant who can pass the educational tests of reading and writing.

TO ABOLISH ABUSE

KINGSTON, March 5.—The Whig has always been a 2c. evening paper. The rate, of course, for book stores and newsboys has been the wholesale rate of 1c. per copy, thus giving the dealer and the carrier a profit of 1c. a week on each subscription. During the past number of years, owing to the competition of newspapers, several abuses have crept into the business. For instance we have permitted boys and girls to come into the office and buy papers at the wholesale rate. This practice soon spread to several adults, and as the years went by their number increased. We find now that the abuse has grown to such proportions as to be unjust and unfair to the newsboys who have to tramp the street in all kinds of weather, and again, owing to the increased cost of production the Whig cannot afford to receive the retail rate now in 1c.

It has been decided, therefore, that on and after Monday March the 5th, no papers will be sold over the counter for less than 2c. per copy. The legitimate newsboys and girls can purchase their week's supply as usual at the office on Monday afternoon, receiving tickets therefore. Those who do not receive these tickets will pay 2c. per copy in each instance. This should have gone into effect a long ago, as it is the only fair method of dealing with the sale of papers. It puts every subscriber and every agent on an equal basis. We trust our good friends who have been in the habit of calling at the office each afternoon for their paper will understand present conditions, and smilingly accept the necessary change.

TROOPS OF CROWN PRINCE CHECKED BY FRENCH GUNS

LONDON, March 6.—Special—The troops of the Crown Prince swung forward again north of Verdun yesterday afternoon in a sweeping attack along a two-mile front between Chambrettes Farm and Beaucaux. They smashed through the French advanced positions north of Cauriere Wood, but were beaten back in every effort to penetrate the wood itself.

A curtain of fire from the French guns checked the intruding columns at every other point and inflicted severe casualties on the attackers. This morning Nivelle's soldiers pressed forward against the German occupied by the enemy and wrselled back the greater part of them.

Austria Issues Definite Refusal

Neutrals Have No Right in War Zone and Must Bear Consequences

LONDON, March 6—The American Ambassador at Vienna has been handed the reply of the Austrian Government to the American note enquiring as to the position of the Austrian Government in regard to unrestricted submarine warfare, according to a Vienna despatch to Reuter's by way of Amsterdam. The reply declares neutrals are responsible for losses they suffer by entering territory where warlike operations are taking place.

Special to The Intelligencer,

LONDON, March 7.—Official statement. Turkish forces abandoned, in face of overwhelming troops, a very strong position in the neighborhood of Sheikh Nuras, west of Shella, after having held two months in construction of a formidable system of defences. Yesterday our aircraft carried out a series of bombing attacks on enemy troops, railway trains, rolling stock and permanent ways. About ten high explosive bombs were dropped. Much damage was caused to personnel and material.

Shella is on the Nile, in upper Egypt, about four hundred miles south of Cairo.

David A. Givens Passes Away

Was City Solicitor of Kingston—Also an Alderman For 7 Years

KINGSTON, March 6—The citizens learned with deep regret at noon on Monday of the passing of David A. Givens, City Solicitor of Kingston, who died in the General Hospital after two weeks' illness of heart trouble. Mr. Givens was stricken in his office after a very busy week.

The late Mr. Givens was born in Kingston-Frontenac forty years ago. He graduated in arts at Queens University in 1878 and for some years taught English and French in the old Grammar school. Afterwards he went to Toronto and studied law, graduating at the Ontario Law School. Owing to ill health he spent three years in California and Arizona, and then returned to Kingston, where he practised law until stricken with the fatal malady.

Surviving him are two sisters and one brother, Mrs. Nelson and Miss Givens of Montreal, and W. R. Givens, proprietor and editor of the Kingston Standard.

LIVELY GUN WORK IN FRANCE

Repeated Actions Between Reconsoltering Detachments and Trench Garrisons

Special to The Intelligencer,

BERLIN, March 7.—The War Office announces there was lively artillery activity at various points on the western front from Verdun to the Arras, with repeated actions between reconnoitering detachments and trench garrisons.

In the evening the French attacked on northeast front of Verdun, the new German positions on Dead Man Wood but were repulsed. War Office claims fifteen enemy airplanes and only one German were shot down yesterday.

Captain of Poyle Tells of Making Plunger Dive in Channel

BOSTON, March, 6—A running fight in the English Channel on January 31, between a German submarine and the British steamer Poyle, in which fifty shots were exchanged, two of which struck the Poyle, was described by Captain James Evans of the steamer upon her arrival to-day from Liverpool. The engagement took place while the Poyle was on a voyage from Liverpool, where she had discharged a cargo from Portland, Maine.

CONTRACTED COLD ASKS BIG DAMAGES

HAMILTON, March 6.—R. H. Merrigold, a Hamilton hotel man, started a naction to-day against the Illinois Central Railway, the Grand Trunk and the Pullman Palace Car Company for $10,000 damages. He,said he a berth for himself and wife from Hamilton in New Orleans.

On the Illinois Central line the birth was occupied, and he had to sit up all night, constructing a severe cold.

WRECK ON CANADIAN PACIFIC NEAR TRENTON

Four Coaches Left The Track, Rolling Down an Embankment—A Number of Passengers More or Less Injured

Six passengers were quite seriously injured and several others sustained bruises, cuts and minor injuries, when three coaches and the dining car of the Chicago-Montreal C.P.R. Express left the track yesterday afternoon about two miles west of the town of Trenton. The train which was due at Belleville at 12.50 was travelling at about 40 miles an hour when the derailment occurred. The engine, baggage car and two second class coaches, the latter containing a number of foreigners did not leave the track. The last car of the train was a parlor car. The side of the embankment over which the four coaches dropped is precipitous, and the fact that none of the passengers were killed or sustained more serious injury is considered remarkable. At the point where the accident occurred the embankment is nearly 25 feet in height. The overturned coaches landed in a gravel pit, and were badly wrecked.

As soon as possible physicians and nurses were rushed from Trenton to the scene of the accident and everything that could be done then, was done for the wounded. The heads of the Belleville Hospitals were notified of the accident and were asked to make preparations for some twenty of the wounded. Every preparation was made for this number but fortunately only six were taken off the train here. The train arrived here at 4 p.m. and a number of the spectators at the C.N.R. and C.P.R. union station when the train came in. The stretcher bearers with stretchers from the Ammunition Column of the 254th Battalion were present, and everything was in readiness for the conveyance of the wounded to the hospital. Only two were suffering from injuries of such a character as to render it necessary to use the stretchers. They were

David Fred Ronaldson

Mr. Fred Ronaldson who resides at 209 Fairview Avenue, Hamonto, and who is Master Mechanic of the C.P.R. West Toronto Station, and Mr. J. Kirk of Milwaukee. The injuries to the former consist of a fracture of the right arm and dislocation of the shoulder. Mr. Kirk had his right leg broken. The others taken to the hospital were Messrs. A. E. Stone, P. Merrill, J. Jordan and Jones all of whom are Americans. Their injuries were about the head and face, and not of a serious nature and will not be required to remain in the hospital any length of time. One was discharged today.

Mr. William H. Ketcheson, a well known Belleville resident and an old-time fated train but he escaped injuries. He was en route to his home here, and naturally much pleased that he escaped.

A number who were suffering from minor injuries were upon the train, which brought the wounded to Belleville. They were taken eastward to their various homes.

The cause of the accident is thought to have been a broken rail. The train was in charge of Conductor Munro and the engineer was Mr. Maine.

Mr. John T. Arundel, General Superintendent of the C.P.R., arrived at Trenton last night, and will conduct an investigation into the circumstances of the derailment.

The C.P.R. Company, in an official statement issued by the Secretaries of the Chicago-Montreal train one and a half miles west of Trenton at 12.45 yesterday, attributed the accident to a broken rail. The engine, baggage car and one first class car remained upright on the ballast section, the company says, and the other four cars were tilted to the side. Twenty passengers sustained cuts and bruises, none of them being fatally injured.

WAR MATERIAL WIDELY STREWN

British Cavalry Engaged With Turkish Rear Guard—Rich Booty Thrown Into River

Special to The Intelligencer,

LONDON, March 7.—An official statement says on Monday British cavalry were engaged with a Turkish rear guard at Leiji, nine miles southeast of Ctesiphon. Before retiring to the fact that war material abandoned by the enemy, is strewn over eighty miles of country, it is not yet possible to give an accurate list of captures. A collection of booty and salvage has been thrown into the river, is being proceeded with, and up to the present three eight-inch guns, including those on the captured river craft, have been collected, exclusive of machine guns and trench mortars.

BLOCKADE WILL FORCE COLLAPSE

Winston Churchill Urges Prosecution For an 1918 Campaign German Navy Must Fight

Special to The Intelligencer.

LONDON, March 7.—Churchill's speech in the Commons yesterday, urging preparation for the 1918 campaign is interpreted to mean that the allied authorities do not expect the war to end this year. It is considered significant that Churchill, widely known as an advocate of vigorous action, believes the blockade will force a collapse of the Central Empires. The Government bases internal conditions in Germany indefinitely. Naval men believe continuances of the blockade will force Germany's fleet out for a decisive naval fight, which if successful would secure the command of the sea, and in the opinion of many, bring peace while Germany possesses a fleet.

Another Arrest In Bomb Plots

Alleged Accomplice of Fritz Kolb Held by Police

HOBOKEN, N.J., March 6—Another man was taken into custody here today by the police on suspicion of being implicated in a plot to blow up munition factories with Fritz Kolb, a German who was arrested on that charge yesterday and in whose room were found two bombs and materials for making others.

Americans Boost Fish Price Here

Sometimes Corner a Catch Says Prof. Prince

OTTAWA, March 6.—The exceedingly high cost of fish and the great scarcity is not due to the war, as is generally thought, but more to the influence brought on the fish markets by the big American firms, This is the opinion of Prof. F. E. Prince, Commissioner of Fisheries. He said it would be a great surprise to know to what extent the Canadian fishery industries are controlled by American firms.

There are few old-fashioned "misters" left. Nearly every man is "guy" to the modern youth.

RUSSIANS PROVE VICTORIOUS AGAINST TURKS IN PERSIA

PETROGRAD March 7—Special—Further successes for the Russians operating against the Turks in Persia, where Hamadan recently was taken from the Ottoman forces, are announced in yesterday's War Office reports. The Russians are advancing southwest of Hamadan, attacking the Turks on the Asadabad summit, and have the hostile forces in retreat in both the Bijar and Dewelisbad regions. The statement reads:

"Our troops are pursuing the Turks, who are withdrawing from Bijar, and soon occupied the villages of Hussenbad and Charlak.

"The detachment of Hamadan our troops attacked the Turks occupying the Asadabad summit (southwest of Hamadan).

"In the region southeast of Abad Lake the Turks are withdrawing towards Develtebad, pursued by our troops."

FOUR CANADIAN BATTALIONS MAKE GALLANT RAID ON ENEMY

LONDON, March 7—Special—It was stated here one day last week that four Canadian battalions set out to make an attack on an eminent landmark in France. The four battalions represented Montreal, Toronto, Vancouver and Kootney. The attack was initiated as usual by a heavy artillery barrage, during which the Germans lay low, but at a certain point he jumped up and operated a number of machine guns, which was chiefly responsible for the Canadians' rather heavy casualties, though a veering wind also caused trouble with our gas attack.

The Bosche did not have it all his own way, but suffered heavily during our rush. In fact, the German official communique merely stated a strong British attack was repulsed, which modest statement is generally employed when the Germans have suffered.

Only a few officers who were concerned in this attack have arrived in the London hospitals.

OUR WEEKLY SERMON

THE FOOTSTEPS OF SORROW

BY REV. A. M. HUBLY

Luke XXIV: 17.

"What manner of communications are these that ye have one to another, as ye walk and are sad"

Here are footsteps of sorrow which have left their imprint upon the pilgrim path for the comfort of many wayfarers. The hearts of those two friends on their way to Emmans must have been heavy indeed!

We can see them, but with grief, as with painful steps and slow they leave behind them Jerusalem where they had hoped for joyous conquest with their beloved Master crowned as King, and the Redeemer of Israel. They are crushed with grievous disappointment such as only those can know whose deep seated love, and confident expectation have proved abortive. All their hope for time, and for eternity had been centered in one, who has been slain by their enemies, and they are subjects of the sorest bereavement the heart of man has ever known. It fell upon them so sudden and unexpected, this terrible affliction!

As they walked and were sad each might have quoted Homer:

"But bitterest grief of all was left To me! for not to me was given to clasp

The hand extended from the dying bed,

Nor words of wisdom catch, which night and day,

With tears I might have treasured in my heart."

What can we find helpful in these footprints of sorrow? We shall see. Here are two people such as may be found any hour of meeting time, and almost everywhere among the dwellings of men in this world blighted by the poisoned breath of unbelief.

Ever since Satan led on the human heart to doubt God's word, people have wept over what they counted loss, when they should have rejoiced in the gain of a fuller revelation and richer experience of the supreme wisdom, power and love of "The Wonderful Counsellor, Almighty God, Everlasting Father, Prince of Peace."

It is not a strange thing for two or more persons, to get together, burdened with sorrow, and talk about the old days when hopes were bright, and expectations of future greatness ran high.

They say, "how badly things have turned out, how ruined us of all that were worth living for. We have nothing left, of those who were our star by night, and our sun by day, but the memory.

"O fools and slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken." Yes, and not only so, but "slow of heart to believe" all the word of life has spoken concerning the blessings of the gospel to them that believe.

These two friends, with their backs toward Jerusalem, where they should have remained watching for their risen Lord according to His word: "After three days I shall rise again," as they walked and were sad: "communed and reasoned together." I suppose they began to help one another to see how reasonable all these terrible happenings were.

How unreasonable it was for them, and Peter, and John and the rest of them to believe they and their lowly Master could ever establish and rule a kingdom, and so they allowed unbelief to increase their mutual grief and common sorrow.

They, doubtless, dwelt upon their great devotion to Him who was so dear to them, and had so filled their hearts with rich expectation is no more." They had trusted that He was about to redeem Israel from all their enemies. "But now He is dead!"

Shut up with their grief; burdened with sorrow they talk about Jesus and lo! He is beside them. He makes the number walking and talking together three instead of two. Is it not always so? Is He not always beside the bereaved? We know His promise: "I will not leave you comfortless, I will come to you." In our sorrow, we miss His comforting love only when rapt in unbelief, or forgetful of His expressed precious promise. To their bereaved hearts, He spoke, and they burned with the fire of a new life! The Lord is nigh to them that are of a broken heart, and saveth such as be of a contrite spirit."

"Beside my dead I knelt for prayer
And felt a presence as I prayed,
Lo! it was Jesus standing there,
He smiled and said, 'Be not afraid.'

Lord, Thou hast conquered death we know.
Restore again to life, I said
This one who died an hour ago,
He smiled and said, 'She is not dead.'

Asleep, then, as Thou once did say;
Yet Thou can'st lift the lids that keep
Her eyes imprisoned from our gay.
He smiled and said, 'She does not sleep.'

Nay, then, though happy she does wake,
And look upon some fairer dawn,
Return her to our hearts that ache,
He smiled and said, 'She has not gone.'

Alas! too well we know our loss,
Nor hope again our joy to touch,
Until the stream of death we cross,
He smiled and said, 'There is no such.'

Yet, our loved ones seem so far,
The while we yearn to feel them near,
Albeit with Thee we trust they are,
He smiled and said, 'And I am here.'

Dear Lord! how shall we know that they Still walk unseen with us and Thee?
Soul-sleep, nor wander far away?
He smiled and said, 'Abide with Me.'"

Such experiences of the nearness of the Almighty Saviour cannot be had apart from that which tries our faith in His promise "I will not leave you comfortless, I will come unto you." His presence, with the ministry of His grace and comforting love, will make every Gethsemane a place of Divine fellowship, and every death-chamber the gate of heaven.

The two friends of our text, as they walked along with their heavy hearts, had but one theme to converse about, that was their loss, and of Him whom they had lost. What could life, in this world, ever be again without Him? They were so intensely absorbed in their sorrow, as they talked of it, that they were not aware of one drawing near to them. When He joined them, their cold sorrowful hearts soon changed, and burned within them as He talked with them on the way. Are we friends of Jesus? Are we sad when He is absent? Do we long for the presence of the living Saviour? When in our sorrow, if we talk of Him He will make His presence felt.

It is recorded in the Old Testament that when the Lord's people come together and speak of sacred things He listens.

"They that feared the Lord spoke often one to another: and the Lord hearkened, and heard it, and a book of remembrances was written before Him for them that feared the Lord, and that thought upon His name.

Also, they shall be mine, saith the Lord of hosts, in that day when I make up my jewels: and I will spare them as a man spareth his own son that serveth him. Then shall ye return, and discern between the righteous and the wicked, between him that serveth God and him that serveth Him not."

What a joy it is, that Christian people care so little about gathering together to converse about Christ and His Utopia.

It must be very grievous to the Holy Spirit to hear the frivolous gossip of society, the criticism and scandals engaged in by Christians, with scarcely a word about the things of eternity, of the higher life of the soul, or of God and His Kingdom.

In our joy, we should think and talk about Him who makes it possible and in our sadness, He will draw near and join us, turning our sorrow into joy.

We all need the heart-yearning love for our Lord, that those disciples had. Though their religious knowledge was not what it should have been, yet they loved the Holy One. Unbelief was the great hinderance to the growth in grace and truth. They were "slow of heart to believe."

But even in our sorrow because of our unbelief, if we love Him He will come to us and make His presence felt. Instance the two, or three met together in His name. One says: "I had such a blessed experience in my life this week; I was in trouble, and as I prayed I seemed to realize a presence of some one by me and my burdens was lifted from me, and I was happy in a sweet sense of relief; instead of weeping I sang.

The minister says: we have had a hard and discouraging time in our church this week, but somehow, or other it has brought me into closer fellowship with my Lord. I love Him more, and He is dearer to me tonight, than ever before. Jesus, true to His promise, is in the midst of the Two or three, and each one feels the benefit-cence of His presence. They are sitting in the heavenly places with Christ Jesus, and as the hour goes by, it is a foretaste of the good things in the "Father's house of many mansions."

"Did not our hearts burn within us He talked with us!" This is no mystery! When we talked together of Him with the sincere concerns for advance of His kingdom, He joins us and goes with us.

Let us take this fact into our hearts today—believe it, act upon it, and it will settle the problem of our cold barren life! It will settle the problem of our shaded and sorrowful experience, and bring to our church and our home the light of heaven, and enshrine it within the depths of our own spirits.

And they talked together of all these things which had happened, and as it came to pass, that, while they communed together and reasoned, Jesus Himself drew near, and went with them." Walking with Him their footsteps of sorrow led to joy and satisfaction.

When even was come, they constrained Him to abide with them, "and He was known of them in breaking of bread." While the day is ours, let us walk with Him, and when the evening shadows fall we will abide with us.

"He shall meet us in the valley
When heart and flesh shall fail
And softly, safely, lead us on,
Until within the veil."

QUINTE CHAPTER I. O. D. E. TEA ROOM

The ladies of Quinte Chapter, I. O. D. E. of this city, have opened up a tea room in the store formerly occupied by Mr. W. B. Riggs on Front street, the object of which is to secure funds for Red Cross Work. Mr. Riggs kindly allowed the ladies the use of the store premises, which privilege is much appreciated by him. A representative of the Intelligencer visited the tea room, and was enchanted with the artistic arrangements of the room, which arrangement was under the supervision of Mrs. S. D. Lazier and Miss Clark. They would feel quite elated, I am sure, to hear the many complimentary remarks made about their artistic ability. They have a visiting, too, kindly looked after by the Lindsay Co., who are always so generous, rendering sweet music while you sip your delicious cup of tea, served in such a dainty manner by the different ladies of the Chapter each day. On Thursday they expect to have homemade cooking for sale. On display they have a beautiful lunch cloth, beautifully worked, donated by Mrs. W. N. Berry. They have also on view a very pretty picture, painted and donated by Mrs. Geo. Stewart of this city, which is an artistic piece of work. All who visit the tea room will be amply repaid after they have partaken of the good things provided by the ladies, as well as doing your bit to help swell the funds which will be used for Red Cross Work, also encouraging the ladies in their undertaking. The convenors for this week are Mrs. (Judge) Fralick and Mrs. C. M. Stork, and next week will be under the convenorship of Mrs. S. D. Lazier and Miss Parker, and the general convenors in charge are Mrs. J. M. Waters and Mrs. (Dr.) Dolan.

A GOOD MAN GONE

JACOB FINKLE

At noon on the 6th of Feb. they passed away at his late residence one of the best of men. Jacob Finkle was born in the Township of Sidney, 80 April 13th, 1836. He was a son of John Finkle, and grandson of Jacob Finkle a pioneer of Sidney. He was married February 3rd, 1875, by the Rev. Thomas Cullen, to Jane A. Thrasher, and now sorrowing widow. He was a nephew of the late Abel Finkle, who was especially noted for his extreme devotion to God, and his wonderful power in prayer. Our departed brother lived with his uncle Abel Finkle, during the early part of his life, and was converted to God while yet in his teens. Though not so noted in prayer as was his uncle, he was nevertheless a spiritual giant. So good was he and devoted to the cause of God and the church, that his whole life was a continuous prayer that left an undying influence upon the world, and now that he has entered into Paradise, he still abides in the influence of his life, as a guardian angel in the home, the community and the church. In the home he will not be forgotten, on how they miss the calm and peaceful sunshine of his life; the quiet sweep of his personality, for he was present in all the activities of the home and the farm. Is it any wonder that the widow cannot be comforted, and the married son and his family, who live on the homestead, can only talk of his goodness and kindness. In the community, of which he was almost a life long resident, he will ever be remembered with affection; old and young bear willing testimony to his virtues, but while he is missed in the home and in the community at large, it is especially true in relation to the church. He was selfish absent from its services, and took an active part in them. He was also an official, and was ever loyal to the ministry of the church, as also to all its institutions. He was a fit example for others to follow. May we all catch the inspiration that comes from this life of our departed brother! For years before his passing, he was afflicted with bronchitis, which weakened his frame. Some six years ago he was stricken by lightning. Two years later he suffered from a heart-attack, but still he was faithful in his work, until stricken down with pneumonia, Tuesday morning, January 30th. He passed away at noon February 6th. The funeral, which was largely attended, took place on Thursday, February 8th. The bearers were Messrs F. Wilson, M. Gilbert, W. Jones P. Bowyer, J. Waldron and J. Rich. The memorial service was held in his home church, in which the following ministers took part: Revs. E. E. Howard and F. G. Jobin, former pastors; Rev. L. M. Sharp, a neighboring pastor; and Dr. Marvin, the present pastor of the circuit. After the service the interment took place in the Belleville cemetery, where in addition to the usual service of the church, the brethren of the I. O. L., of which he was a faithful member conducted the Orange burial service. He leaves behind him, besides his widow, two children, Mrs. Fred Denyes, Avondale; E. Merritt Finkle, Foxboro, and W. Herbert Finkle, at home. Dear all, when our life's work is done, meet him in the home over there—Communicated.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

ABOUT RETURNED SOLDIERS

Belleville, March 4.

Dear Sir:—With reference to the statement that has appeared in the papers to the effect that returned soldiers were to be given the preference for employment by the Government, I beg to say that Sergeant Dolan is still being retained as caretaker at the Armouries? When the 34th Battery went from Belleville in August, 1914, why did he stay behind? If he was medically or physically unfit, why is he not discharged? If I was in his place I would be ashamed to be seen long by the boys who are returning from the front. He is holding a situation that a returned soldier should have. Many of us boys thought he was a soldier but now we think he must be a pal of some of the dwellers under the clars and stripes. We would also like to know why the authorities could not in Belleville have a convalescent home, so that our brave boys returning to their homes in the Counties of Hastings or Prince Edward? I am, Sir,

Yours respectfully,
S. POINTER.

BAYSIDE

March 6.—On the evening of February 28th, friends and neighbors to the number of about fifty, met at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Lorne W. Rutan, on the 3rd Line of Tyendinaga. After taking the house by storm, and enjoying the freedom to their hearts content, Mr. and Mrs. Rutan were called to the dias, when the following address was read by Mrs. F. Swain:

Mr. and Mrs. Rutan.

Dear Friends—We are gathered here with you in your home to spend the last social evening; an evening of the pleasure of which is marred only by the knowledge that you are so soon to leave our midst. We all earnestly hope that in your home to which you are going, you will find every possible happiness and a slight token of our esteem and of our sincere friendship, we ask you to accept these gifts, a table and chair, together with our hearty good wishes for a bright and prosperous future. Signed on behalf of your friends and neighbors,

Wm. Latta,
G. N. Phillips.

Mr. Rutan made a most feeling reply, after which the "early song," "They are Jolly Good Fellows" and "God Be With You Till We Meet Again." After enjoying the many good things provided by the willing ladies, some good phonograph selections were given by Mrs. Rutan. At a late hour the guests dispersed to their several homes, leaving their host and hostess in a happy mood to move the next day to their new home, on the old Geo. Rowe farm in Sidney, near Bayside.

KINGSTON

March 6—Kingston mourns the loss of an honored citizen, when death claimed Albert E. Shannon as a victim. The deceased was out at Tichborne when he passed away last Friday. He was connected with the Daily Standard for 30 years as a journalist. He was the youngest son of the late James Shannon, who was editor and proprietor of the Daily News, after the Daily Standard. He was painstaking and conscientious in the discharge of his duties. He was mourned by every one in the Standard office; was ready and helpful in a genial co-worker, who was ever ready to help when called upon. During the last two years of his life he had to give up his work on account of failing health. He was fond of all manly sports, and took a great interest in them. He was greatly interested in everything that pertained to the well-being of the city. He was an authority on the history of the City of Kingston. He was a faithful worker in St. James Church and Sunday School. Here is a good testimonial from his colleagues: "He never injured any person by word or by his pen."

Col. Mantle, the genial Emigration Officer, intends to resign his office. He thinks that a returned soldier should be appointed to the job.

It is a serious problem trying to get help for the farmers. High wages are not attractive enough bait for men who prefer to live in and around town and live on what their wives and families can earn. Men like that ought to be rounded up and forced to enter some institution for the support of their families.

Arrangements are being made to open more theatres at the Fort to some northern locality.

Why should men have this hankering to get out into their living and country in time of need? Uncle Sam does well to crouch down behind John Bull and eat "Bun Humble Pie." If we have to talk about twisting the lion's tail in Congress and teach garbled history to the school children of New England and all over the land, at the time of the Revolutionary War of 1812, than to avenge the slaughter of innocents of Belgium, France, Serbia, Poland, and their own flesh and blood on the Lusitania. They use to boast of being able to take Canada before breakfast. They are not able to take care of themselves, and wars are not won by cowardly boasters.

4TH CONCESSION OF SIDNEY

March 6—Mr. and Mrs. C. Bailey are spending a few days with relatives in Madoc.

Mr. and Mrs. B. Langabeer spent Thursday last with the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. Langabeer.

A number of young people of Belleville were entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Harris on Friday evening.

The concert which was given by the ladies of Pleasant View knitting circle in aid of the Red Cross at Canifton Town Hall on Wednesday night was a decided success. The proceeds of the evening amounted to $75.

Miss Dora Langabeer and Miss M. Pope are spending a week with Mrs. H. Langabeer.

HOLLOWAY

March 6.—The Epworth League was held at the home of Mr. J. Wilson on Thursday evening.

The Red Cross workers met at the home of the president, Mrs. B. McMullen on Thursday last.

Mr. J. McMullen our factory present spent a few days last week in Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Bird spent Sunday evening at Mr. H. Garrison's.

Mr. S. Elliott spent a day last week with friends in Tyendinaga.

Mrs. C. Denyes we are glad to note is able to be home again after a month's treatment in Belleville hospital.

ROSSMORE

March 6—Mrs. George Weese and family from the west have spent some time visiting friends and relatives here and at Belleville.

Mrs. A. C. Ayres and Mrs. Manley Belleg spent Thursday last, with Mrs. J. Thompson.

Mr. and Mrs. Wall, Grove of Belleville visited at the home of the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. Roote, on Sunday last.

Mr. Harry Harper, Belleville, spent Sunday the guest of Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Ayres.

Mrs. M. Grow and family have moved to Belleville.

The hay bridge is being repaired by new piers and new planking.

CARMEL.

March 6—Rev. Hopper conducted the boys' service at our appointment on Sunday last.

Mr. and Mrs. Dafoe, also Rev. and Mrs. Hopper, Belleville, took supper at the home of Mr. Patterson on Saturday evening.

Miss Leah Gilbert has returned home, after spending a few weeks at Tweydale.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Patterson visited in Stirling last week.

Mr. W. Brown, Bethany, has been visiting in our neighborhood.

Miss Keene spent the week end at home.

Mr. G. Garrison visited here last week.

About fifty friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Hall on Saturday evening to bid Mr. Addison Hall farewell, before his departure from our midst and presented him with a set of epoxy brushes and a set of gold initialed cuff links. The following address was read by Miss Eva Sullivan:

To Mr. Addison Hall.

Dear Friend:—As we have gathered here tonight a feeling of sadness lies underneath the spirit of gaiety, for we are about to bid you good-bye. In the past years, during which we have shared our mutual joys and sorrows a deep attachment has grown, and now that distance is to come between us, we realize indeed a great loss to our community. But duty calls us to our respective places here on earth, and no matter where we may be led we take Him at His word—the simple faith, our lives will be sunshine, for He is everywhere. As for you, dear friend, we are sure your numerous worthy qualities will win you many true ones, wherever you are. But we hope you will merely add them to those you have left behind and we will try to remember that our loss is their gain.

We hope that the distance between us is not great, but the deep regard of the people of this community may be ever before you. We ask you to accept these gifts as a slight token of appreciation, assuring you that our best wishes for health and prosperity, many successful days, and may ever remind you of us, your friends.

Signed on behalf of friends and neighbors,

Eva V. Sullivan,
Mrs. W. Simmonds.

Although the evening was dark Mr. Addison Hall made a very suitable reply, and everyone joined in singing, "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow." Refreshments were given by Messrs. E. Horton, B. C. Clarke and F. Hicks. The evening was pleasantly spent in games and singing, in which both young and old participated. PROF FRASER APPOINTED TO INVESTIGATE RUST

Serious Losses of Farmers From This Pest—He Has Made Deep Study

OTTAWA, March 6—W. P. Fraser, M.A., professor of biology of Macdonald College, has been appointed by Hon. Martin Burrell, Minister of Agriculture, to make a special investigations on grain rust to be conducted at the recently erected field laboratories at Brandon, Man., and Indian Head, Sask.

The appointment has been made as a result of the serious losses suffered by the western farmers by reason of the widespread grain pest. It is stated that the average annual loss from rust throughout the west is $100,000,000, but that in years when the disease appears epidemically, as in 1904 and 1916, losses for Canada and the United States amounted to nearly $260,000,000, of which $100,000,000 was lost by Canada.

Mr. Fraser, who is a Canadian by birth is reported to be one of the best authorities on the subject. For a number of years he has been conducting investigations on rust, and has established a life history of fourteen species of the disease.

To Sweep Canada Like Prairie Fire

Pictures of Fighting at Corcelette Will Provide Tremendous Sensation

AMAZINGLY VIVID

Will Surpass Any War Films That Have Hitherto Been Shown

The most dramatic day in the history of the British army in France was the sixteenth of September, 1916 according to Frederick Palmer, the American war correspondent. On that day the British made a great piece of ground than in any single operation since the war began, declared General Sir Douglas Haig. That was the battle when the tanks were introduced, at Courcelette, Martinpuich, Flers and Beaumont Hamel were taken.

The result of the fighting on September 15 and following days was a gain more considerable than any which had attended our arms in the course of a single operation since the commencement of the offensive. In the course of one day's fighting we had broken through two of the enemy's main defensive systems, and had advanced on a front of more than six miles to a depth of a mile. In the course of their advance we had taken three large villages, each powerfully organized for prolonged resistance. Each of these villages had been captured by assault, with a short preparation in the course of a few hours' fighting. All this was accomplished with a small number of casualties in comparison with the troops employed, and in spite of the fact that, as was afterwards discovered, the attack did not come as a complete surprise to the enemy.

An Army of Prisoners ..

"The total number of prisoners taken in these operations since the commencement on the 15th ... army front on the evening of September 15 amounted at this date to over 4,000 including 127 officers."

The Canadians distinguished themselves in this battle, and in a splendid picture of their achievements that the war records office under Sir Max Aitken served.

"The film is amazingly vivid," cables F. A. McKenzie to The Intelligencer, "the moving tragedy far surpassing any war films hitherto shown. They will sweep through Canada like a prairie fire, showing the actuality of war as never before. It is to be shown at Griffin's Opera House, Belleville, Monday and Tuesday, March 12 and 13, Matinee and evening.

Fine "Listeners" On Party Lines

Hon. Mr. Lucas, Attorney-General Introduces New Telephone Legislation

TORONTO, March 6—Listening to telephone conversations on party lines is going to be an unprofitable amusement in the future. Hon. J. D. Lucas introduced in the Legislature yesterday amendments to the Ontario Telephone Act that will put a penalty on such offences. The Attorney-General stated for the present the penalty would be placed upon those who intended to a conversation not intended for them and repeated it. The provision is also made to cover linesmen or operators who repeat things heard over the line.

This bill introduced provides for an important arrangement between Dominion and province in respect to telephone connections.

We understand that the Dominion Government during the present session will adopt legislation providing for a joint meeting of the Ontario and Dominion boards for the purpose of arranging terms of connection between provincial and Dominion companies. This will be a tribunal to which a provincial company may go to ask for a connection with a Dominion company, which means, of course the Bell Telephone Company, and it also provides the necessary machinery for our board taking part in the fight for liberation which is demanded by the terms on which a provincial company can secure connections with a Dominion company, such as the Bell.

The Attorney-General stated that his bill prevented a local company from linking up with the Bell without the consent of the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board.

NEW HIGHWAY TRAFFIC BUREAU ADDED TO SHIPPING

New Goodrich Plan Will Help Relieve Freight Congestion of Railroads.

The establishment of a Highway Traffic Bureau to aid manufacturers in routing and shipping merchandise by motor truck is the newest innovation of the B. F. Goodrich Company. This new bureau will have at its disposal the immense resources of the Goodrich National Touring Bureau which are so complete.

Coconut Oil Fine For Washing Hair

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Don't use prepared shampoos containing alkali, that contains too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Pure plain unsalted cocoanut oil (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub the oil in. Use a teaspoonful will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. One application or rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff, and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get unalsified cocanut oil at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.

A SILLY EPIDEMIC.

A pestilential custom accentuated by the war is that whereby municipal councils, boards of trade and other local organizations pass fool resolutions and send them on to Ottawa for consideration. Such a practice was a public nuisance in time of war. Most of these resolutions are either ill-considered or unsoundly based; they give every cheap-jack agitator clamoring for public applause opportunity to magnify his importance; and they have a tendency to darken counsel, give rise to futile controversy, confuse the public, undermine confidence in the country's leadership, and enfeeble concentrated national effort in the war.

Here is an example of how the thing works out. Two months ago the little town of Duncan, in Manitoba, passed a resolution demanding that the Dominion Government take active steps "as early as possible" to have Canadian nickel refined in Canada. This resolution was forwarded to the majority of Dominion municipalities, and was promptly adopted by most of them and sent on to Ottawa for consideration. And what are the facts? While these municipalities and boards of trade were passing resolutions demanding that the Borden Government take steps "as early as possible" to see that our nickel be refined in Canada, a gigantic nickel refinery that will treat Canadian ores upon Canadian soil was being rushed to completion at Port Colborne; the company erecting the refinery had already expended about $200,000 on the building and had let tenders for plant and processes to the extent of $1,280,000. Steps that parish politicians thought the Government should take "as early as possible" in 1917, had been taken by the Government early in 1915.

The foregoing is only one among scores of foolish, futile resolutions and petitions that are daily deluging Ottawa, hindering and taking up the time of the Government when that time should be concentrated upon the vast issues of the war.

Members of town and city councils and boards of trade who want to see the energies and the thought of our country concentrated on the war can render a splendid service by asking a few common-sense questions when 'cranks introduce these resolutions. They may rest assured that the men who are in charge of affairs in Ottawa are in a vastly better position and infinitely better equipped to deal with these questions than men who are necessarily without official information, and, sometimes, unfortunately, without information of any other kind.

SETTLING RETURNED

The Ontario Government's scheme for settling returned soldiers upon the vacant lands of the Province, is both liberal and comprehensive.

The plan of the Administration as outlined by the Minister of Lands, Forests and Mines is to provide free agricultural training at Monteith; to create farm colonies on the community system, with co-operative facilities and central religious and educational buildings; to advance loans to settlers on easy terms; to supply community equipment at central depots; to settle the veterans along railway and transportation routes as much as possible, and to give to each man an 80-acre lot with a 10-acre frontage cleared by the Province. Such a plan is consistent with the splendid devotion and war record of the Government. The special stress it makes to the returned soldier is indicated by the statement that the Hon. Mr. Ferguson has already received numerous applications for lots.

AUSTRALIA AND CANADA.

The fusion of the two political parties in Australia into a "War Government," is being used by Canadian Liberal newspapers as an argument for coalition in Canada. The position is not well taken. Premier Hughes had only a minority support in the Australian Parliament. His Government had been rent in twain over the conscription issue, his policy of conscription had been defeated, his Labor supporters had split into factions. Coalition became necessary to save the Commonwealth from a general election and to enable the work of Parliament to continue. In Canada the situation is vastly different. In a Parliament of 221 members, Sir Robert Borden has a commanding majority of about 40, his leadership is not questioned, his war policy has just been endorsed in a portion of the Dominion where Liberals expected it would be unpopular, and the Opposition is divided and generally weak. In the light of these two absolutely different positions regard for common-sense prohibits talk of coalition in Canada because there has been coalition in Australia.

Current Comment

Now it is a scarcity of sauerkraut that threatens, a hampering shortage of cabbage, and perhaps, a famine in pickles.

Those coal dealers who make a practice of shutting off their telephones are also severing diplomatic relations with belligerents.—Ottawa Journal-Press.

The Customs revenue of Canada for the fiscal year which ends on March 31st, will probably exceed that of the last fiscal year by more than forty million dollars.

The offer of the International Nickel Company to place its entire plant at the disposal of the Government as well as offer the war brake out completely disposes of Mr. Dewart's nickel charges.

"Bonne Entente" conventions keep telling the country what Sir Robert Borden should do. Sir Wilfrid Laurier keeps telling the country what Sir Robert's do. Sir Robert Borden will decide what the country will do.

Editorial comment in Monday's New York morning newspapers was extremely bitter against the Bolshevik tactics which killed the so-called armed neutrality bill in the closing hours of the sixty-fourth U. S. Congress.

According to The Kreuz Zietung of Berlin, the entire railway system of Germany has been placed under the military authorities. The newspaper says an Imperial order has been promulgated to the chief of the field railway system.

All the Lucien Cannons are not confined to the Liberal party in Quebec. Down in the Acadian counties of New Brunswick in the Murray Government's land settlement policy for returned soldiers was a scheme to oust the French in favor of English Protestants.

Another proof of Germany's "diseased mentality," as Japan so aptly term it, is the official announcement that the knowledge of Germany's treacherous plot involve the United States in war with Mexico and Japan could only have come to the United States by an act of base treachery.—Montreal Herald.

In these anything significant in the fact that the Conservatives, though defeated in New Brunswick, have a majority of the English-speaking representatives in the Legislature? Could representation of eleven members from the Acadian constituencies give the Liberals their majority of sig in the Province.

Col. F. W. Marlowe, who resigned some time ago from the Canadian Medical Service, makes a report in March, 1917, based upon conditions that obtained in the Medical Service in 1916. In the meantime the conditions he complained of had been remedied. With most of our ready critics talk the Government acts.

A process invented by an Italian chemist for executing essential oils from vanilla beans is said not to affect the chemical properties of the oils in any way, and it is predicted that it eventually will revolutionize the industry.

Those Quebec Liberals who are so anxious to cover up Sir Wilfrid Laurier's failure to secure recruits among his compatriots are somewhat inconsistent. In one breath they proclaim that much has done but full duty. In the next they argue that the reason she has done her full duty is because of Nationalists.

Captain Bainurst, the food controller's spokesman in the British House of Commons, predicted in reply to questions the every one would have to go without potatoes in the late spring and early summer. He said there was an unprecedented shortage not only in the United Kingdom, but throughout the world.

PAINFUL SWOLLEN VEINS QUICKLY RELIEVED AND REDUCED

Mrs. R. M. Remler of Federal, Kansas, writes an interesting account of her success in reducing a severe case of enlarged veins that should be encouraging to others similarly afflicted. She suffered with badly swollen and inflamed veins (in fact one had broken) for more than seven years before she became acquainted with Absorbine, Jr., and used it. Absorbine Jr. was faithfully applied for several weeks and to quote from her letter, "the large knots in the veins left, it was all nicely healed, and has not bothered me since."

Picturesque Character Dead.

James Duckworth, known as "the old man of Cataraqui," is dead, and his remains were taken to their last resting place on William's farm two days ago. The old fellow was born in 1823, and when he died, eighty years ago, and was found dead in his bed one bitterly cold January morning. The old man's sister died some years ago, and her bed remains still in the same condition as when she left it. His brother Janes' couch was also bed, untouched for many years in the lonely brick house, while his own old-fashioned corduroy bed was the only piece of furniture adorning the miser's private apartment with its thickly cobwebbed ceiling. When Chief Constable Herkes, of Brampton, investigated, the mattress of the bed furnished up the hinges as he tried to turn it over, while he came upon an account book containing nearly $800 in many of these dollar bills as far back as 1870, and quite freshly dated, showing $25,000 to the old man's credit in the Dominion Bank was found under the mattress. Scotch newspapers were scattered by the side of the bed, and in an old box, among screws and nails and pieces of string were found several mortgages, indicating that the deceased must have been worth $100,000 at least. His 250-acre farm, for miles west of Brampton, has not been touched by the plough for 20 years or more.

Fighting Boy Scouts.

At a conservative estimate, between 3,500 and 5,000 Canadian ex-Boy Scouts are on active service, H. O. Hammond, Provincial Secretary of the Boy Scouts, recently stated. Mr. Hammond has just returned from a trip to England and France as representative of the Canadian Council. Scouts and ex-scouts are at ex-scouts working in England and fighting in France under all conditions. They are doing a wonderful work in England in the Government office and department, and as guards on the east coast of England. "Don't forget I was a ex-scout," said Mr. Hammond, "who gave the first warning of the presence of German warships off Scarboro'." Mr. Hammond says the Canadian women in the England are doing splendid work, but he does not think anyone should go to England unless resolved to work, for there is lots to be done. "I can't think though that any Canadian woman goes over there without that resolve," he said.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

Winnipeg, March 8.—Wheat closed 4c up on May and 3¼c up on July, but October was dropped 4c for May and 3¼c for July. Oats closed ¼c higher for May, gained 3¾c in May and 3¼c in July.

Barley closed unchanged to ¼c lower in the morning by the strength of Chicago, and by a report from Ottawa which came from that market to buy the May. Flax closed the grain generally easier. There was some advance, and attacked their side so strongly that Duty wheat only at the close.

The feature of the day was the good cash demand, which was against a big break. The local pit crowd were bearish, but the cash demand was the controlling factor in the market, the features are partially responsible.

To Make Supreme Effort.

PARIS, March 6.—Premier Paul Painleve, Minister of Public Instruction, speaking Sunday at the Sorbonne, declared optimism when the war will end, said the decisive phase of the struggle would begin with the spring. By decisive, however, he said he did not mean short, and he predicted that Germany was preparing a supreme effort.

"The nearer we approach the denouement," he declared, the harder will be the task."

The speaker warned civilians against indifference and nervousness, and declared their duty was to endure courageously the privations and rudities caused them, to the end of the war. He asked his hearers to lend this message to the soldiers at the front.

"You may count on us to do our entire duty to the very end without flinching."

In France a young man matrimonially inclined sometimes thinks about the "don't" in this country he thinks about it, too, but he spells it "d-o-n-'-t."

A COMPLICATED CASE

It Resulted From an Endeavor to Make a Match

By R. A. MITCHELL

"Quite the wisest of females are not aware the valuable efforts to which we men are subjected to, in order that the female portion of the public are not very aware of them."

Ken Devereux was my chum in the days of which I write, and I confess he fascinated me, for he was a man of culture and easy parlance and wines for them, and it became a joke amongst us that the matter in the case of Ralph was left entirely to Ralph, that I proposed to make a match for him with my college chum, he showed no interest in the proposition whatever.

"Wait till you see her," I said to him, "for she is as handsome as she is unaffected, so most of the girls you have taken out on me," he replied, "I don't want to go here."

It invited Kate to spend the spring vacation with me. I had been just invited in telling her that I had a brother as her dear as I had been in telling Ralph that I had a sister for him, though my plan was, rather a fancy than a serious intention. I was quite curious to see how these two persons who had been thus informed would greet one another. Ralph and I went to the station to meet my guest, and I did not have a doubt concerning the way they were impressed with each other. After our return home I said to Ralph:

"She's not so homely as the run of new fashions was in only recently," replied Kate if she did not think my brother a fine fellow, and she said, "very well in a quiet, unpretentious way."

We were all together for two weeks, with other persons about our house, but I could not see that Ralph and Kate were especially interested in each other. Ralph would, rather favor my brother girl and Kate another man. It struck me that I had made a new failure in picking out a wife for Ralph, so I, after said, my going so was a matter of great concern to me, I merely intended to make about it.

Ralph said I went back to college, and Kate went to graduating exercises. I were engaged in our preparations for the latter event when I received a letter from Ralph came to see graduate. Kate said part in the graduating exercises of the school I attended, and I wrote Ralph look very sweet in her pure white costume. He replied indifferently, that all girl graduates looked sweet.

Kate invited me to spend a few weeks with her after the commencement, and we left college together. The day after our arrival at her home Kate took me to help her room and said to me:

"Brute, I have a very unpleasant announcement to make to you."

"Do tell me what it is!" I said, pretending to be much concerned.

"I am going to bring a suit against your brother for breach of promise of marriage."

I looked at her with as much amazement as if she had thrown a pistol and pointed it either at my head or heart.

"What—how—where?" I began, but got no further.

"You may remember what you said about Ralph to me before we met. Well, I had no pocket gone to your house for the spring recess that Ralph, though he knew I was to be there, never came to see me, and I got Ralph into the habit of writing to me. Since graduation I accepted his invitation to no doubt now that he was simply desirous to make a visit here. He has no cause to act as he has toward me, and I intend to punish him for his conduct."

"But what?"

"I'm surprised that you should think of making a fair return."

"Kate, you are talking back to a friend when we parted I was engaged

THIS OINTMENT POSSESSES POWER TO HEAL THE SKIN

Two Cases Which Prove the Extraordinary Healing Power of Dr. Chase's Ointment

Peterboro' Ont. Mar. 7—The use many people.

Mrs. W. W. Oliver, Fort George, Algonquin Park, P.O., writes: "I am going to tell you my experience with Dr. Chase's Ointment. There was a spot came on my face something like a pimple, and it grew larger and larger and several doctors whom I consulted said it was a skin cancer, and that it would have to be cut or burned out. I intended having this done, but changed my mind when my brother recommended Dr. Chase's Ointment. Before I had finished one box of the ointment this skin trouble had gone, and the place has never since shown. I cannot praise Dr. Chase's Ointment too much, and you are at liberty to publish this letter.

If you have never used Dr. Chase's Ointment send a two-cent stamp for a sample box, and mention this paper. Price thirty cents a box, all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

Stomach Medicines Are Dangerous

DOCTORS NOW ADVISE MAGNESIA

Just how dangerous it is to habitually dose the stomach with "Dyspepsia" medicines is often not realized until too late. It seems so simple to buy relief in a form of some special mixture or take "tablets" of soda, pepsin, etc., after meals, and the chances are this dragging is not apparent until, perhaps years afterward, when it is found that gastric juice has almost ceased their way through the stomach walls. Regrets are then unavailing; it is in the early stages when indigestion, dyspepsia, heart burning, flatulence, etc., indicate excessive acidity of the stomach and fermentation of food contents that prompt relief should be taken. Drugs and medicines are unsuitable and often dangerous—they have little or no influence upon the harmful acid, and what is why doctors are discarding them and advising sufferers from indigestion and stomach trouble to get rid of the dangerous acid and sour food contents bland and sweet by taking a little pure bisurated magnesia instead. Bisurated Magnesia is an absolutely pure anti-acid which can be readily obtained from any druggist. It is absolutely harmless, is practically tasteless and is teaspoonful taken in a little warm water after meals, is usually be found quite sufficient to instantly neutralize the excessive acid in the stomach and prevent all possibility of the food fermenting.

[illegible] within its capabilities that you say name. But I cannot sacrifice of your accepting a money consideration for such an injury."

"I can give the amount to charity," said Kate, it seemed to me rather reversely.

"Are you sure," I said, "that there is nothing vindictive in your action?"

"Nothing of the kind. I simply wish to teach one man that he cannot treat a woman with impunity. What are we women do under similar circumstances is their affair, being my business."

"Well, then, I suppose nothing remains but for you to name the sum you claim and for me to name the amount to Ralph."

Kate made no reply to this at once, but at last said:

"I think the matter can be settled between the principals better than through a third party."

I thought this an astute and asked if I should say to Ralph that she would consent to a conference with him. She objected to this with apparent vehemence. It occurred to me that I could say well communicate this over the telephone, going to the instrument, and called Ralph.

"I think that it would be best for her to give your her terms of settlement personally. Come over and see her."

"I haven't time." And I heard a click as if he'd hung up.

When I informed Kate of this she looked troubled. After some deliberation she went to the telephone herself. There was no tooth intending it; and I heard Ralph hearing what she said, though of course I heard no replies. What seemed of greatest importance to me

"I didn't give that rose to Mr. Hathaway." He took it without my permission."

"Yes, I admit that it must have seemed, very wrong to you for me to give away a rose that you had given me."

"Then you'll be over for luncheon?"

"For whom's sake?" I overheard what Kate rejoined me. "Has all this not been shown as small a matter?"

"It wasn't a small matter at all. Ralph gave me a rose. Another man took it, and Ralph saw him wearing it. Ralph, instead of coming to me for an explanation, treated me shamefully. I didn't wait for Ralph's coming. The rose had no further use for me.

"I distinctly remember that I do not claim to have made this match. Indeed, I was as far from it as one could possibly be. Both Ralph and Kate fooled me completely. Just think of those two, who appeared to fall in love with each other and were both desperately caught, taking upon a monetary consideration for wounded affection! And the cause—could anything be more ridiculous!

CONFIDENT OF VICTORY.

Hon. F. B. McCurdy Gets First-hand Impressions at Front.

Impressed by the splendid spirit of the fighting troops, including the Canadians, and the resolute determination and confidence in winning the war, Hon. F. B. McCurdy, Parliamentary secretary of the Militia Department, is back in London after an absence of almost two months in Great Britain and at the front. He crossed on the Noordam.

Mr. McCurdy went over to acquaint himself more fully with the condition of the Canadian forces. He visited the headquarters in London, all the camps in England where Canadians are training, and each of the Canadian divisions in France.

"At the front," he said in an interview, "the French are confident and the British and Canadians optimistic. The former, differing from the British prevailing in some quarters, have very substantial reasons. The feeling which prevails among the allied forces is that they have taken the measure of the enemy and that the latest development in their tactics of frightfulness is indicated by their appreciation that the war will definitely turned against them in the near future by the entrance of the United States.

"There is no question whatever as to the substantial outcome of the war. The armies are in fine shape as regards the main forces and reserves, but at the same time no one closes his eyes to what has to come before victory is accomplished. The spirit everywhere is one of grim determination."

Mr. McCurdy observed with satisfaction that the Canadians have won great name for themselves.

"That great struggle," he stated "is built upon a record of [illegible] there at the front. The record of the Dominion in the coming War Council, a National corollary of the work one does have are performed. They have richly earned for their contribution of practical attention and consultation in what will probably be the most important assembly in the Empire's history."

Alluding to the representations of the Canadian forces in England, the Parliamentary Secretary stated that the feeling among the men is one of confidence in Sir George Perley, the Canadian High Commissioner, and General Turner, commandant in England.

A VICTIM OF CRUELTY.

Hon. Dr. Beland Was Kept From Seeing Dying Wife.

That the British and Canadian Governments had made every effort to secure the release of Hon. Dr. Beland, ex-minister, Deaner, now a prisoner of war in the hands of the Germans, was stated by Sir Robert Borden in the Commons recently. The Prime Minister replied to an enquiry by Mr. Morell, of Bonaventure, who had read that two prominent Belgians, Mr. Beland and Mr. Beland, a Belgian noblewoman, died recently in Belgium, and that her husband was refused permission to console her death. Dr. Beland was with his wife in Belgium when war broke out, and refused to leave for England, stating behind to attend wounded Belgians and Germans in Antwerp before the fall of that city. Some time ago he was imprisoned by the Germans in a Berlin detention camp, and, although successive appeals were made to high German authorities, he was always refused a permit to see his sick wife; who died some days ago without seeing her husband. It is an outrage for Germany for having thus treated Dr. Beland, who after all committed no other crime than staying behind to attend the wounded and sick Germans as well as Belgians. It has greatly angered the people in this country to hear that innocent Canadian heroes are so inhumanly treated by Germany.

Eminent Sculptor Passes.

John Houghton Mangee, Senator of Homedell House, Chiwick, Mal., England, a sculptor who came to Canada several months ago to execute the exterior and interior mural decorations of the new House of Parliament in Ottawa, died on Monday last. A son of his brother, Frederick C. D. Bonner, Newark, N. J., arrived in Ottawa after he had become ill, but it was not until his brother came to Ottawa that his true condition was learned. Mr. Bonnor was taken to his brother's home, where his wife was also. She arrived from England, and reached her husband's side just before the end. Before he died, Since the war Mr. Mangee had designed four groups of statuary, known as "Kitchener's War Memorial," for which a fund is being raised to make them a perpetual memorial to the late Earl; his body was cremated and his ashes interred in the family cemetery at Kitchener's Llangefni, in Wales, where five generations of his people are buried.

To Aid the French.

A former Woodstock boy, Dr. Charles White, son of James White, has been appointed to go to France to take charge of all the voluntary hospitals under the health service of the French War Department. Dr. White's appointment came from the French Government through Ralph and he will assume charge of the hospitals and training schools of the French Government in stamping out the scourge among the soldiers in the camps and trenches. Dr. White is a Medical Director of the Tuberculosis League Hospital in Pittsburg.

GOLDEN TWILIGHT.

In the twilight, golden twilight,
When the sun has had its good-night,
And its rays are still reflected,
As the day has left our sight,
When all shadows have departed,
The dew is falling fast,
When the stars begin to twinkle,
And a lurid light is cast,
When the birds have ceased to warble,
And have nestled for the night,
When the bullfrog's "chug" is strengthened
By the waning of the light,
Then the hour for quiet reflection,
And all nature seems to rest,
For the weary turmoil is over,
After hours of strenuous test.
'Tis the hour of peace and quiet,
'Tis the hour of repose,
'Tis the time of relaxation,
Days' toiling's a rose.
'Tis a time for contemplation,
Of the work one has reviewed,
And the errors that have marred it
Can be studied and corrected.
In the heyday of our manhood
Life is full of strength and power,
But the twilight approaches
Before we're aware.
We scare feel the gloaming hour,
The golden twilight, twilight!
Waning days are drawing near;
Comfort and contentment cheer
When life's sky is bright and clear.
—R. S. Hittephouse.

Canadian May Form Regiment.

It is currently reported in the Toronto newspapers that a movement is on foot in the event of Ids United States going to war with Germany to form a regiment of Canadians now living in the United States. Such a regiment, it is said, could easily be accomplished, and would be a return compliment to any Americans who have enlisted in the Canadian forces for overseas service.

Speaking of covert acts, what could be more covert than the present state of American shipping, which has been made to hide itself in the harbors

Snapshot at the Legislature

(Tom Flynn in Toronto Sunday World)

Collins, your friend, not Shortt!

That is the burden of every speech on the women suffrage question. So far the speeches have been directed to the ladder galleries, the benches filled with a play for position, the governments did promise equal suffrage in the next session, the throne and Mr. Rowell was quick to move the usual amendment to the address calling attention to that fact, and expressing the desire of the legislature for immediate action. This amendment was ruled out of order upon the narrow ground that a government member, Mr. Johnson of West Hastings, had already introduced a bill giving votes to women.

Mr. Johnson, though a young man, claims to be the father of equal suffrage legislation. This is disputed by Allan Studholme, Labor member for East Hamilton. A number of gentlemen claim the distinction, just as a number of gentlemen claim to be the fathers of the Ontario Temperance Act.

Both political parties labor under the delusion that any body of voters to whom the franchise is extended will, out of gratitude, vote as a unit in favor of the party that extended the franchise. A little study of history would undeceive them. So far as the women of Ontario are concerned they will probably argue that Mr. Rowell proposed, and Mr. William H. Hearst agreed to votes for women in the hope of getting some political advantage.

If the premier can be said to have capitulated on the woman suffrage question it must be admitted that he surrendered most gracefully—a man should when a lady is at the other end of the pistol. There is no use in yielding grudgingly, as did the unjust judge in the Scriptures. "Success," says Sir William, "can only be attained by doing the right thing at the right time." After all, it is doubtful if any government would have put through prohibition and votes for women three years ago, no matter who was premier. But events move faster than men, and the war has made easy many things which, before the war were regarded as impossible. Sir William may never be in advance of public opinion but he keeps pretty well up with the procession.

No member spoke on either the address or the budget without ostentatiously climbing on the water wagon. Every Ontario statesman, it would appears, has always been a rampant prohibitionist. The Conservatives only opposed the Rowell-Sinclair "no bar" policy because it did not go far enough. For years past they were eager, it seems, to banish not only the bars, but also the shops, but Rowell was the bad man who prevented them.

Yet only nine months ago it was common talk that Hearst would be deposed from the premiership, and Rowell from the leadership, chiefly because they were prohibitionists. In North Perth and Southwest Toronto alike both parties pledged to the liquor vote. The Liberals did it more adroitly, knowing that the liquor people had it in for Hearst. The Conservatives, including members of the town, were forced into the open, and they went about saying that the Ontario Temperance Act was only a temporary measure, a war time expedient, and that the good old times would return again. Four per cent. beer, wine and beer licenses and other concessions were, by intimation at least, promised to the people. The Tories made great capital of the fact that the Grits were sewed up to prohibition because of the Rowell leader ship, and the Grits countered, undoubtedly, by intimating that Mr Rowell would have the rollers put under him before his party came back to power.

It is not an edifying episode in our political history, and it is pertinent to intimate that both Sir William Hearst and Mr. Rowell can prove an alibi.

Mr. Rowell and Mr. Hearst are a strong team, and the Liberal ranks are more chirpy at Queen's Park than they have been for twelve years. On the other hand, it must be admitted that the Conservative members appear quite enthusiastic and united in their support of Premier Hearst. The Premier is doing nicely. He certainly seems to be a more commanding figure in the legislature than he does on the public platform, but far be it from us to suggest that the proverb about the one-eyed man being king among the blind can serve as an explanation.

SEIZED GERMAN MAIL

Taken to Argentina by Dutch Vessel, Which Will Intern

BUENOS AIRES, March 6.—The Dutch steamer Amsterland arrived, bringing quantities of securities and mail from Germany.

The Argentine Government permitted delivery of the securities, but seized all the German mail on the ground that it was not stamped and postage prepaid.

Local agents for the Amsterland said the vessel would probably intern her rather than run the risk of seizure by allied patrol vessels in the South Atlantic in retaliation for her aid rendered Germany.

BIG COTTON CARGO PREY OF FLAMES

BALTIMORE, March 6.—Several thousand tons of cotton consigned to Liverpool was destroyed last night in a fire in the hold of the British steamer Carnarvon of the Garland Line. The vessel had about finished loading, and would have cleared this morning. Included in the cargo was a large and varied supply of merchandise assigned to the Allies. The capacity of the vessel is 7,000 tons. The origin of the fire has not yet been determined.

Reserve fire apparatus was called out, as were also the fire boats, to combat the flames. The hold was filled with water, and the vessel refitted by the bottom of her ship, besides the Baltimore and Ohio elevator at Locust Point. Firemen cut holes in the sides of the boat with acetylene torches in order to get at the fire, located directly beneath the engine room. The loss is not yet known.

Quebec Behind In Recruiting

Total Doubled by Toronto District Alone—Should Have Had Half Million

OTTAWA, March 6.—Enlistments in the Canadian Expeditionary Forces have reached 399,454, according to figures issued by the Department of Militia and Defence. Ontario province supplied its allotted number of 250,000,000 promised by Canada at the beginning of the 1916, would now be garnering in Palliser of the provinces to recruit up to the standard of the other provinces is emphasized in the official figures, which show that the Toronto district alone has enlisted twice as many men as the whole of Quebec. The figures stand: Toronto district, 36,587. Province of Quebec, 43,847. And the Quebec figures include more than 20,000 English-speaking recruits mostly secured in Montreal. Total enlistments in the Dominion during the last two weeks of February reached 3,500. The number for the complete month was 7,630, an increase of 126 over January.

Will Prosecute Medical Men

Who are Giving Liquor Prescriptions for Other Than Legal Purposes

TORONTO, March 6.—The Ontario Board of License Commissioners is going on the warpath after medical men who are issuing prescriptions for liquor to individuals for other purposes than those permitted under the Ontario Temperance Act. Reports have reached the board that in a certain Ontario town a couple of doctors, specialist in prescriptions for liquor which they issued that the liquor was required for the making of fruit cake and other family baking, both of which are contrary to the act. The board has sent an inspector to investigate, and if it is found that the doctors who gave the prescriptions and the druggists who filled them, acted culpably all will be prosecuted.

Returns are being gathered by the board of the sales of liquor from drug stores. With this information before it the board will be able to check up illegal sales. In one case at least the board has evidence that 20 per cent. of the prescriptions of a doctor handled by a certain druggist will be personally looked into and prosecutions will follow.

THE COST OF WAR.

How Money Voted by the Dominion is Spent.

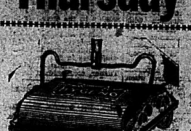
In launching discussion of the resolution to provide $500,000,000, Sir Robert Borden presented to Parliament a statement of Canada's war expenditures during the fiscal year and an estimate of such expenditures during the coming period.

Of the amount asked, the Department of Militia and Defence requires $196,173,000, the Overseas Militia Department $219,000,000, and the Naval Service $17,500,000. In reference to this the Prime Ministers memorandum referred to "new ships, and maintenance." The war expenditures proper provide for a total of $432,000,000. The balance of the half million may be devoted towards further assistance to Great Britain in financing war orders in Canada.

The detailed items for the land forces include pay and allowances for 400,000 troops, $193,500,000; separation allowances, $36,000,000; rations and subsistence, $61,000,000; clothing and necessaries, $42,000,000; equipment and general stores, $42,261,000; ammunition, $16,750,000; small arms and machine guns and 80,000 Ross rifles and bayonets, $5,444,000; forage, $2,500,000; remounts, $2,000,000, ocean transport, $5,000,000; railway transport, $2,000,000; engineer service, $4,000,000; civil supplies, $2,000,000; recruiting, customs duties, funeral expenses, fuel, $5,000,000.

The total expenditures by fiscal years since the war began has been: 1914, $60,750,476; 1915, $146,197,765; 1916 and 1917, up to January 31st, $218,901,823. Of the total expenditure for war during the present fiscal year the Militia Department and controlled $208,212,000, the Naval Service $5,775,000, and the Justice Department $1,004,000.

The Prime Minister explained that after deducting the expenses already borne by Canada in connection with the maintenance of its troops, such as pay, etc., six shillings per man per day was the War Office estimate of the net cost of the Canadian soldier at the front, the total cost being nine shillings and sixpence. The six shillings was, therefore, the amount which Canada will had to pay. As for the equipment of the troops, that would belong to the Dominion after the war.



Hon. G. H. Perley said that Canada was paying the 1,200 naval recruits who have been sent overseas.

Sir Robert Borden told Sir Wilfrid Laurier that the reason for the great increase in this year's war vote was the financing of Great Britain's munition purchases here.

The Opposition leader then asked

Operated Old Mill.

Every collection of Toronto views published in recent years contains a picture of the Old Mill on the Humber, one of the suburban beauty spots of the city. This view has been painted and photographed thousands of times. It will surprise most persons to hear that the mill was operated until 1914 and that it has just died at the age of 84 years. Jacob Atkinson owned and operated the historical old mill as a foundry back in the 60's of the last century, and it was finally burned down. Having remained from that time the picturesque ruin like that it is to-day.

In refusing to make an eloquent appeal for the Red Cross and Patriotic Fund campaigns in the city of London on the ground that talk is cheap, Bishop M. F. As Blind as Love.

As the German army approached Brussels in August, 1914, it was reported that the invaders might shell the city. As a high order of alarm the Chinese minister went to see our minister. Broad Whitlock, to see what Whitlock meant to do in the event of bombardment.

"I do not believe there will be any assault," said Whitlock. "My information is that the authorities will surrender Brussels to avoid any possibility of damage. But if there should be an engagement and the Germans should use their heavy guns, I shall build a wall around my country over this building, and I shall call upon my fellow countrymen to come here for safety and protection." I advise you to do the same thing with regard to your people."

"But, Mr. Whitlock," murmured the Chinaman in his polite but labored English, "the cannon—he has no eyes!"—Saturday Evening Post.

Should Have Read "Rings"

In yesterday's report of the City Hall daily transaction an error made in the list submitted by Messrs. Tickell & Sons Company, made the figure wrong and misleading. The following is the correct copy of the tender:

Dear Sirs,—In reply to requisition we beg to say we will supply chairs similar to those in the city hall with the bent rings supporting legs, at $1.85 each if required with wood in supporting legs at $1.85 each. If chairs are required to be an exact match of those already in the hall we think $2.85 with bent rings supporting legs, and $2.60 each if furnished with the rings supporting the legs.

Yours respectfully,

WEDDING BELLS.

EGGLETON—SAYERS

On Wednesday, February 28th, at high noon, a very pretty home wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh H. Meyers, Front of Sidney, when their eldest daughter, Hazel May, became the bride of Richard Wellington Eggleton, second son of Mrs. Wallon Eggleton, Second Concession of Sidney. The ceremony was performed by Rev. G. E. Rose, of Trenton, in the presence of the immediate relatives and friends. Promptly to the strains of the Wedding Bell March, played by Miss Nina Meyers, sister of the bride, the young couple entered the drawing room, and took their places beneath the floral bell and arch of evergreens and lilies. The bride, who was given away by her father, was handsomely dressed in white silk crepe de chine, with minon, pearl and fur trimmings, with roses entwined in her hair, and carrying in her hand a beautiful white testament. She wore the groom's gift, a beautiful brooch with emerald and pearl settings.

After the ceremony the guests repaired to the dining room, where they sat down to a sumptuous wedding dinner. The bride was the recipient of many beautiful and costly presents. The happy couple left amid showers of confetti for Bowmanville, Toronto and other western points. The bride travelled in a suit of navy blue serge, with picture hat to match, and osprey trimmings. On their return Mr. and Mrs. Eggleton will reside in their new home on the Second Concession of Sidney. Their many friends join in wishing them a long and happy voyage through life.

Baseball Player At the Front

ALTHOUGH the names of athletes that have been most prominent in the war reports from the Canadian front have been most those of baseball players, there is one outstanding exception to that rule. At least one exponent of the national game of the United States has been doing splendid work with the Canadian forces.

Lieut. William O'Hara, former manager of the Toronto baseball team of the International League, is a Canadian soldier with the New York Giants of the National League, has transferred Toronto direct from the Somme on a brief leave of absence. "Bill," as he is popularly known, left the world of sport for the world of battle about thirteen months ago. He enlisted in the Royal Naval Air Service, completed his course at the Curtiss Aviation School with high honors, and went overseas. After several months in the aviation game, "Bill" transferred to an infantry battalion, going into France with the 54th. And now, after six months of continuous duty in the Ypres and Somme districts, exposed to the most severe gruelling that Canada has yet given her soldiers, he is back, safe and sound, and in the pink of condition.

"Bill" met at least many of the recognized baseball men in discussions concerning his activities at the front. The most persistent one—that he had been wounded and his eyesight affected — was stoutly denied by O'Hara. Another report that he had been taken from the infantry and placed in charge of a coaching service was also declared to be erroneous. "I went into the infantry as a machine gun officer in charge of a platoon," said "Bill," "and there I stayed until I was given leave of absence. I met many Toronto boys over there that I knew when they were engaged in different lines of sport in Canada. Art Dister, the old Parkdale football player, has made a great reputation for himself. He was in coaching service in the aerial service with high honors and developed into a high-class aviator. Jack McGuinn, the old St. Michael's hockey player, is also doing splendidly. The Indians are very popular wherever they go, and are accorded the best of treatment."

During his first two months in the trenches O'Hara was stationed in the Ypres salient, and was within a few miles of the town of Ypres. Although the Canadians lost heavily in the salient fighting, they were successful in inflicting heavy losses on the Germans. "Bill" explained the method which the Canadians adopted in dismissing the deadly poisonous gas. The gas is contained in long, heavy cylinders and stationed about fifty yards apart along the front desired to be attacked. When the wind blows in the proper direction small taps are opened and the gas drifts from the enemy in great dense clouds. The use of poisonous gas, however, has been discontinued to a great extent. There is every reason to believe that the wind will change and the men using the gas will suffer accordingly.

"I do not think that the Canadians ever used gas in their attacks," said O'Hara.

"Bill" painted a graphic word picture of the immense tanks and their activities.

"If they could only make a little more speed they would be of invaluable assistance," he said. "They are gigantic steel cars that plod steadily along over everything. They are operated by five men and carry machine guns. They are impervious to drop into holes as big as an ordinary house, turn over on their backs with themselves, and pull right out of the holes. They are bullet armored and will withstand ordinary shrapnel, although a fair hit from German artillery would demolish them. They can burst within ten feet of them without doing any harm. They creep right into trenches, slip over on their sides, and the caterpillar will soon put them out in great shape."

"Bill" was wounded at Ypres, "Bill" was moved over to the Somme, and during the past four months has passed through some of the fiercest fighting of the war. The Canadians suffered especially heavy losses, but were successful in accounting for large numbers of Germans, and taking many prisoners. "Bill" says: "We are gaining ground every day," said O'Hara, "but it is a slow work. It is certainly a battle of endurance. And when it comes to staying in the game right to the finish, the spirit of the Britishers is on the Canadians."

While in London previous to his departure for Canada, "Bill" met Dr. A. M. Crawford, who is attached to the Orpington, Kent, Hospital. "The doctor is in fine fettle, and although nearly forty years of age, has left as Colonel 'Dick' Greer, Capt. Tom Stephenson and other members of the Sportsman's Battalion, were also transferred to Canada. O'Hara, who has stay in London. The Sportsmen have been broken up, while some of the officers are in France, and are still remain in England.

This splendid record indicates that a man can become proficient in the national game of the United States without losing his Canadian spirit.

LIBERTY, SERIAL AND CRIMSON STAIN AT PALACE TONIGHT

Leonore Ulrich, the talented and beautiful photoplay star, appears at the Palace to-night, and Thursday matinee and night, in the role of Countess Varnil in the Pallas Paramount production of "The Intrigue." This wonder play of diplomatic intrigue with the secret of an American invention of a tremendous destructive engine of war at stake, is in 5 acts, and Miss Ulrich's role is said to team with exciting incidents and situations. Do not miss seeing this one of the above offering, the 15th instalment of "The Crimson Stain Mystery," and the 2nd chapter of the new western serial "Liberty" will be exhibited along with a new and amusing comedy.

"BUGLER OF ALGIERS", INSPIRATION TO PATRIOTS, AT GRIFFIN'S FRIDAY

After an absence of three months from the screen, pretty and talented Ella Hall will again appear at Griffin's Opera House next Friday and Saturday, with a matinee Saturday at 2.30, co-operating with Rupert Julian and Kingsley Benedict, in "The Bugler of Algiers," a patriotic story of love and loyalty. Little Zoe Rae, star of "Glorians," a recent Bluebird, will also have an important role. The original story under the title of 'We are French," was written by R. H. Davis, editor of Munsey's Magazine, and Perley Poore Sheehan. The scenes are laid in Europe during martial times and stirring battle scenes will lend a tinge of excitement to an altogether engaging story of love and loyalty. Two friends volunteer to serve their country; they are presumed to have been killed in battle. One of them performs a most heroic act, and is later years is decorated by the President by his country with signal honors. His old friend goes with him to the ceremony, but on the way the baby dies. Going through with the command, the surviving soldier received the decoration and then pinned it to the breast of the dead comrade. Briefly there's the story—but illustrated in picture form it provides a beautiful and inspiring subject.

An excellent programme of music will be presented by the orchestra.

ALADDIN AND HIS LAMP

The famous English pantomime, "Aladdin and His Wonderful Lamp," which was given in Belleville four weeks ago, was reproduced here again last evening at the Griffin Opera House. A large and appreciative audience was present. The production was all that had been said in reference to it, and the company presenting it are certainly artists. All parts are well taken and portrayed in a manner that was pleasing. The seven Royal Uyena Japs in a series of sensational feats of oriental juggling and balancing were features of the performance. The pantomime was staged in a manner that none could say nought of.

PESTS THAT LIVE ON PESTS.

Tiny Scorpion-like Crabs a Deadly Foe to Insects.

To the naturalist or to any one accustomed to observe nature closely the fact is apparent that the relations of existence are proportionately the same in every form or stratum of life. Even the common housefly, which seemingly has nothing else to do but to crawl lazily over whatever is left uncovered and then go happily on its way, doing its best to bring about an affiliation between the clean and the unclean, occasionally meets its Nemesis in the form of a tiny crabbish creature which attaches itself to the fly's body.

These little creatures are known to the scientists as pseudo scorpiones, or chelifers, says the Popular Science Monthly. They may sometimes be found between the leaves of books that have stood unused for a long time and also beneath the bark of trees and in mosses.

Although they are called false scorpions, they resemble the true scorpion closely in general structure except for the caudate sting. But they have no poison gland as the true scorpions have. They attach themselves to other insects and, but they seem to be the special pest of the housefies. Scientists suppose that they poise the fly's leg and hold on until the fly dies, either worried or frightened to death by the undesirable presence. When the fly is dead the little creature feeds on the body.

The General's Orderly

A Story of the Pan-European War

By ALAN HINSDALE

During a lull in the fighting in Flanders, when the Germans were making their onslaught upon the Allies, Hans Schreiber, who had been called to the colors from his father's farm in Westphalia, had marched away as a private and had through the killing off of officers and his own bravery been promoted to be captain, was one morning ordered before the colonel of his regiment.

"Captain," said his commander, "it has been reported to me that you have been caught fraternizing with a private soldier in your company. Possibly you may not know the customs of the army in this respect. In the army there can be no familiarity whatever between an officer and a soldier. This war has necessitated the promotion of many men from the ranks, which is contrary to the usage of the military forces, and doubtless there are officers who do not realize the great gulf that lies between them and their former companions. I have sent for you to warn you that if you are again caught conversing familiarly with Private Oelrich you will be court martialed, and the punishment will be severe."

"But, colonel," the captain protested, "Private Oelrich is from the same locality as I. He is very young and requires a friend to cheer him, to prevent his falling a victim to homesickness, which will impair the value of any soldier. I feel it to be my duty—"

"Your duty is to obey orders. Go, and do not again let me hear any more of this breach of military discipline."

The colonel turned away from Captain Schreiber, who saluted and went back to his command. The very next day the Germans made a drive, in which the captain again distinguished himself. One of the field officers of his regiment was killed, and his colonel was about to recommend him for promotion to be major when it was reported that young Oelrich had been slightly wounded and the captain, forgetting that his position was at the head of his company, had carried the private to the rear in his arms.

The colonel, as he considered this act of gallantry on the one hand and dereliction of duty on the other, knit his brows. Had it not been for the necessity of supplying the gaps constantly occurring among the officers he would have made short work of Captain Schreiber, notwithstanding his efficiency as a leader. As it was, he felt compelled to recommend his subordinate for promotion. Indeed, he knew of no other man that he could put in the place of the officer who had been killed in whom he would have confidence.

The necessities of the service and such a prejudice to any tenderness he might feel induced the colonel to ignore the report of Schreiber's having carried Frita Oelrich off the field and to give him a higher command than a single company.

"Captain," he said to Schreiber, "Major Blecker having been killed, you will assume his position and the command of the companies that were intrusted to his care. I shall only add that the higher the rank of an officer the more incumbent it is upon him to remember the gap between him and the men of the ranks whom he commands. The discipline of the army is of the highest order. This cannot be attained or kept up except by the officers being absolute masters of the men."

Captain—now Major—Schreiber saluted, said nothing and again left his commander without that punishment which he knew except for necessity would have been meted out to him.

A combination of bravery and tenderness was always captivated the world. Major Schreiber the moment a fight opened was a lion; the moment it ended he became a lamb. He went about with the Red Cross workers succoring the wounded and was never known to prefer the case of a German to a Frenchman. It was this that led his comrade officers into a fault unacknowledged agreement to turn the other way whenever the major's sympathetic nature became his sense of duty and he went beyond the limits in expressing that sympathy to a common soldier.

In the case of Frita Oelrich he never offended openly. Toward Frita, when others were there to see, he maintained an unapproachable dignity. But unfortunately he had been surprised speaking endearingly to the boy, and on one occasion had taken Frita's hand in his while using the words of encouragement and comfort. He did not know often he had been seen in such position, for those who saw him kept the secret.

There was fighting all this time, and Schreiber's efficiency as a leader was constantly being demonstrated. On a reorganization of a certain force that had been very much depleted he was made colonel of a regiment. Another fight took the general of his brigade, and Colonel Schreiber was put in his place.

When those officers and soldiers who understood their general's weakness heard that he had made Frita Oelrich, who was still a private, his orderly there was a feeling of dread among them. They feared that Schreiber's affection for the boy might place him in a position to bring his officers into conflict with him. Indeed, if he had not enough of the qualities of a soldier to promote him to the lowest rank of officer he would not be long in danger. There was no military law to prevent a colonel from befriending with a lieutenant, but there was a very stringent law against his having anything or a social nature with a private. When one has confidence in a leader he fears his actions and that leader should continue to command him. Therefore Schreiber's troops were fearful that his partiality for young Oelrich would end in his being degraded and they obliged to accept another ranked commander.

Their fears were not groundless. One day General Wurst, commanding one of the brigades, went to General Schreiber's headquarters—they were at the time in a farmhouse—for the purpose of arranging with him certain features of an attack that was to be made upon the enemy. He found Schreiber bending over his orderly, who was lying on a bed in an adjoining room in a high fever. The visitor called Schreiber out for consultation, but found it impossible to secure his attention.

"I understand, general," he said to Schreiber, "that my brigade and yours are to advance upon the enemy as soon as the artillery has demolished their defenses."

"What enemy?" asked Schreiber.

"What enemy? Why, the enemy, of course. There's no other enemy in front. The British are far north of us."

"Oh" was the only reply. A groan from the room drew Schreiber's general there. When he returned he said:

"Please excuse me, general. My orderly is ill. I'll be with you in a moment. Some regiment as I, and we came to the war together, both in the ranks. I feel it obligatory upon me to take special care of him."

"Indeed!" The orders are that we shall advance under a curtain of fire"—

Another groan. General Schreiber heard it and, turning impatiently, "I perceive, general," he said, "that your mind is centered upon your orderly and the army must wait till the ordering is recovered."

This was said with bitter tone, and the man who said it clanked out of the room.

The next morning the two brigades were drawn up in line and at a given signal advanced to capture a French position that had been pounded by the German heavy guns. The opposing force became confused and were driven back.

"General," said Wens savagely, "this comes of my being unable to get your attention yesterday when I called to talk over this attack. Your mind was on a single private soldier instead of on the welfare of the fatherland."

"Let us try again," Schreiber replied, and, moving out in the front of the line, he seized a standard from a color bearer and led a charge that was not only successful but was carried out lightly.

Soon after this fight Schreiber received word from Berlin that the commanding the division to send Private Oelrich back to his regiment. It was evident to Schreiber that General Wens had reported the failure of his brother officers to observe the colonel's attention when he had called to them the details of the coming attack and the order. Schreiber's disregard of his authority accomplished the object of the letter he would not have got off so lightly.

Nothing was heard of the stumbling block in the way of Schreiber's military efficiency till the Germans began their attempt to reduce Verdun. Then after a day of fighting in which a great charge in mass made on the French lines the general was seen by his fellow commander leaning over Private Oelrich, who was lying on the ground in a pool of his own blood.

"General Schreiber, what are you doing here? Your place is in forming with others to make another attack. We are expected to take the position that is up a hundred inches."

There was no response except a moan. The man addressed quite likely did not know that he was addressed. The other was about to pour forth some stinging words, but when Schreiber fell lifeless across the body before him. He had been struck by the fragment of a shell.

When the Red Cross workers went over the battlefield they took up the bodies of General Schreiber and Private Oelrich together and carried them to the rear. Their bullet wounds and gashes were examined, and it was found that they had died from the same place in Westphalia. Their bodies were therefore borne addressed to the same person, an old farmer, father of General Schreiber.

The neighbors met together to do the last honors to the dead. Many Germans in the neighborhood were detailed to carry the coffins to the grave and fire the customary salute over it. Old Schreiber took the commander of the regiment to one side and asked if Frita was to be buried with the general. If would be pleasing to the family if his body could go on the same hearse carriage. The officer said no, but when he had made this whispered the words in his ear he consented.

The funeral corteg attracted more than usual attention, not only on account of the high military rank of General Schreiber, but because the secret of his attachment to his comrade was known to many of the fellow citizens who lined the route over which it passed, some of them shedding tears.

The two bodies were lowered into the same grave, and a volley was fired over them. Among the mourners dispersed, in due time's progress, were the father over them, on which was inscribed, "Hans Schreiber, of Carl Schreiber and Gretchen, His Wife."

TOBACCO ASHES WOULD BRING FORTUNE YEARLY

Smokers Throw Away 8,000 Tons Every Year, Calculations Demonstrate

It appears that smokers are throwing away annually about 8,000 tons of valuable material, the same being the ashes of tobacco that they consume.

The ash left on burning tobacco is considerable and, as a matter of fact, is mineral matter of a high order, leaf frequently amounts to as much as a fifth part of its weight. Thus a ton of tobacco will usually yield four hundredweights of ash, which represents valuable mineral constituents which—taken from it which have to be replaced by abundant manuring.

It has been calculated that a ton of tobacco withdraws more than a hundredweight of mineral constituents per acre of land. This would appear to be an astounding amount of material which must be of enormous value to the soil, considering that 75 per cent. consists of calcium and potassium and sodium salts, including nearly 6 per cent. of the essential constituent to it plant—phosphoric acid.

On the face of it there would seem to be a fortune in store for that individual who could devise a successful means for the collection of tobacco ash.—Washington Star.

EVIDENCE IN HUNGERFORD ELECTION CASE CONCLUDED

Prosecution and Defence Have All Material Submitted—Enlarged For One Week For Argument—Intimation That Other Charges May Be Preferred

Yesterday afternoon before Police Magistrate Masson the taking of evidence in the Hungerford municipal election case was concluded, and an adjournment for one week was made in order to allow time to prepare argument. The court room during the afternoon was filled to overflowing with spectators. There are intimations that this will not end the matter, but that other charges are to be made.

THE EVIDENCE

Wesley Badgley, testified that he was poll clerk at No. 8 poll and remembered that when Thomas Sexsmith voted he went behind the screen and then came out and asked Mr. Burley to mark his ballot. Witness remembered when the Shannons came to vote, but could not say how many there were in the room when they voted. Mr. Preston objected to Mr. Thomas Shannon's vote. After the vote was recorded a marginal note was made in the poll book by witness. Could not say how Lanahan's name appears to be between the Shannons' name.

To Mr. Butler—Mr. Burley had nothing to do with the entry made in the margin of the poll book. Mr. Patrick Shannon objected to his son, Thomas Shannon, voting. The latter produced a deed, which was looked over. He remembered the two Levecques giving their votes. Heard no objections to other voters being in the room while open votes were being recorded. Mr. Thomas Sexsmith said he could not mark his ballot. Mr. Burley, the Deputy Returning Officer, said he would vote for him. Mr. Burley read over the names of some of the candidates, and someone suggested all the names be read over, which was done.

Mr. Carnew stated that that was the case of the informant.

Mr. Butler asked if Mr. Sherry was going to be called.

Mr. Carnew—While Mr. Sherry is the informant, he is not personally acquainted with the facts. He laid the information on belief that certain facts were the case.

Mr. Butler said it was no use to argue, as the oath being administered to illiterate voters as it was not done. There was technically a wrong but he desired to put in some arguments.

Magistrate Masson.—Then it is admitted that technically there was a wrong. What about allowing others in the room? Should not all who have been there when an open vote was recorded.

Mr. Butler.—I will put evidence in in regard to that. A satisfactory explanation can, I think, be made of this.

THE DEFENCE

John W. Burley, being sworn, testified that he lived in Hungerford Township nearly 63 years. He remembered the first day of January. There was an election for municipal council, and at his home the poll was held. Witness was Deputy Returning Officer. There might have been persons present at the poll when an open vote was recorded, who should not be present, but he did not know there was such. There are four or five persons who vote at that poll, who give open votes. There may have been other voters present when an open vote was recorded. He was not told of the presence of any other person being present, who should not have been there. He recollected when Mr. Thomas Shannon came to record his vote. His father voted first and when Thomas went to vote Mr. Preston said he wanted to swear Shannon as to ownership. A deed was produced and the father said it was genuine, and then witness gave Thomas Shannon a ballot. Witness did not ask Shannon to take the oath. Witness gave the ballot because he considered all was right and the argument was over. Witness had been Deputy Returning Officer on several occasions. He considered he was discharging his duties properly at the poll. There had been on previous occasions some trouble at this poll.

To Mr. Carnew—The room in which the polling took place was available to be reached by other doors. Witness and the poll clerk did have their dinner together, but he could see the ballot boxes. He did not think it was necessary to administer the oath to those unable to vote. Witness did not remember the two Levecques being at the polling booth together. If any person was in the booth when an open vote was being given he did not see them. There was trouble in the booth when Sexsmith came to vote. Witness was abused by Sexsmith and he ordered the constables to put him out. The Shannons came to the poll altogether. The father voted first and had considerable to say about his son Thomas, who had been challenged. Preston demanded Thomas Shannon, the ownership. Could not say when the names of the Shannons were put on the poll book. Witness was informed that Preston was present for the election, and was in Mr. Salsbury's store, but denied that he had seen the Conservatives were trying to run that poll and he would not allow them. He did not remember talking to Mr. Salisbury or anything about the election. Witness remembered Coulter saying that he would not like to be in his (witness') shoes. This was after the poll closed.

Dominico Murgey, testified he lived in Hungerford and on election day, the 1st January was for a time at poll No. 8. Some of the voters had to give open votes at that poll. Could not tell who was in the poll when an open vote was being taken. Did not hear the evidence any person if they stated that other persons were in the poll at the time who were not entitled to be there. He remembered when the Shannon's came into the poll. The Shannons started when Thomas Shannon demanded a ballot and Mr. Preston objected. Witness asked what were the objections and Mr. Preston said it was in reference to ownership. Shannon was given the ballot after Mr. Preston had raised the objection. Witness was not sworn. The deed produced by Thomas Shannon and this caused some discussion. The end of the deed showed that Shannon was given a ballot by Mr. Burley.

To Mr. Carnew.—Mr. Preston never or where his objections as to having Thomas Shannon sworn.

Dennis Fleming, testified he lived in Hungerford and on January 1st of this year he was scrutineer at No. 8 poll for Mr. Charles Genore one of the candidates for councillor. He could not remember having any person present when an open vote was given, who should not have been present. There might have been other persons present who should not have been there. Witness detailed the voting at the booth, and the deed produced by Mr. Preston that Thomas Shannon be sworn. The objection was then before the deed was produced.

To Mr. Carnew—Witness would not contradict any person who swore that persons were present when an open vote was given, who should not be present. The objection made by Mr. Preston was put in the poll book after all the Shannons had voted. Mr. Preston never withdrew his objection.

Albert Murphy testified that he lived in Hungerford and voted at No. 8 poll, Moneymore. He was an agent at the poll, and remembered there was a dispute as to Mr. Thomas Shannon's vote in regard to ownership. Mr. Patrick Shannon said his sons' votes were good and should not be challenged. A deed was produced. Mr. Preston objected to Thomas Shannon voting before taking the oath. The oath was not tendered to Shannon. He remembered when some parties gave an open vote. Could not say whether the two Levecques were in the polling room when each voted. There may have been persons in the booth when an open vote was given, who should not have been there.

To Mr. Carnew.—Mr. Shannon, as had deposited his ballot before Thomas Shannon's vote was objected to by Mr. Preston, and the latter never withdrew his objection. Thomas Shannon produced a deed as to ownership and it was discussed. No oath was read over or tendered to him. Mr. Preston also wanted another of the Shannon brothers sworn, but he was not sworn. An entry was made on the margin of the poll book with reference to the three Shannons being asked to be sworn, and were not sworn. There was some talk that Mr. Burley was doing wrong. There was an argument between Mr. Burley and Mr. Coulter about some irregularities.

To the Magistrate.—After the request was made that Thomas Shannon be sworn, Shannon said he had no right to be sworn, as he was owner of the property and had shown his deed. This concluded the evidence for the defence.

REBUTTAL EVIDENCE

Mr. W. C. Preston recalled, testified that he twice made objections to the returning officer to allow Thomas Shannon to vote before he was sworn.

To the Magistrate.—Thomas Shannon said if I produce the deed will it be satisfactory. Witness said no.

Wallace Salsbury testified that he was an implement dealer residing in Tweed. He knew Mr. Burley and had a conversation with him in his (witness') place of business shortly after the election in Hungerford Township. Mr. Burley mentioned happenings at the poll and trouble he had with scrutineers at the poll. Mr. Burley mentioned the fact that the votes of the Shannon boys were challenged, but that they were given ballots without being sworn. Witness said he had made a mistake and Mr. Burley said, "Possibly he had."

This concluded the case and the proceeding was adjourned for a week for argument.

CUBANS IN PITCHED BATTLE

Rebel Leader, His Whole Staff and 200 Men Made Prisoners—100 Killed

Special to The Intelligencer

HAVANA, March 8.—An official statement issued last night says that there was recently the greatest pitched battle ever known in Cuba, in which three thousand men were engaged, the rebel leader, Jos. Miguel Gomes, his whole staff and three hundred men were made prisoners. Over one hundred were killed and many wounded.

Chief Accepts Cobalt Offer

Head of Brockville Fire Department Tenders Resignation to Mayor Wright

BROCKVILLE, March 7.—To-day Fire Chief Brady tendered his resignation to Mayor Wright, having definitely decided to accept the offer he received yesterday of an $1,800 salary to go to Cobalt as chief of the fire brigade there.

In his resignation, Chief Brady pointed out that it was his intention to tender his resignation yesterday before the meeting of the council in the evening, but he had been prevented from so doing so by the chairman of the executive committee, who was anxious to keep him in Brockville. Inasmuch as the attitude of some members of the Council was not of a cordial nature, he had concluded to accept the offer from Cobalt without further delay. He asks to be relieved of his duties here by the 15th inst. He wired an acceptance of Cobalt's offer this morning.

ONLY 2,646 ALIENS UNDER DETENTION

Large Number Have Been Released From Internment Camps

OTTAWA, March 7—There are now 2646 persons of enemy nationality held in internment camps in Canada as compared with 7,751 in November last.

The falling off in the number of prisoners is due to the release of a number whose detention was considered unnecessary and who were able to find employment on farms or elsewhere. The 2,646 still detained include a number of men who were taken off enemy ships and others held after investigation to be too dangerous to be at large. They comprise 1,501 Germans, 1,125 Ashtarians and 10 Bulgarians.

There has been 18 internment camps in the Dominion, three in Alberta, five in British Columbia, one in Manitoba, two in Nova Scotia, five in Ontario and two in Quebec. In view of the reduction in the number of prisoners it is now possible to reduce the number of camps by six.

Last summer interned prisoners were employed in the making of roads in the National Park and were paid for their work. This year the interned men will be utilized for this, for other necessary work and also in farming operations where they are needed.

F. S. SPENCE PASSES AWAY

Long a Municipal Expert and Ardent Advocate of Temperance

TORONTO, March 8—Special—Toronto, and indeed the Dominion of Canada, lost one of its greatest municipal experts and a pioneer temperance advocate in the death at 1.20 this morning of Francis S. Spence, at his home, 556 Spadina avenue. Mr. Spence was a victim of pleuro-pneumonia, and after a few days' illness his heart gave out. Mr. Spence is survived by his widow, and by two daughters, Mrs. Russell G. Dingman and Miss Beasie Spence. His brother, Mr. Ben. H. Spence, also has for identified with him in temperance labors so long, also survives, and was present when the end came.

Gananoque Has Cheaper Potatoes

Napanee and Gananoque Prices $3 a Bag—Local Prices Si Higher

The average housewife is worrying over the high price of potatoes and wondering when it will go down so that she will be able to put them on her table and not cause her anxiety as to their expense. The price is still hovering around $4 a bag, and so far shows no signs of getting cheaper.

One day last week a farmer who lives near Gananoque shipped 216 bushels across the border to American wholesalers. These potatoes were offered for sale in Gananoque merchants at $1.50 to $1.75 a bag, but the offer was declined. The farmers, however, saw their mistake with the recent increase, and offered the farmer $3 a bag for the lot. They were too late, however, and the spuds went over the river.

The prevailing price of potatoes in Gananoque and Napanee is $3 a bag or over, while local prices remain a dollar higher. —Kingston Whig.

Four Hundred Boats Burned

Several Buildings Were Consumed by Flames—Entire Village Threatened

TORONTO, March 7—A disastrous fire occurred on the west bank of the Humber River early this morning, two warehouses, nearly four hundred boats of all kinds, a refreshment parlor, dance hall, pool room and three stores, being completely destroyed. The damage is estimated at $75,000. Devins boathouses and that of Orr Bros. & McGrath were destroyed. The refreshment parlor, dance hall, pool room were situated in the Devins' premises, a two story frame building. Four hundred and forty-two boats were the property of Mr. I. N. Devins, and one hundred and forty-two had been stored there by private parties. In the other boathouse, fifty boats belonging to the Orrs were destroyed, while seventy-five craft stored in the building by McGrath Bros. were saved. The cause of the outbreak is unknown.

RUSSIANS AFTER TURKS IN PERSIA

PETROGRAD, March 8—Special—Russian troops which recently captured the Persian town of Hamadan from the Turks have now gained possession of Asadabad, sixty miles southwest of Hamadan, says the Russian official statement issued yesterday, and are pursuing the Turks, who are retiring farther south toward Kangaver.

WOMEN IN LEGISLATURE NOT FAVORED THIS YEAR

Sir William Hearst Moves Six Months' Hoist to Rowell Bill—Not One Woman Has Asked Right to Run for Legislature

TORONTO, March 8.—The women of Ontario must be content with the vote without any accompanying right to run as candidates for the Legislature for a year at least. In the House last night N. W. Rowell's "after-thought" bill to give women the right to sit in the Legislature was given a six months' hoist after a short but lively debate. The Prime Minister, Sir William Hearst, did not vote or position to the principle involved, but he made it clear that the Government in deciding to give women the franchise had gone as far as it would be justified in going at present, had gone as far as the most enthusiastic advocates of franchise extension had hoped for, and much farther than most of them had expected.

In introducing his bill Mr. Rowell stated that now that the House had accepted the extension of the franchise to women, there was no good reason for withholding from them the right to run as candidates for the Legislature. He showed that in Australia the right to vote and candidature was linked up with the franchise. In states of the Union women could sit in the legislative bodies the same as men. The Province of Manitoba in deciding to efranchise the women had decided also to remove the disability that kept them from being members of the Legislature. In Saskatchewan the women had been given that right. Women might not be elected, but that was a matter for the electors to decide.

Sir William stated that after full consideration, the Government had decided that the enactment of the bill was not necessary or desirable at the present time.

"There has been no demand from any quarter for this bill," he said; "as far as I am concerned, and as far as the Government is concerned it has not been asked for by any women."

The Prime Minister said he had received from one man an appeal to support the bill. The letter had told him that if he didn't "Mr. Rowell would do it and try to carry favor with the women and try to put himself up as a champion of the fair sex." He was not going to be lead into any such action to gain the ear of the women.

Sir William in closing pointed out that there was no harm in waiting until they had had time to sense public opinion and until the women had had time to understand their new duties and until they could consider what they wanted, and made some manifestation of their desires along that particular line. He then moved a six months' hoist.

Will Try Next Year.

J. W. Johnson, of West Hastings, the father of the Franchise Bills of this session, followed. He endorsed the principle of the Rowell Bill, but thought that the Liberal leader was simply hurrying matters in order to get in first. Mr. Johnson declared that the further extension of rights to women would have to come, and expressed the hope that next session he would be able to bring in an acceptable bill on that matter, as he had on the general franchise extension. Mr. Rowell, he thought, had been put in a panic by the tremendous approval that had been accorded the Government's action throughout the country. But right as the principle was, the wegpen should be given a chance to get ready.

Sam Carter, of South Wellington supported Mr. Rowell's bill, declaring that women should without delay be given a place in the law making of the Province, in order to deal with the serious social problems existing. The Government was opposing this now as they had opposed franchise extension, prohibition and other progressive measures in the past, and then switched around.

T. Marshall of Lincoln, J. C. Elliott of West Middlesex, and Allan Studholme, the East Hamilton Labor member, supported the Rowell Bill.

HOME RULE TURNED BACK

Resolution Introduced by Irish Nationalist Forces Government to a Declaration

LONDON, March 8.—Special—The presentation by the Irish Nationalists in the House of Commons last evening of a resolution calling for the immediate application of the home rule statute to Ireland precipitated one of the most bitter sessions in months, and threw the home rule question back into its old position of uncertainty. The resolution forced the Government into a declaration of policy toward self-government, namely, that any part of Ireland that wished home rule could have it, but that no coercion would be employed to compel Ulster to accept. At the same time, the proposal drew from the Ulsterites the ultimatum that they would not accept, which, coupled with the Government's pronouncement, effectually crushed all hopes for a speedy settlement.

LONDON, March 8—Sugar law told the Commons this afternoon he saw no advantage in giving facilities for the resumption of the Irish debate.

HOLY CITY WILL SOON HAVE PASSED INTO BRITISH HANDS

WASHINGTON, March 8—Special—Jerusalem, the ancient capital of Palestine, may soon be in the hands of the British as well as Bagdad, according to despatches received here today. Those reports say the advance guards of the British troops advancing through Palestine from Egypt are within forty miles of the city. One despatch had them at El Chalil, which is in the mountains of southern Palestine and about twenty miles from Jerusalem. The allied troops are now invading Asia Minor from three sides, one British force advancing into Palestine from Egypt, another operating in the Tigris Valley, while the Russians are fighting on the Persian front.

It is believed here that if the British succeed in taking Jerusalem the American refugees here, numbering over a thousand, will choose to remain instead of attempting to proceed to Beirn to secure transportation to the United States, as they had planned. The British capture of the city would also open a new route out of Europe for the Americans who wished to return to the United States in any event.

HEAVY ARTILLERY ENGAGEMENT BETWEEN THE OISE AND AISNE

Special to The Intelligencer

PARIS, March 8.—Official statement.—Between the Oise and the Aisne there were intermittent artillery engagements. Patrol encounters occurred in the region of Moulin Sous Touvent.

In Lorraine, northeast of Ember, of mentil, French detachments penetrated German trenches and brought back fifteen prisoners, after doing considerable damage to the enemy's works. In Alsace a German attack on our positions near Seppois le Haut was repulsed completely. We took prisoners.

Near Hilsenfirst French reconnoitering parties inflicted losses on the enemy. The night passed quietly elsewhere.

She is the oldest resident of the city and considering her age is quite smart.

TWO SISTERS DIE SUDDENLY

Word has been received in Belleville by Mrs. Legault, George street, of the sudden death in Toronto of two aged ladies, Mary and Jennie L. McConaghy. The aged sisters have been living for some time in Toronto. They were residents of Belleville many years ago, and will be remembered by the older members of St. Michael's Church, of which the deceased were members. Their remains will arrive in this city this evening per Grand Trunk, and will be taken to Messrs. Tickell & Sons undertaking establishment and to-morrow morning the funeral will take place as per notice found elsewhere in this issue.

TWO SONS ENLISTED

Herbert H. Hector, son of Sergt.-Major F. E. Hector, of Belleville, has enlisted for the British navy. He will go to Toronto and from thence to Halifax, from whence he will go overseas. This is the second son of Sergt.-Major Hector who has donned the uniform. Private Sydney Hector enlisted with the 155th Battalion, and at present is in the trenches Somewhere in France.

DEATH TO BE INVESTIGATED

On Tuesday morning the body of David Culvert, a C.P.R. section man, was found along the railway track, midway between Crookston, in Huntingdon Township, and the Village of Tweed. The cause of death will be investigated at the inquest to be held at Ivanhoe to-morrow. Mr. Wm. Carnew, County Attorney will represent the Crown. Deceased was about 60 years of age and is survived by a widow and two children.

PTE. SMITH WOUNDED

Mrs. Harvey Smith, residing at 307½ Church street, in this city, yesterday received a telegram from the Record Office, Ottawa, conveying the intelligence that her husband, Pte. Harvey Smith, was wounded on February 25th. Pte. Smith enlisted and went overseas with the 155th Battalion, but was transferred to the 4th Mounted Rifles. The many friends of the unfortunate soldier will hope that his injuries are not of a serious nature.

Military News

Capt. Hamilton of the 73rd Battery, Kingston, visited his brother, Capt. Hamilton, Paymaster of the 254th Battalion this morning.

The 255th Battalion which left this city for Ottawa, on Monday last, is now comfortably settled down in the quarters vacated by the 207th Battalion, now doing guard duty at Amherst, N.S.

Capt. S. N. Rancey states that his draft to reinforce the second battalion will be up to strength by March 15th. Lieut. J. F. Maloney of Ottawa, and Lieut. T. J. Fleury of Lindsay have been appointed to commands.

The Army Service Corps Board, presided over by Capt. Stewart has closed its duties in connection with the 254th Battalion in this city and have returned to adquarters, Kingston.

Griffin's was fairly crowded last night at the initial presentation by the 254th Battalion of the "Canada in Khaki" film. The 254th Band was present and rendered suitable selections throughout the evening. A matinee was held at the theatre this afternoon.

CALLED BY DEATH.

Died in Belleville this afternoon, John Musclow, nine year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Musclow, of Maynooth. The little boy was taken accidentally ill here some twelve days ago. His father is in the city and the remains will be taken to his home per Canadian Northern Railway to Maynooth.

Dandruff Heads Become Hairless

If you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair, and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush dandruff off. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign or trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.

GIRL DIES OF EXPOSURE

Result of Tramp Barefoot, in Night-dress From Burned Home

LUCAN, March 7.—Alice Mackey, aged twenty, younger daughter of Timothy Mackey, of Biddulph Township, died from injuries received in the destruction by fire of her father's farmhouse early Friday morning, aggravated by subsequent exposure and fatigue. Mrs. Mackey, his son and two daughters were in the house at the time, and the fire reached the girl's bedroom before they were aroused. Tramping barefoot and in her night clothing half a mile to a neighbor's house, proved too much for the young er girl.

$100,000 FOR HOSPITAL

Chancellor of Queen's Seeks to Modernize Kingston General Hospital

A very large meeting of the Board of Governors of Kingston General Hospital, was held Monday afternoon, it being generally known by the governors that a deputation from Queen's University and the medical staff was to come before the board with a definite proposition for the improvement and enlargement of the hospital. The Chancellor of Queen's University, Dr. James Douglas, New York, has agreed to give the sum of $100,000 towards a fund to develop the Kingston General Hospital into a capacious modern institution, and especially that it may give to improvement of its teaching facilities in connection with the School of Medicine and making research work possible.

Hideous State of Hun Trenches

Occupied Positions Fast Becoming Garrisons of Glibbering Lunatics Discipline Impossible

Special To The Intelligencer.

NEW YORK, March 8—Phillip Simms, cabling from France, says one reason why the Germans retreated along the ancre was because they were fast becoming a garrison of glibbering lunatics. Their positions had become more hideous than the sufferers of hell. He says, Madame Tussaud's chamber of horrors was as cheerful as Mayday compared with the field of terror over which he painfully picked his steps.

I found myself, he says, stepping on German bodies, which littered the region, sometimes piled several deep. Scenes were too horrible for human nerve to stand.

One outstanding moral of the German retreat is that wherever Germans stop their retirement their new positions can be reduced to the same hideous intolerable quagmire of corpses and filth, where eyes of the dead men stare at them continuously, from the time, delaying even German discipline to keep live men in line.

THE "POISON PLOT" QUARTETTE IN COURT

Being Tried on Charge of Conspiring to Murder Premier Lloyd George

LONDON, March 8.—Special—Mrs. Alice Wheeldon, who, with her daughters, Miss Ann Wheeldon and Mrs. Alfred Mason, and Mrs. Mason's husband, is on trial, charged with conspiracy to murder Premier Lloyd George and Arthur Henderson, member of the War Council, testified yesterday that poison was obtained for poisoning dogs. She admitted that she sympathized with conscientious objectors to military service, and said she was attempting to assist three of these objectors, including her son, to escape from the camp in which they were interned. She volunteered to obtain poison, which they desired, she said, in order to poison dogs with which the camp was guarded.

Courcelette Fight Pictures Well Received

Military Authorities Pronounce Official Dominion Pictures Most Remarkable of War

(Toronto World)

"They are very lifelike," said Sir Sam Hughes, when asked for his opinion of the Canadian pictures, "and I recognize some of our guns there, and they have done good work."

"Sir Sam should know, for he has seen actual fighting and conditions at the front," interjected Dr. Norman Allen, who was seated next to the ex-Minister of Militia in a balcony box.

"Do you think the pictures will encourage or give stimulus to recruiting," Sir Sam was asked.

"Yes, I think they will," he replied. "They should certainly inspire our Canadian manhood to a sense of their duty and of what we are fighting for."

It was by order of and under the instructions of Sir Sam Hughes that the Canadian war pictures were taken and produced, and he seemed immensely pleased with the result.

Dr. Allen declared the pictures were very fine and incidentally remarked that he followed the opinion of Gen. Hughes in everything relating to the war.

Col. R. C. Levesconte was very enthusiastic over the presentation of the pictures and spoke in high praise of them. "They are wonderful," he said, "and that's about all I can say about them."

Col. H. C. Bickford thinks that every citizen in Canada should witness the film in order that they may see how our boys are defending the empire. "They are splendid," he said, "and everyone who wishes to realize what the fighting and the conditions at the front are like ought to accept the opportunity of seeing for themselves. They are real and true."

Lady Hendrie who attended with a party from Government House, was also very enthusiastic. "I enjoyed the presentation of the pictures immensely," she declared. "The concentration of bravery, energy and organization is wonderful. It is all very exciting and inspiring. I think everyone should see them."

Pte. Harry Johnston, 31 Pryor avenue, a returned wounded soldier, who fought in the battle of Courcelette with the 20th Battalion, Second Contingent sustaining the loss of an eye and a leg when a shell glanced off a tank said: "I recognize the place where my battalion turned off the road on the night of September 14, and also the place where we entered the trenches. I recognized, too, the first dressing station through which I passed, and the building where the German prisoners were having a wash. The picture was certainly lifelike, and to me and recalls much of that battle."

Lt. H. Dewart: "The World deserves credit for presenting these pictures and giving the people an opportunity to see conditions as they really exist at the front. The films are wonderful."

Col. H. C. Osborne, headquarters staff: "The pictures greatly exceeded my expectations. Nobody should miss seeing them. The remarkable clearness of the photography and the dramatic scenes which are shown go to make up the most wonderful series of war films I have ever seen. Their value too, is increased what the evident fidelity is realized. It is the first time I have ever seen the 'tanks' in action, and it is no wonder that they strike terror to the German heart. They are big enough to strike terror to anyone. The magnificent co-operation and the co-ordination of all forces are so forcibly brought to the eye, and are features of the films, I think."

Col. A. E. Gooderham: "The Canadian films are really remarkable, and excellent of moving pictures. I have seen a few of the war films, and consider these exceptionally wonderful. The photographs taken at night are unusually clear. I am very glad I had an opportunity to see them."

To be seen at Griffin's Opera House, Monday and Tuesday, March 12 and 13, Matinee and night.

PARLIAMENT AND FREEMASONRY

In November last the Irish Nationalists compelled the British Government to rush through the House of Commons a bill prohibiting members of the Royal Irish Constabulary and the Dublin police from joining the craft. The only protesting voice in the Commons was Sir Edward Craig of Belfast, a prominent Orangeman. The London Freemason called attention at the time to this unique preserve of the many prominent and distinguished members of the House, and hoped that when the bill reached the House of Lords the peers would show a keener sense of the question at issue.

On Dec. 20 the Marquis of Crewe leader of the House of Lords under the premiership of Mr. Asquith, moved the second reading of the bill, and made a lengthy speech in its favor, and referred to the Roman Catholic population of Ireland as being antagonistic to Freemasonry. The bill passed and has received the royal assent. Although the House of Lords has scores of titled and distinguished members of the craft, the Right Hon. the Earl of Donoughmore, grand master of Ireland, was the only one to speak against the bill. He referred to the large number of Freemasons in the privy council, and said that if there was danger to the state in these high officials being members of the craft, thought that a humble policeman in Ireland might have been equally immune. Our London contemporary thinks that the "easy going fashion in which brethren whether peers or commons, allow each one solitary exception in each house—judgment to go by default against our order may prove a serious matter for Freemasonry." It is peculiar that the daily press both in Great Britain and Ireland ignored the entire matter.—Toronto Freemasonry.

New Positive Treatment to Remove Hair or Fuzz

(Beauty Notes)

Women are fast learning the value of the use of delatone for removing hair or fuss from face, neck or arms. A paste is made with some powdered delatone and water and spread on the hairy surface. In 2 or 3 minutes it is rubbed off, the skin washed and every bit of hair has disappeared. No failure will result if you are careful to buy genuine delatone.

GOMPERS CALLS POW-WOW

Labor Leaders in the U. S. Will Talk of War

TORONTO, March 7— President Samuel Gompers, of the American Federation of Labor, issued a call today to the presidents of 110 international unions to meet in Washington on March 12 to determine and announce the part labor shall claim in the formula of policies of preparedness and defence in the crisis confronting the nation. This call has been endorsed by the Executive of the Federation, who will meet Friday and prepare a programme for discussion at the conference of March 12.

Belgian Relief Ships Granted A Safe Lane

Agreement Between Belligerents by Which Relief Ships May Carry Food to Starving Belgians

All doubt as to the work of continuing relief to the women and children of Belgium have been dispersed by the receipt by the Central Belgian Relief Committee in Montreal of an official statement from Mr. Herbert Hoover to the effect that the Belgian Relief Commission has effected an arrangement with the British Government on the one side, and the German Government on the other, by which a safe lane has been agreed upon for relief commission ships between this side of the Atlantic and Rotterdam.

This means that sailings for Belgium, under the auspices of the Commission, will be immediately resumed. The members of the Central Committee in Montreal are greatly encouraged by this news, for they are constantly receiving information telling of the increasingly desperate needs of the Belgians.

How the more fortunate people of Canada and other favored countries come to the help of the Belgians by providing money for the despatch of food, during the next month or so will decide the fate of the Belgian nation. These people will either be wiped off the face of the earth by starvation between now and the time that they are delivered from the invader or they will be preserved by outside help for the great work of reconstructing their nation.

Canadians have done something towards helping in the relief work, but they have not as a whole done anything like what they could do. The Committee asks Canadians to co-operate with them, by sending in subscriptions, no matter how small, no matter how large, for buying food to continue shipments direct from Canada, as in the past, but in still greater volume to meet the greater needs. Subscriptions may be sent to branch committees, or to the Central Belgian Relief Committee, 39 St. Peter Street, Montreal.

Farm and Garden

PREPARING POULTRY PRODUCE FOR MARKET

"Putting the finishing touches on a product before offering it for sale yields the greatest proportionate return of any labor done on the average farm. This lack of 'finish' is nowhere so clearly seen as in our poultry products as shipped to market."

"Probably nine-tenths of all the eggs produced have found their way to market through what is sometimes called 'the system,' the outstanding feature of which has been the lack of system."

The foregoing are pithy sentences from Bulletin No. 88 of the Dominion Experimental Farms, written by F. C. Elford, Dominion Poultry Husbandman. That there is room for improvement is an admitted fact, and indicated clearly in the quotations. To meet this need, this timely, well-illustrated bulletin has been prepared for general distribution, pointing out, as it does, the correct way of preparing poultry produce for the market, so that the largest price may be obtained, thereby largely increasing the profits, for, as stated by Mr. Elford, "there seem to be few industries that promise brighter prospects to the farmer than poultry managed on a business basis."

This bulletin, which is replete with information of value, not only for the farmer but for the poultry specialist, may be obtained, free of charge, upon application to the Publications Branch, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Gave Verdict of Foul Play

In Case of Mrs. Hattie Hill, Found Dead in a Stable—Searching For Murderer

SEELEY'S BAY, March 7.—County Crown Attorney Brown, Brockville, attended the inquest on the body of Mrs. Hattie Hill, alleged to have been murdered at her home about six miles southeast of Seeley's Bay and just off the main road leading from this place to Gananoque. The following jurymen were summoned: William McPherson, (foreman) B. Green, G. McKinley, J. C. Kennedy, R. Moulton, G. H. Berry, W. Dorman, D. Dormer and D. Dorney. After the jury had viewed the body a post mortem examination was performed by Captain (Dr.) Hall, assistant pathologist of Queen's University.

Dr. Hall's statement showed that the deceased had come to her death by being struck on the head with some kind of pluni instrument. Three witnesses were examined at the inquest last night, including Mrs. Yeo, wife of the supposed murderer. She could throw no light on the mystery as she was away at the time the deed was committed, although she discovered the body in the stable.

The jury brought in a verdict that Mrs. Hill came to her death through foul play at the hands of some unknown person.

Canadian Paper Mills Fix Price

The Canada paper manufacturers' recently formally agreed to supply Canadian newspapers with newsprint at $2.50 per hundred pounds at the mills. This is satisfactory to the government, and so renders unnecessary any action under the recent order-in-Council which gives it power to limit or prohibit export or even to seize and operate the mills.

Although $2.50 per hundred is an increase over 1916 prices, the Canadian publishers realize that the mills are under heavy extra cost. The Canadian newspapers use about 300 tons per day. This, the increase means some thing like one million dollars per annum to the publishers of the Dominion.

THE PROHIBITION LAW.

Its Effect upon Drunkenness.

The reports for the past year show that with the exception of Parry Sound, which had a most remarkable increase in "drunks" and the city of Hamilton, which had the worst drunken record during 1916 of any city or town in the Province while Toronto, London, Ottawa and other cities—Brantford, Woodstock and Chatham alone excepted—showed a reduction in commitments for insobriety, the city of Hamilton running up the record of 761 commitments or an increase of 267. Parry Sound had an increase of 437, Brantford 31, Chatham 29 and Woodstock 17. In no other city or town in the Province was there an increase of more than three or four drunks.

Toronto reduced her drunks by 278, London by 47, Kingston by 88 Kitchener by 2, St. Thomas 18, Ottawa 104, Guelph 12. That Ottawa with free trade in whiskey in Hull just across the Ottawa river, should have had a decrease in drunks is remarkable.

These returns cover the calendar year and include three and a half months under prohibition. The net result for the cities and towns of the Province, embracing all jails or lock-ups, is a total of 5,968 commitments. The record reflects the advance in temperance legislation during the past two years. Last year's total showed a reduction of 267 commitments, while for the previous year, when early closing went into effect, there was a reduction of 2,- 60 commitments. On the whole the law is working well. A full year will give a better idea of its benefits.

TO LEGALIZE WAR GRANTS.

An Act has been introduced into the Ontario Legislature to authorize and confirm grants by municipal corporations for Patriotic purposes, as follows:

For the purchase of rifles, ammunition and horses:

For the protection of any municipal property.

For pay to soldiers for picket duty and for expenses incurred in connection with returned soldiers.

For any other expenditures incurred by the municipality in carrying out the provisions of the said Act and amendments thereto.

The Act further provides that

"Moneys appropriated by the council of any municipality under clause 3 and of sections of the said Act shall not be liable to attachment.

"The law is made retractive and shall be deemed to have been in force since the 4th day of August, 1914, and any grants heretofore made for any of the foregoing purposes are confirmed and declared to be legal, valid and binding."

No doubt but that this Act will pass the Legislature and become law.

LIBERAL LEADERS IN NEW BRUNSWICK.

The Leader of the Opposition in New Brunswick and the Opposition organizer were both defeated at the late elections. At a Liberal convention held in St. John, N.B., it was suggested that seats should be found for these two rejected gentlemen. That will not be difficult. Patronage is now in their hands, and there will be no trouble in finding two Liberal patriots ready to sacrifice themselves, and accept comfortable do-nothing-life seats in spite of the Government Departments purely for party purposes, as their leaders must have seats in Parliament.

SCHOOL TRUSTEES

Mr. Gooderman, M.P.P., for Toronto, has introduced an Act to amend the Board of Education Act, providing for the election of all trustees annually. This is to meet the clamor in Toronto for a change in the law. It is a doubtful improvement. Two or three years' services on a Board of Trustees renders the occupant better fitted for the position.

AN IMPORTED HALO.

Certain Liberal organs are fond of dressing up Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his colleagues in the togas of famous British Liberal statesmen, past and present, and presenting to the public a composite word-picture of the whole mass of brains and brotherhood as a faithful reproduction of pure, undiluted democracy and progress. According to The Globe's treatment of the subject, only the failure of Hon. Geo. P. Graham's parents to reside in Wales is responsible for the fact that Lloyd George and not George P. Graham is Premier of Great Britain to-day.

Little comparison can be drawn by those willing to tell the truth between conditions in Canada and conditions in Great Britain. The problems of Government in the two countries are vastly different in all essentials. Party traditions mean a great deal more in Great Britain than they do in Canada because of the manner in which the British parties have been identified with impressive developments in the past. In Canada, as in the United States, parties derive their strongest support from the merits of existing issues and the characters of contemporary leaders.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his colleagues must stand on their own feet in Canada and on their own platforms. They cannot bask in the reflected glory of imported issues, however, much of those issues may be exalted before a public which has no opportunity of understanding them, or however great the need for reflected glory may be. Political news from the Old Country would be much more interesting than it is if it had any bearing upon political issues in Canada. Liberalism in Canada is not anything to be tursted except in so far as the Liberal leaders in Canada make it worthy of trust.

If, as The Toronto Globe represents, Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his colleagues, all this time, have been converts to a wonderful, self-sacrificing political theory, their manifold sins of commission and omission are indeed hard to forgive.

The Poet's Corner

WHEN A MAN'S A MAN

Verses by a Canadian in Iowa Town

Mr. Herbert J. Bryce sends the following verses from Charlton, Iowa. They are written, he explains, "by a Canadian who has a real excuse for not being over the seas."

O what will he do when a man's a man!
Sure am I that he will not stand
In midst of the war and idle throng,
While Canada's sons with a courage grand,
Cross over the seas, to right, the wrong;
That cannot be when a man's a man.

When a man's a man with no just excuse,
To remain at home when his brothers fight,
He will not stay, and it is no use,
To argue with him that to stay is right;
He knows that to shirk, as the many do,
Would be to himself and his flag untrue.

When a man's a man, you cannot keep Him back from the place of duty's leap
And clear those barriers one and all;
He must go; he must fight; do all that he can
For the cause of right, when a man's a man.

Herbert J. Bryce.

Last words of Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg as he went down into his manuscript for the third time were that England's tyranny of the seas caused all the trouble.

Presbytery of Kingston Meets

Rev. A. S. Kerr, Belleville, as Moderator, Presided—Several Addresses Were Heard

KINGSTON, March 7.—The Presbytery of Kingston met yesterday morning in Cook's church with Moderator A. S. Kerr, Belleville, presiding. The following ministers, members and elders were present: Rev. Henry Gracey, Gananoque; Principal D. Ross, city; W. T. Wilkins, Trenton; clerk; Rev. Dr. Macgillivray, city; Rev. Jas. Cumberland, Stella; Rev. W. S. Conrie Belleville; Rev. A. J. McMullin, McDonald's Corners; Rev. J. N. Beckstead, Lansdowne, Rev. G. E. Kidd, Gananoque; Prof. H. T. Wallace, city; Rev. A. M. Little, Tamworth; Rev. C. Salisbury, Eldorado; Rev. D. E. Foster, Trenton; Rev. John Dawson, Portsmouth; Rev. E. R. McLean, city; Rev. A. A. Acton, Descronto; Rev. J. T. Caswell, Sunbury; Rev. J. B. Morrison, Pittsburgh; Rev. W. J. Parsons, Harrowsmith; Mr. Gordon, Napanee; S. Fleming, Amherst Island; Rev. M. McAllister, city; James Webb, Mount Chesney.

The resignation of Rev. Mr. Acton, Descronto, was accepted on motion of Principal Ross, who was on a special committee into the case. Rev. M. Wilson, Napanee, was appointed moderator of this church pro tem.

J. P. McLeod, Queen's graduate, was licensed as a preacher of the gospel.

A very clear and concise tabulated return of statistics and finances of the Presbytery for this year, for all congregations, was presented by the clerk and he was thanked for his enterprise in the matter. The report showed that there was an increase in the number of communicants and the net return of giving showed an increase of $2,500 for church schemes. There was subscribed a total of seventy-eight per cent of what was asked.

Prof. Robt. Laird addressed the Presbytery on claims in connection with the assembly's budget and was thanked.

The treasurer, Prof. J. Matheson reported a balance of $205 in the Presbytery Fund.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

A VITAL QUESTION

Dear Sir,—Are the Aldermen and Mayor composing the City Council elected by the ratepayers, for the purpose of looking after their interests and protecting them, or on the other hand, have they been elected by the rate-payers for the purpose of giving away their rights and privileges, and the money collected from them when fire for the purpose collected or not? What leads to this question is that I noticed in the report of the proceedings of the Council, at its last meeting that a request was made by the Grand Trunk Railway for the concurrence of the City Council in plans and profiles for the erection of a new overhead bridge covering their track on North Front street, and as we understand from the report, this is to be an iron superstructure and to be raised two feet higher than the bridge at present being used. There does not seem to have been a dissenting voice, and the only question raised was whether a walk for pedestrians would be put on one side or both sides of that bridge, and the main question of interest to the citizens of that locality seems to have been ignored entirely. The bridge at this point has been rebuilt several times, and every time it has been rebuilt it has been raised a little higher until the roadway now absolutely closes up approaches to the near-by lots, and if raised another two feet and with necessary grading done along the roadway to conform to that elevation, still further damage to other roads will ensue and the city, by giving its consent to that erection will become liable for such damage, and damages there will be.

What are the necessities of the case? The Grand Trunk Railway desire two feet more headway than they now have and to get that headway, at the lowest cost, the erection of a new bridge at the necessary elevation is their object; while by going down on their own road-bed two feet, that would give the same headway, and as there is a grade both ways from this point, there should be no difficulty in getting the headway required, by lowering the track at this point, and one noticing the grade of the railway at this point, will see that the grade is considerably lower at the Coleman flats bridge; therefore under such circumstances, we think that our Aldermen have been extremely liberal to the Grand Trunk Railway, if they have conceded their request. From the experience in the past of giving the different railways everything they ask for should be sufficient to cause us to consider every question as to their requests, and see that we get a "quid pro quo."

The matter of crossing the railway at this point will call up for consideration other crossings of the same railway, within the city, and if the railway people are anxious to protect life instead of destroy it, they could long since have had a subway at the Canniton Crossing, which is so extremely dangerous, and better protection on other crossings that are not as well protected as they might be.

Speaking of the Canifton crossing, there are no engineering difficulties in the way of providing a subway, it is merely a question of expense for excavating and grading back.

Yours truly,

F. M. CLAKE.

THE GLORY OF HEROISM SHOWN IN "BUGLER OF ALGIERS" AT GRIFFIN'S TOMORROW

"The Bugler of Algiers," to be exhibited at Griffin's Opera House today, tonight, and Saturday matinee and night, will present Ella Hall, Rupert Julian, Kingsley Benedict and little Zoe Rae in the leading roles. Here is a remarkable photoplay, appealing to loyalty and love of the flag in scenes of inspiring vigor and force. There is combined with this patriotic sentiment a story of great love and human devotion that rings, true and will stir the admiration of every beholder. Ella Hall plays the role of a girl, left alone when war calls her brother and her sweetheart to the colors. In all the years that follow, she lives true to her love, even though the report has come that he has been killed in battle. She lives to see her sweetheart decorated with the Legion of Honor, while he represents her brother, who has won this great tribute from his grateful country. The brother has died of exhaustion, marching to be decorated; and then the girl, now grown to old age, goes with the sweetheart of her life to lay upon the breast of the dead hero the tribute that came too late. Beautifully told, beautifully pictured and superbly acted, "The Bugler of Algiers" marks an epoch in film productions.

Besides the above special offering which will be presented with a special orchestra, the "Shielding Shadow" series, and a selected program of comedies and dramas will also be presented.

"THE LITTLE CAFE," TUNEFUL MUSICAL COMEDY, GRIFFIN'S NEXT WEDNESDAY

According to the advance reports, this production is one of the greatest sent on the road. It was a big season at the New Amsterdam Theatre, New York City, and will be played this season in only a few of the smaller cities. It will be presented at Griffin's Opera House next Wednesday night.

"The Little Cafe" is the work of Ivan Caryll and C. M. S. McLellan, who wrote "The Pink Lady," and "Oh, Boy," fame. The music is said to be of the scintillating character that keeps everybody in good humor from the rise of the curtain to the final drop.

"The Little Cafe," also promises a real plot, a thing seldom encountered in musical comedy. The story was taken by the author from Tristan Bernard's French farce, "Le Petit Cafe." This most successful modern musical comedy will be offered in this city exactly as it was given for the run of nearly a year in Manhattan. It was first produced in this country by Klaw & Erlanger, after the manner of their artistic presentations among which were such hits that have become general favorites are "You Little Cafe Good-Boy," "Do You Call That Dancing?" "The Mouth is a Rose," and "Just Because It's You."

Was on the Verge of Nervous Prostration

Had Not a Good Night's Rest in Two Years — Now Strong and Healthy, Thanks to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

Belleville, Ont., Mar. 8—If anyone needs sympathy it is the person whose nervous system is exhausted and who feels the helplessness which accompanies this condition.

The writer of this letter could not rest or sleep, was easily tired and discouraged, and felt that collapse of the nervous system was imminent. Fortunately she learned about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food in time, and though much run down, was soon restored to health and strength, and finds pleasure in recommending a medicine which has proved of such great value to her.

This is a home cure which you can investigate and learn at first hand the details of the case.

Mrs. Geo. Williams, 5 Centre street, Belleville, Ont., writes: "About ten years ago I was on the verge of a nervous prostration and had not had a good night's rest for two years. Having some of the advertising matter in your pamphlets I was induced to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I was very much run down, but after taking several boxes I found I could sleep well and had my nerves under control. Although I am now strong and healthy, I always keep a box of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food in the house, and take great pleasure in recommending it to all my friends."

In its advanced stages nervous prostration is most difficult to overcome. The gain of a day or two is followed by collapse and further depression and discouragement.

It is wisdom to be warned by such symptoms as restlessness, irritability, sleeplessness, irritability and headaches, and prevent the more serious condition by the timely use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box; a full treatment of 6 boxes for $2.50, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations only disappoint.

ALF. AND JAY J. ALLEN PRESENT

"THE CANADIAN ARMY IN ACTION AND THE ADVANCE OF THE TANKS"

THE OFFICIAL MOVING PICTURES OF THE BATTLE OF COURCELETTE

THE OFFICIAL MOVING PICTURE OF THE BATTLE OF COURCELETTE AND PRELIMINARY OPERATIONS SEPT. 15-16, 1916, AS ISSUED TO THE PEOPLE OF CANADA BY THE CANADIAN WAR OFFICE IN COMMON TRIBUTE TO THOSE OF HER SONS WHO FOUGHT TO VICTORY AND TO THOSE WHO DIED VICTORIOUS, AND TO BE A LIVING RECORD IN THE NATIONAL ARCHIVES OF CANADA FOR ALL TIME.

UNDER the auspices of the Belleville Intelligencer, and by authority, Jule and Jay J. Allan beg to announce the first presentation in Belleville of the official moving pictures of the Canadian Army in Action and the Advance of the Tanks as produced for the Canadian War Records Office, London, said presentation to be made at the Griffin Theatre on Monday and Tuesday, March 12-13, matinee and night.

THESE are the pictures which show our own sons in the fight to save Christian civilization. All Canada should see these pictures. All Canada shall see them, Arrangements are being made to show them in every city and town in the Dominion from coast to coast. Belleville's opportunity comes first

From a Special correspondent to The Toronto Evening Telegram.

London, January 12.—Every man, woman and child throughout the length and breadth of Canada should make a point of seeing the latest war films from the Canadian front. Far clearer than any preceding films of its kind, these wonderful scenes from the Canadian battlefront. Marvelously realistic, too, are the tanks, every portion of them in plain view as with big guns manipulating they pursue their reptilian course over all obstacles.

"Canada's movie photographers have no rivals in daring. Some of the pictures were taken in the heat of battle where the air was literally full of flying pieces and the operator in terrible danger every moment. Imagine standing out in "No Man's Land," in an action, filming the advancing soldiers, snapping Hun prisoners, the while shells burst in close proximity, and bullets "whip-lash" past in showers. Perched on the top of a parapet, hiding in a shell hole, manipulating an instrument which the Boche is as likely as not to take for a machine gun and act accordingly, is the portion of those daring movie men, whose work at such times is really more dangerous than that of the soldiers themselves."

HUNS TELL LIES TO OBTAIN TRUTH

LONDON, March 8—Special—Replying to a question in the House of Commons yesterday, James Macpherson said the Government did not accept the accuracy of the report recently sent from Berlin that the Germans had brought down eighteen airplanes on the western front in one day. False statements such as these, he said, were made in order to elicit the truth.

"I can assure the members," he added, "that we still maintain mastery of the air."

CITY OF HAMILTON IS SHOWING UP BAD

It Has the Worst Record for Drunkenness in the Whole Province

TORONTO, March 7.—The annual report of the Provincial secretary's department just issued, contains interesting information respecting the Ontario Temperance act for the three and a half months of 1916 it was in operation.

In Toronto cases of drunkenness were reduced by 378, London by 47, Kingston by 88, Ottawa by 104. The net results for the cities and towns of the province embracing all jails for lock-ups is a total of 5,960 commitments, which reflects a marked benefit in consequence of temperance legislation.

With the exception of Parry Sound which has a remarkable increase in drunkenness the city of Hamilton had the worst drunkenness record during 1916 of any place in the province. Hamilton had 761 committments, an increase of 367. Parry Sound had an increase of 67, Brantford 31, Chatham 20 and Woodstock 17.

Vol. 59 BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, FRIDAY, MARCH 9, 1917. No. 60

LEGISLATURE SUPPORTS EMPIRE TO THE END

Members of Ontario Legislature Sink Differences in Joint Resolution—Carry on War to End—House Stood and Sang the National Anthem When Motion Was Passed

TORONTO, March 8—Special—Political differences were thrown aside in the Legislature yesterday for the first time since the session opened, and members of both parties joined hands in a pledge of support for the cause of the Empire and her allies that will go across the seas to the men in the trenches as testimony to the fact that in that one great crusade politics can have no part, and that the Legislature of Ontario is resolute and determined to do all that lies within its power to bring about final victory and lasting peace. When the motion was carried the members stood and sang the National Anthem.

The pledge formed part of a patriotic resolution moved by Sir William Hearst. It declared that the members of the Legislature as a body reaffirmed their belief in the righteousness of the cause for which Great Britain and her allies were fighting, approved of the statesmanlike answers given by the allied powers to the German peace offers and the proposal of the President of the United States, and endorsed the declaration that no peace is possible until the objects for which the allies are united have been achieved. The resolution recorded earnest appreciation of the splendid and heroic services of Canadians on the field of battle, and in closing called upon the people of the province to keep the successful prosecution of the war above all other considerations.

HAD TALK WITH WILHELM

Spanlard Visiting Spain Says German Emperor is in Wretched State of Health

Special to The Intelligencer.

NEW YORK, March 9—A despatch from Havana to the Herald says a prominent Spaniard there has received a letter from an uncle in Madrid, who has just returned from a trip to Germany. He talked with Emperor William. The letter says the Kaiser is in wretched health and kept going only by the most powerful stimulants. Physicians are administering morphine in large doses as the only way of affording him rest and sleep. Excitement keeps him alive. "I am confident that the war is nearing an end and that Emperor William will not live six months after peace is declared." The writer is the head of one of the most illustrious factories in Spain.

INVENTOR OF ZEPP. IS DEAD

Failure of His Plan to Destroy England Proved Mortal Blow

LONDON, March 9—Special—According to a Berlin telegram transmitted by Reuter's Amsterdam correspondent, Count Zeppelin, died yesterday afternoon at Charlottensburg, near Berlin, from pneumonia.

The Times says: Count Zeppelin died not in the zenith of his fame, but at one of the lowest points the curious ebb and flow of his fortunes ever reached. Since the outbreak of the war he had seen a score of his costly monsters of the air have been lost to Germany. No less than six of these were destroyed in succession over England last September, October and November. The discovery that British anti-aircraft measures had been organized in the provinces as successfully as in London had been one of the bitterest lessons the German air staff had to learn. To Zeppelin these losses proved perhaps a mortal blow.

CLASH WITH THE BRITISH

French Later Ousted Enemy Trenches on Height of Hill 185 Germans Claim Successes

Special to The Intelligencer.

BERLIN, March 9.—A Headquarters statement says the French succeeded in entering isolated trenches on the Height of 185, and at Maisson de Champagne. They were repulsed from the latter place and a counter attack recovered for the Germans the trench sections on the dominating Heights of 185.

French attacks against the German lines on Hill 304, left bank of the Meuse is waited. The Germans captured six prisoners and two machine guns in Avocourt wood. In the Somme sector three were repulsed attacks with British troops.

On the eastern front, between the Trostus and Usul valleys, the Germans stormed a height, and took strong Russian positions with six hundred prisoners.

TYRANNY OF TURKISH RULE NEAR AN END

British Closing in on Bagdad—Cavalry Within Eight Miles of the City—General Maude's Forces Advance 100 Miles in Ten Days

LONDON, March, 9—Special—The British cavalry is now within eight miles of Bagdad. Pressing steadily northward with little opposition, General Maude's troopers occupied Ctesiphon Tuesday morning, and broucked for the night near Bawi, at the confluence of the Dialah and Tigris Rivers, eight miles south of Bagdad. It is not improbable, observers here believe, that in the intervening three days the British have swept into the city itself. Bagdad at least are now ecamped on the outskirts.

Simultaneously the Russians are pressing down on the fleeing Ottoman forces in Persia, south of Hamadan. After capturing the important Asadabad summit, the Czar's troops pushed forward, and on Monday occupied the town of Kanagaver. On every front the Turks are suffering severe reverses.

The lack of opposition at Ctesiphon, the scene of the decisive battle in the campaign of 1915, which the British failed in their attempt to take, capture Bagdad, has astonished critics here. The resistance of the Turks in the British advance ever since the fall of Kut-el-Amara, on February 26, has been insignificant. During that time the British troops have covered nearly 100 miles of territory.

The British official statement is as follows:

General Maude reported that little opposition had been encountered by our pursuing troops Tuesday, though a high wind and sand storm rendered marching arduous.

"A Turkish force which attempted to oppose our advance at Lajl Monday had evacuated its positions by Tuesday morning, and our cavalry, passing Ctesiphon, which we found to be unoccupied, bivouacked for the night near Bawi, six miles southeast of Dialah, which is situated at the confluence of the Dialah River and the Tigris, eight miles from the southern outskirts of Bagdad.

"During Monday and Tuesday 35 Turks and one Turkish gun were captured."

Spared If They Would Recant

Thousands of Armenians Chose Death—Turks Wished to Exalt Mohammed

NEW YORK, March 8—Massacres of Armenians were inspired by the desire of the Turkish ruling class to eliminate from the Empire all sects and creeds except that of Mohammed according to Lord Bryce former British Ambassador to the United States in a cable message to the American committee for Armenian and Syrian relief made public tonight.

"During these recent massacres whenever any Christian would turn Mohammedan he was spared" said his message. "Many a Christian child was torn from its parents to be brought up as a Musulman. Thousands of Armenian Christian girls were sold in the market or distributed among the Turkish officers to be imprisoned for life in the Turkish harems and therefore forced into Mohammedanism.

"But many more thousands of Armenians, women as well as men, were offered their choice between Christ and Mohammed and when they refused Mohammed were shot or drowned forthwith. For several days together the bodies of Christians who had thus perished were seen floating down the Euphrates."

"Surely the remains of this suffering nation could make no stronger appeal for pity and help to the Christians of America than they make through these martyr's deaths. Only a remnant is now left to whom charity can be extended. It is still sorely afflicted."

Australians In For Home Rule

Senate Asks It Without Undue Delay—Laborite Scores Sir Edward Carson

MELBOURNE, March 8—The Australian Senate by a vote of 28 to 7 adopted a resolution calling for Home Rule for Ireland "without undue delay," substituting that phrase for the word "immediately."

Senator Stewart, a Laborite, said Sir Edward Carson, unmolested, had formed a force to fight the British authorities in Ireland, and then was brought into the Cabinet. As a result, there came the revolt in Ireland, in which people were killed. The reason Sir Edward was not molested, the speaker added, was that he belonged to the privileged class.

Senator Gould, Ministerialist, during the debate said a self-governing Dominion should not express an opinion on Home Rule for Ireland.

Two Canadians Escape Germany

German Guards Easy With Prisoners—Trouble Brings Sentence to West Front

LONDON, March 8—Privates 16,-567, Thurgood, Vancouver, and 24,-361, Sam Gordon, Montreal, taken prisoners in April, 1915, and members of the original Canadian contingent, have succeeded in escaping and have reached England. The men state that there was not much difficulty in escaping, as the rivers were frozen. Parcels were reaching the prisoners much more regularly into Ir. It was evident that Germany's difficulties of transporting were increasing, and the conditions of the prisoners' camps were not so good as once was the case, but there two think this is not due to the guards, who are anxious to treat the prisoners as well as possible in order to avoid trouble in the camp. When trouble does arise the guards are packed off to the western front.

No man is his own master in this world. The richest of us takes orders from the lowliest.

HALF MILLION PENSIONERS ON BRITISH PAYROLL

Some Astonishing Figures of the Pension Department Given by Minister

LONDON, March 8—Minister of Pensions Barnes gave some astonishing figures in the House of Commons today, when he came to explain the operations of the Pensions Department. He explained that the ministry had charge of the following: disabled men, 140,275; children of disabled men, 157,-544; widows, 62,786; children of widows, 125,284; dependents of deceased men, 29,332; total on books, 518,741.

Besides these were 125,000 widows who are now drawing separation allowances, but will soon go on the pension list; 65,000 men in hospital, and 65,000 awaiting discharge. Those figures brought the total number of men, women and children to 673,741 medically unfit, of whom over 100,000 were not in receipt of pensions, but were to be put back where the state found them.

In exceptional cases there would be a gratuity of £100. The scheme in its entirety would involve a capital charge of £286,000,000 and for the first two years £25,000,000.

Meat Rationing In Britain Wins

LONDON, March 9.—Special.—Reports on the consumption of meat show that the average amount used in London before voluntary rationing was undertaken was 2 lbs. 12 ozs. a week. It has now fallen to 2.760 lbs., so the plan of rationing is considered a success.

Lord Devonport, the Food Controller, has about determined to fix maximum prices for tea, coffee, butter and cheese as well as lard. There are protests against the extension of the maximum price plan because of the failure in the case of potatoes. The country is now almost totally deprived of potatoes because the farmers refuse to sell at the maximum price.

HELD ON FELONY CHARGE

Captain Fritzen Arrested in California on Suspicion of Canal Plot

Special to the Intelligencer.

LOS ANGELES, March 9—Captain Fritzen, said to be a German naval officer, was arrested at Harwood, near here, last night by a special agent of the Department of Justice and held on suspicion of felony. The authorities said he is wanted for being connected with the alleged plot to destroy the Welland Canal.

FRENCH DRIVE OF 600 METRES

German Counter Offensive Repulsed After Violent Fighting

Special to the Intelligencer.

PARIS, March 9—German position on a front of fifteen hundred metres surging in depth from six hundred to eight hundred metres, were captured by attack in Champagne during yesterday's fighting French War Office reports. German counter offensive was repulsed after violent fighting. Two German attacks in Avocourt Wood on the Verdun front were repulsed.

British Forces Have Advanced on Both Sides of The Ancre River

LONDON, March 9—Special—Thursday's official report from the British headquarters in France reads:

"We have advanced our lines slightly on either side of the Ancre valley; otherwise the situation is unchanged. "Last night our troops successfully entered the enemy trenches near Biaches and secured some prisoners. South-east of Chaulnes and south of Arras the enemy raided our front line, in each case the raid was preceded by a heavy bombardment. A few of our men are missing."

No Shortage of Potatoes

What is to be Done to Bring The Price Down

OTTAWA, March 8—There are plenty of potatoes in the Dominion. So many, in fact, that there are two million bushels over the export when the average annual export has been only 1,130,000 bushels. This was made clear yesterday when the Journal newspapers asked Hon. Mr. Burrell for further information about an assertion contained in the Intelligencer with him printed on Tuesday. What then, is to be done to bring down the price to normal on the Ottawa and other Ontario Markets?

DEATH BLOW AT LIQUOR HOUSES

Drastic Bill Brought Before Regina Legislature

REGINA, Sask., March 8—Aiming a death blow at liquor commission houses operating in Saskatchewan, Attorney General Turgeon in the Legislature this morning introduced a bill which will prohibit the exposing, keeping for sale, selling, bartering or exchanging of liquor in the province.

Smith, President of the Canadian Club, Mayor Murphy and W. A. Brown, President of the Board of Trade. Lunch was served under the auspices of the Canadian Club. His Excellency delivered an address.

TRENTON RAISED $22,000

Good Prospect of Patriotic Fund Yet Reaching $30,000

TRENTON, March 9.—Special—Citizens of Trenton in their "Victory Campaign" raised a fund of $22,000 and there is a possibility that the total will yet reach $30,000. The objective was $20,000 and the Citizens' Committee are very grateful and pleased with the result. Mr. W. Hyndman the district organizer is given much credit for the success of the campaign.

HOSPITAL TRAIN COMES TO WHITBY JUNCTION

MONTREAL, March 9.—Special.—A Military Hospitals Commission hospital train, bearing bed cases from the front, passed through Montreal on its way to Whitby Junction, Ont., where the cases are to be assembled. On the train were 22 "stretcher cases," men unable to leave their beds. In these hospital cars, and 70 amputation cases in two specially-equipped tourist cars.

GERMAN MIGRATION TO LAWLESS MEXICO

NEW YORK, March 9—Special—The Mexican Consulate-General in New York is issuing passports to Germans at the rate of more than 100 a day. Four hundred Germans have applied for and received passports this week. Most of those now emigrating to Mexico, it is said, go by rail through San Antonio, Texas, although many are going through El Paso, Eagle Pass and other points along the border west of Laredo.

AUSTRIA CALLS UP MERE STRIPLINGS

Youths and Also Old Men Needed in the Army

PARIS, March 8.—A Zurich dispatch to the Temps says that the Austrian Minister of War has called into service the class of 1920, that is, youths born in 1899 and 1900.

The recruits, it is stated, must present themselves on March 10, for immediate service. The dispatch adds that it is reported that the Austrian Government is likely to call out men aged 54 to 61 years, who are capable of giving military service.

Canadian Land Values Increase

Average Values Climb to Forty-One Dollars an Acre

OTTAWA, March 8.—Statistics provided by the Census Office here place the average value of farm lands held for agricultural purposes throughout the Dominion and including the value of buildings at $41 per acre, as compared with 40 last year. British Columbia lands are valued the best at $118, and Ontario and Quebec are valued at $52.

Average monthly wages for farm help including board were $43.23 for male help, and $22.40 for female, as against $37.10 and $20.20 for 1915.

The average value of horses for Canada is about the same as 1915 with a substantial increase in the value of other animals. The total value of farm animals in Canada is $796,544,000, as compared with $746,246,000 in 1915.

Now that town people are going to start gardens, the hens who have been laying the war-priced eggs better stick close to the business.

The fellow who takes pride in his work usually has plenty of work to do.

SELLS HEIRLOOM OUT OF PATRIOTISM

Smith's Falls Man Felt He Should Make Sacrifice

SMITH'S FALLS, Ont., March 8—Mr. Byron L. Shaver, manager of D. F. Jamieson's dry goods store, who has had in his possession a handsome gold watch that given him by his father, who dug the gold himself in the California gold fields in 1849 and had it made to his order, has given this valuable gift to the local Red Cross and Canadian Patriotic Fund.

He might have given money, but he wished to give something that meant a sacrifice, and has done so. It will be disposed of by tickets at 50 cents each and the proceeds divided equally.

PREMIER AT THE FRONT

OTTAWA, March 8—A cable has been received that Sir Robert Borden and his colleagues are visiting this week the Canadian battle line. They will be back in England on Monday.

"The Part of Ireland That Clearly Demands Home Rule Shall Get It"

LONDON, March 8.—Special.—Following is the full text of the passage in Mr. Lloyd George's speech in the House of Commons yesterday in reference to the Government's offer of Home Rule to Ireland:—

"I am not in the least afraid in submitting the proposal of the Government to the judgment of any unbiased friend of Ireland in any quarter of the globe. I put it again, and I want not merely Irishmen to know, but I want men outside of the confines of the United Kingdom and of the British Empire to know, what it is that to-day we offer. It is that the part of Ireland clearly demands Home Rule shall get it—self-government—shall get it.

"There are two questions to be asked by all of us. The first is this: Are the people of this country prepared to consider self-government on the parts of Ireland which unmistakably demand it? The offer which I give on behalf of the Cabinet is that the Government are firmly of that opinion, and are firmly of the opinion that represents the views of the vast majority of the people of this country.

"The next point is this: Are the people of this country prepared to force the population of the northeastern corner of Ireland to submit to be governed by a population with whom they are completely out of sympathy? I am judging, and have I speak on behalf of the Government, they are not."

MESSRS. JULE AND JAY O. ALLEN PRESENT

THE CANADIAN ARMY IN ACTION AND THE ADVANCE OF THE TANKS"

THE OFFICIAL MOVING PICTURES OF THE BATTLE OF COURCELETTE

A Common Tribute To Those of Our Sons Who Fought to Victory and to Those Who Died Victorious.

YOU have heard of the battle of Queenston Heights. What do you know about the Battle of Courcelette?

At Queenston Heights one thousand men were arrayed on the Canadian side, and 14 of them were killed and 90 wounded or captured.

At Courcelette about 70,000 Canadians were engaged, and there were—well, the casualties were light as casualties in the battles of this unprecedented war compare.

But what do we here in Canada know about this, the biggest of Canadian battles? Practically nothing.

History will set forth the facts. Courcelette will rank higher than Queenston Heights in 1812; higher than Lundy's Lane, higher than Ridgeway in '66, higher than Batoche in '85, or Paardeberg in 1900. Courcelette was a bigger battle than St. Julien of April 22, 1915, when the first Canadian contingent withstood the gas attack and saved Calais. There were thrice as many Canadians at Courcelette as there were British under Wellington at Waterloo.

Monday and Tuesday, March 12 and 13 in this city will be presented vivid official and authentic moving pictures of the Battle of Courcelette, the greatest film of the war for the eyes of the people of this country, for it shows the Canadians in action and the advance of the Tanks.

FARM RESIDENCE BURNED

Mr. Edward Sherry, a yeoman residing on the Shannonville Road, in Tyendinaga Township, about two and a half miles north of Shannonville, this morning suffered a severe loss, when his residence, with a considerable portion of its contents, was destroyed by fire. The building, a large one, was completely destroyed. How the fire originated was not learned.

KILL PRESIDENT WILSON AMOS PAUHLS' MISSION

BALTIMORE, Md., March 9.—Special.—Charged under the new act of Congress with threatening to do bodily harm to President Wilson, Amos H. Paulis, seventy years old, of York, Penn., was held in $10,000 bail yesterday by United States Commissioner Supplee for the action of the Federal Grand Jury. It is alleged Paulis said he belonged to the Cross and Crown Society, and that at a meeting of the society he had been chosen to kill President Wilson. It was further alleged that he was to meet a man in Washington, at Tennessee avenue and D street northwest, where he was to obtain $15,000 to carry out his plans. At this place he was also to receive his instructions and weapons to carry out the execution.

LANDING CONTRACTS

J. E. Bradshaw Makes Charges In Regina House

REGINA, Sask., March 8—Something in the nature of a new charge was made by J. E. Bradshaw in the Legislature Tuesday afternoon, when in Committee on Supply, the item of $15,000 for "organization and inspection of rural telephone systems" was read.

Mr. Bradshaw stated he had been informed that men representing companies interested in the building of rural lines attended meetings of those who were discussing the possibility of forming a rural company, and by dint of their influence succeeded in landing the contract for themselves.

He stated the Telephone Department had the final activities of companies in order to coerce the company to take a contract at the hands of some special contractor. Adding pressed for an instance, Mr. Bradshaw cited the case of the Colliston Rural Telephone Company.

Hon. George Bell, Minister of Telephones, challenged Mr. Bradshaw to go before a committee of the House and prove his statement. He characterized the charge as untrue, and said no company had ever been held up in connection with its organization, except for proper business reasons.

If Mr. Bradshaw could prove his statement, Mr. Bell said, he could assure the House the official responsible would not long hold his position.

The whole party political atmosphere of the North-West seems to be rotten and outrageous. It will be remembered that when Mr. Bradshaw made his former charge the Government denied them as vehemently as it does the present one. The result of investigation, however, landed some of the Liberal puritans in jail.

TIM HEALY ON IRISH PLAY-ACTING

Adds That Mr. Redmond Will Return With a More Humble Spirit

LONDON, March 8.—Tim Healy, who did not follow Mr. Redmond's lead in quitting the House of Commons during the Home Rule debate last night, sarcastically predicted, in the course of a speech last night, that "Mr. Redmond, who made such a dramatic sackdash from the House, will return in a more humble spirit." He also declared that the Irish people would "be able to take the measure of this prearranged playacting."

From the day the Home Rule Bill was introduced in 1912, Mr. Healy has never known Mr. Redmond to hold out the hand of friendship to the Conservative party. On the contrary, he had tabooed every suggestion the Conservatives had made for an agreement. He charged that Mr. Redmond had deliberately upset the Nationalist party, and thereby created Sinn Feiuism.

Premier Lloyd George's speech may be summed up in his reply to an exclamation from Mr. Dillon: "What will you say to the Sinn Feiners?"

"I will say to them," replied the Premier, "you can have Home Rule for the asking, but we won't place under you people who do not want Home Rule."

KING ENDORSES BATTLE PICTURE

GIVEN PRIVATE VIEW

Government Officials Delighted at Initial Presentation at Queen's Park

Sir John Hendrie, lieutenant-governor of Ontario, received a cable message from the King, endorsing the Canadian war film to be exhibited in Belleville by Pale and Jay C. Allen. The message from His Majesty came through the official channel via Ottawa, and reads as follows:

"These pictures will help to bring home vividly to all in Canada the nature of the great sacrifice which their fellow-citizens in the empire are making in its cause and in that of h.uo and justice. I hope that the greatest success will attend the efforts of those who have organized this means of spreading throughout Canada news of the progress of the great war."

His honor has also had a communication from Hon. A. E. Kemp, minister of Canadian militia, strongly recommending these pictures.

Praises Picture.

"The pictures are official and authentic," declared his honor to The World. "They are intensely vivid and interesting. Both Lady Hendrie and myself recognized a personal friend in one of the scenes in the picture of Major Harry Crerar, of Hamilton, of the 4th Battery. Everyone should see these pictures. They are Canadian, and they also show the tanks. I thoroughly approve their exhibition, and heartily endorse the film," Lady Hendrie was also enthusiastic.

To be seen at Griffin's Opera House Monday and Tuesday, March 12 and 13, matinee and evening.

EVIDENCE PRODUCED

Germany's Aid to the Cuban Rebel Cause

Direct evidence of Germany's aid to the Cuban rebel cause has been found in an examination of papers found after the arrest of Dr. Louis Octavio Divino, a well-known Liberal leader, and two members of the Cuban Congress. They said that "Germany had promised to aid." President Menocal has declared the Santiago rebels "must either surrender or be driven into the sea."

THE POTATO OUTLOOK

Protesting against the imposition by the Federal Government of any embargo against the export of potatoes from the Dominion, a deputation representing the New Brunswick Potato Exchange waited upon Sir George Foster and Hon. Martin Burrell recently. They declared that if the embargo were imposed the price would be reduced sufficiently to discourage the farmers raising potatoes this year, but not sufficient to provide potatoes to the working man at a price he was able to pay.

"THE LITTLE CAFE," AT GRIFFIN'S WEDNESDAY.

The big musical comedy success, 'The Little Cafe,' from its unequalled run of nearly a year in Manhattan, will be the attraction at Griffin's Opera House next Wednesday night. 'The Little Cafe," is a happy combination of individual talent and specialization. It was taken first hand from a French farce, "Le Petit Cafe,'" by Tristan Bernard. C. M. S. McLellan made the adaption and also wrote the lyrics. Ivan Caryll composed the score. Klaw & Erlanger originally outlined the production and Herbert Gresham staged it, while Julian Mitchell put on the ensemble effect and chorus numbers. It was this combination that gave the American stage "The Pink Lady," and "Oh, Oh, Delphine." They have more than outpointed that standard in 'The Little Cafe," for it has their score of light musical successes to date. Beyond these essential outlines it is not necessary to go into detail concerning the engagement. The piece is known for its humor, delightful music, charm of color schemes and classiness in every respect. The original production is assured.

"BUGLER OF ALGIERS", STORY OF FLAG, HOME AND COUNTRY

At Griffin's To-night.

Kingsley Benedict, who heads the supporting company, has appeared in "The Crippled Hand" with Miss Hall and in "Love Never Dies" in support of Ruth Stonehouse—both Bluebirds. He has established a reputation for meritorious work and has "won his spurs" in Bluebird presentations.

While it was, of course, impossible to go to France for the "local color" and scenery to frame the episodes in authentic surroundings there has been nevertheless, an excellent atmosphere of naturalness created among the foot-hills and scenic glories of California. The beauties of Bluebird photography have long been subject of favorable comment, and in "The Bugler of Algiers" this reputation is abundantly sustained.

Good plays must arrive from good sources. That the famous editor of Munsey's should contribute to photoplaying is something to be said in further testimony of the merits this style of entertainment possesses. It may readily be accepted that Mr. Davis, in his great experience and from his abundant gifts, should devise an interesting story, which is to be presented at Griffin's tonight, and Saturday matinee and night.

Besides the above special offering, which is to be presented with an orchestra, the latest chapter of the "Shielding Shadow" series will be offered, in addition to a selected program of varied photoplays.

FOIL FOREIGN PLOTTERS BY "FLYING TORPEDO."

IMAGINARY INVASION IN 1921

How an eccentric detective story writer foiled the enemies of this country and made possible the use of a novel means of defence which saved the nation, is told in a thrilling story on the future called "The Flying Torpedo," this Fine Arts Triangle story is coming to the Palace Theatre tonight and Saturday matinee and night.

The flying torpedo is finally perfected and at a private test it meets every requirement.

FRENCH SCIENTIST HAS BRAN NEW THEORY

Predicts End of World by Volcanic Action and Fire—Earth's Crust Thin

A new kind of end of the world has been imagined by Louis Rabourdin, a French scientist. Sometimes it has been suggested that the world will gradually become cold, so that life will be frozen out. M. Rabourdin, however, thinks it possible that the earth might end in an incandescent blaze.

The earth's crust, he says, is very thin at the bottom of the sea, and should it give way in consequence of volcanic action, the earth might be consumed in flames.

"Suppose," he states, "that, following an extraordinary twisting movement, due to retreat of the central mass, a large mass of the sea bottom should give way, and, falling suddenly, should let in the mass of the ocean's waters upon the incandescent interior matter. The water would be decomposed by the heat, the hydrogen would burn, and it would burn more as it had access to more oxygen.

"The conflagration would then gain in force, accompanied by electric phenomena, and the crust would probably be displaced. The earth, passing through a critical epoch and returning for the time being to its formative period, would again be nothing but a globe of fire."

SMOKING IN BUSINESS BY WOMEN ACCEPTED

For women to smoke in business is becoming quite the accepted thing. The manager of a certain large wholesale house tells me that several girls have stipulated for this privilege upon being engaged to fill the posts of men who, of course, smoke when they pleased—on the ground of "equal conditions." And, in a newspaper office, I was amused by the sight of a smart little typist whose experiences at the machine was in no way diminished by the cigarette she held dexterously in her left hand, necessitating two fingers being "out of action."

The smoking is not, of course, permitted in munition factories, an acquaintance recently initiated into the art of shell-making, tells me that when she sat for her examination, the instructor handed cigarettes all round as a preliminary to three hours' hard writing. Everyone of the candidates passed well and the inference was naturally that in soothing excited nerves the cigarettes had accomplished a happy task.—Exchange.

PATRONAGE.

The opposition in the Ontario Legislature are wasting no little time in discussing the question of Government patronage. The innocent uninformed, reading their comments and hearing their lamentations upon the subjects of office and the loss which they have suffered in not having the same advantage in securing office for themselves and their friends that they had during the thirty years they were in power in Ontario, would come to the conclusion that they were a very much persecuted class of His Majesty's subjects. It would be highly interesting to learn how many offices were filled during their thirty years of office, by any other than of their own party. True, when the system of granting Tavern Licenses was changed and boards of inspectors appointed under the Mowat administration, the boards were composed of three Liberals and two Conservatives, but it was soon discovered that boards so constituted prevented the using of granting Tavern Licenses for party political purposes as the Conservative minority on each board was dropped, and Liberals substituted therefore. What followed? The whole Tavern License granting became a gigantic Liberal machine, used for party purposes. Oh, replied these professed anti-political office-holders, Licenses to keep a Tavern were granted to Conservatives as well as to Reformers. True, such was the case in some localities, but a fee for political party purposes was generally blended as necessary, to ensure success in obtaining a license. It is not necessary to go beyond this city to find evidence of this fact. For such men as Proudfoot, the Liberal Whip of the Ontario Legislature, and others of alike kind, to prate about abuse of Government patronage with their own and their leaders' political history still fresh in the memories of the electors, would, under other circumstances, be surprised but in them it is constitutional. Office and patronage being the ruling passion of their public life.

In a late debate in the Legislature, upon this subject, the report says:

"The Hon. Mr. Ferguson protested against the charge that patronage had a place in his department. Of 50 employees in the forest branch 40 were appointees of the old Government. To my knowledge, only two members of the staff of my department had been let out of the service, so far as I know, and they were let out for good and sufficient reason." "Not only that, but the man we are appointing to take charge of the whole forest administration of this Province, who will control and administer the whole policy in the future, Zavitz, an appointee of the old Government."

"A. Mageau, of Sturgeon Falls, wants to know if a similar policy obtained with regard to rangers. He was told that the department took no account of a ranger's politics.

"Never since I have been in the department have I asked an applicant for a position of fire ranger what his politics were," said Mr. Ferguson. 'Have you a few like all your recommendations from men on your side of the House?' asked Proudfoot.

"Any honorable friend is quite in order. There are numbers of men we appoint who are not the nominees of any member, and a good many of them are Liberals. In fact, there are some whom I have appointed, on the recommendation of honorable members opposite."

"We have one for you," offered Mr. Mageau.

The Minister came back promptly, explaining that only returned soldiers or men who had offered for service and whose offers had been taken on.

"If my honorable friend can name such a man I will appoint him," offered Mr. Ferguson.

All this was wasted on politicians of the stripe and caliber of Proudfoot and those who dance to the tune he plays on the Grit fiddle.

Patronage forsooth. The Liberals, when in power, never committed the party sin of violating a fundamental principle of their party by appointing a Conservative to office. It is only when in Opposition the public hear of purity in dispensing patronage.

SERGEANT DOUCH, AND RETURNED SOLDIERS.

One who evidently knows what he is writing about, furnishes us with the following information in regard to the claims which Sergeant Douch has upon the Government of the country, which, if correctly stated, and we have no reason to doubt their accuracy, there can be little complaints, against those who occupy the places he is now holds, or for allowing him to continue to hold it.

"We have never heard of its being advocated that any one holding a position in the service of his country, should, so long as he performs the duties pertaining to the position he holds faithfully, should be turned out to find room for another. That would be a vicious principle to adopt; quite un-British. If there is a vacancy, by all means fill it with a returned soldier.

The information furnished, is as follows:

Mr. S. Pointer complains that returned soldiers are overlooked and ill treated, because Sergt. Douch, who has charge of the Church Street Artillery and 49th Armouries, has not been promoted and a returned man given his position. It is quite evident the writer does not know what services Sergt. Douch has rendered his country. With your permission I will inform him. After reading, which he evidently will, he will find he has little cause to complain.

Sergt. Douch has served continuously for twenty-eight years. He served throughout the South African War, was twice invalided home, and returned to see it finish, underwent four operations, has served in the East Surrey Regiment, the Imperial Yeomanry and the R.C.H.A.

Since his appointment here, in 1912 he has been indefatigable in his instructional work in rifle shooting and physical exercises, and since the war began has been among the most successful, of recruiting Sergeants. The Commanding Officers of the 39th and 155th Battalions constantly used his services as a member of recruiting commissioned officers, and he is now actively employed by the staff of the districts in important work. He has his qualifications as an artificer and has done, and is doing, his full duty by Canada and the Empire. Sergeant Douch is willing and ready to go overseas at once if the authorities would permit him and the Surgeons would pass him. He is already doing his in a position for which he has proved himself remarkably well qualified, and should be retained in it."

Planting potatoes in your backyard this spring will keep you out of some other form of foolishness.

There is no objection to Canadian knighthood. They are not undemocratic. The objection is to hereditary titles.

The seas were free enough before 1911. During upward of a century Britannia ruled the waves, but she also chivalrously policed them, and the benefits of her trusteeship were shared by all nations. A sea power has always been an enlightened power; its selfishness has been an enlightened selfishness. It is not the fault of Britain that the seas are no longer free.—Chicago Tribune.

Liberal papers are jubilantly pointing out that a Liberal victory in New Brunswick presages Conservative defeat in the same Province at the next general election. Maybe so; but if it does then the people of Canada have one thing to be thankful for: Frank Carvell's constituency went solidly Conservative, and if Liberal lines do right Parliament will soon be rid of Carvell's ... an ill-wind that blows nobody good."

The report of the Board of License Commissioners for Ontario for the year 1916 has just been issued. It shows that the number of prisoners committed for drunkenness during the year just closed was 202 less than in the year previous. Three and one-half months of the year was under total prohibition. The fines collected during the year amounted to $31,-214.01, and in the local option municipalities the amount collected was $13,277.

WONDER ISLAND OF HISTORY.

The Story of Sicily is a Compendium of Medieval Romances.

Sicily's history is as vivid and picturesque, as ferocious and creative and destructive, as mythical and imaginary practical as the stories of all the rest of the world put together. And in beauty of scenery, of climate, or man, and of beast, the island is a paradise today, whether or not it was ever the workless, reckless, passionless elysium where our first ancestors enjoyed all the good things of life without having to toil.

Native music, now in the throes of the misunderstood gods of old, now in convulsions or in quiet fertility that science has already plain to us, weaves its mysterious shuttle through and through the highly colored fabric.

And that much-used power above their fellows in the story like Titans—Tindar, Aeschylus, Theocritus, Thucydides, Archimedes, the two great Romans, Cicero, Verres, Diodorus, Hannibal and Hamilcar, Roger the Count and Roger the King, Belisarius, the great crusaders Richard of the Lion Heart and Louis the Saint of France, Charles of Anjou, Frederick II, the "wonder of the world," and Garibaldi. Even Goethe, with his mind in a compendium of ancient and medieval romance and chivalry.—National Geographic Magazine.

CURIOUS FRENCH DUEL,

When Man and Wife Tried to Settle a Dispute With Swords.

Charles Corpeau, Sieur d'Assocd, a French poet and musician of the seventeenth century, relates in one of his "Adventures" that his father and mother were one day engaged in a discussion upon questions of law when a dispute arose between them with regard to the precise significance and bearing of a provision in Justinian's code with respect to the rights of women.

Ultimately the quarrel waxed so furious that the disputants lost all control of themselves, defied each other to single combat and proceeded to settle their differences and determine the mind of the ancient legislator by a fight with swords.

This singular duel took place in their son's presence. Corpeau pere was an advocate by profession and a member of one of the French parliaments. Madame was exceedingly diminutive and had to wear exceptionally high pattens to approach the ordinary stature of women, but she was fierce and domineering in spirit. The combat appears to have been a drawn battle, and the sense of Justinian remained as obscure and debatable as ever.

Why "Anuric" is an INSURANCE Against Sudden Death.

Before an Insurance Company will take a risk on your life the examining physician will test the urine and report whether you are a good risk. Now, your kidneys get sluggish and clog with poisons. Then follows backache, aches, dizzy spells, or the twinges and pains of Inflammatory Rheumatism or gout. The urine is often cloudy, full of sediment; urination is scanty and slow and sleep is disturbed two or three times a night. That is why Insurance should consult some physician of wide experience such as Dr. Pierce of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N.Y. Send him 10 cents for sample package of Dr. Pierce's "Anuric." Write him your symptoms and send a sample of the kidney test. Experience has taught Dr. Pierce that "Anuric" is the most powerful agent in dissolving uric acid; so hot water drink (sugar) besides being delicious harmless it is endowed with other properties, for it prevents the kidneys in health's condition by thoroughly cleansing them, being many times more active than lithia, it clears the heart valves of any nasty substances which may clog them, and checks the degeneration of the blood-vessels, as well as it purifies the blood. Remember "Anuric" is a regular insurance and lifesaver for all who suffer from kidney, who deposit lime-salts in their joints. Ask the druggist for "Anuric" and up by Dr. Pierce, in 50-cent packages.

STRENGTH AND BEAUTY

Come with Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It makes the liver active, the blood pure, and thereby the liver and stomach into vigorous health. Then beauty of form and grace of movement follow, which feeds the heart, nerves, brain, and organs of the body, and the whole machine smoothly like machinery running in oil. You feel clean, clear, and wholesome instead of tired, weak and faint.

The Moral of the Story.

Douglas, as the narrative runs, was once sitting in d profound sleep in the corridor of the capitol when Adeline Cutts, a Washington belle, passed by. She did not know the sleeper, but was struck with compassion on seeing such a splendidly intellectual face under such conditions, and, stooping down, laid her handkerchief over it to protect it from the flies. Douglas on awakening found the handkerchief, sought the owner and eventually married her. There was a moral, and then the professor added: "Young ladies, the moral of this story is, have your pocket handkerchief marked."

History of the Word "Telegram."

In the reminiscences of Frederick Seward, son of William H. Seward, he tells of the day in the office of the Albany Evening Journal, edited by Thurlow Weed, the political Warwick of his time, when the word "telegram" was first used in that paper. Indeed, it is intimated that the word was there coined by one E. P. Smith and soon taken up and used generally in England as well as in the United States. To pronounce on the validity of this claim, who is competent? But it is always interesting to get d side light on the paternity of a word.—Christian Science Monitor.

His Surprise.

"Learn to cook, darling, and I'll give you a surprise," said a tightwad to his wife.

She took a six months' cooking course and then brought home her diploma proudly. She could now cook like an angel.

"Bring on my surprise," she said.

"This is it," said her husband, smiling, and he rang for the cook and discharged her then and there.

A Rugged American.

"A belted earl once proposed to this heiress on bended knee."

"Fancy that! I presume her family was pleased?"

"Her mother was delighted, but her father expressed a savage wish to belt the earl himself."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Cherub Devine

By SEWELL FORD

© Copyright, 1916, by Mitchell Kennerley.

Here is a fascinating latter day romance, written in the vein and style that have won fame for Sewell Ford. "Cherub" Devine is an inspiration in his refreshing outlook on life and people, and after a meteoric Wall street career and a season of recreation among the effervescent ladies of the stage he meets the charming Countess Vecchi. This sweet young American girl, victim of the execrable "international marriage" system, resolves that it is her duty to reform the Cherub, and the outcome provides a narrative seldom equaled in its fanciful humor, illuminating character delineation and tender sentiment.

CHAPTER I.

THOSE who doubt that fate now and then indulges in irony should have observed the manner in which Hewington Acres came into the possession of "Cherub" Devine.

Bulkins, the real estate agent who made the sale, attributes the whole credit of the transaction to his own shrewdness. But, then, Bulkins is one of those persons who would cheerfully call upon the entire universe to prove that he (Bulkins) was cleverer all round all other men in that respect. Does the sun shine? Bulkins knew it would and for his profit. There comes a storm. Bulkins appropriates it, wrings a percentage therefrom and winks confidently at the solar system whose operations are conducted for his especial and particular benefit.

"I can sell anything," anywhere. This was Bulkins' philosophy, his religion, his declaration of faith in himself.

And of course Bulkins knew the habits and ways of Cherub Devine. Every one knew them. Any one—the man in the street, the clerk behind the counter, the very newsboy at the curb—could tell you all about them, give you his entire history, from the time he started his career as office boy for a Chicago stockbroker until he swayed into the many millioned spectator whose audacious methods were at that moment stirring things up in Wall street. Each and every one could have told you exactly the kind of man he was and missed the mark widely for such men are not so easily estimated.

Perhaps it was this, visible in his wide set blue eyes, with the flashes of light behind; perhaps it was only the pink cheekiness of his classic square face, which earned him the name of Cherub, a designation applied impartially by pert messenger boys, irreverent brokers and staid heads of great corporations. He had been christened otherwise, of course, and possibly Cherub was inappropriate when you recalled all that he was or seemed to be, but the designation was universally accepted as you know.

Just where he might be expected to be found Bulkins had run across him, seated comfortably in a leather covered, wide armed office chair at an open window which looked out across Broad street toward the more or less ornate front of the New York Stock Exchange.

The time was a little past noon of an August Saturday. Therefore the stream of men was setting outward between the great pillars. The curb was lined with hansoms and autos, and into these climbed brokers variously stifled, variously buttoned. Here came one in blue serge wearing a yachting cap, there two who swung golf bags in their hands. Others were followed by boys carrying kit bags.

"Hello, Cherub! They got after you today, eh? Leaving here to get even, are you?"

Mr. Devine showed no resentment.

"Maybe I was," said he.

Bulkins snorted out a mirthless laugh.

"Good! Sic 'em, my boy! That's what I'd do. When they think they've got me best worst I bob up and go at 'em hardest. But, say, you ought to take a rest, too, in exile. Does a man good. You ought"—He grinned broadly. "O, I say, Cherub, going to the 'Hamptons'? You've got just the thing you ought to have—a country place."

"Yes?" Mr. Devine acknowledged the joke by flicking half an inch of cigar ash on the window ledge.

"You bet!" Bulkins was smoothing Cherub's coat sleeve. "It's Hewington Acres—up on the sound—just edged suburban property, and going dirt cheap on foreclosure. You know about the Hewingtons; swell people, but gone all to smash financially. Now, there's twenty acres of land along the water, nice little forty room cottage—"

"Only forty?"

"With stables, lodge house, gardener's shack and the like. It's fully furnished and goes as it stands, even to the servants if you want them. Just the place for a family man like you."

And Bulkins snorted a fresh appreciation of his own humor, winking cheerfully at an astonished broker's clerk who happened to be passing.

Mr. Devine seemed to have missed the joke.

"How much?" he asked, his gaze still fixed on the stone steps opposite.

"Receivers would take $60,000, but it's worth double. That's as sure as I'm standing here. I tell you, Cherub, that property"—

"I'll take it," said the Cherub.

"I said I'd take it at sixty. What do you want to bind the bargain—ten thousand? Fifteen? Well, call it fifteen." And before that under lip of Bulkins' had stiffened he was bidding Cherub's check in his hands.

Observed Bulkins afterward when he had mentally added his commission to his bank account and recovered from his surprise: "Now, some men would have been six months turning over a property like that, but me, I unload it on the first sucker I meet, though what in thunder Devine wants of a place like Hewington Acres is more 'n I can see!"

Apparently Cherub had no immediate use for it since he allowed three weeks to elapse without referring to the transaction, except to turn the deed over to a clerk and tell him to have it recorded. He seemed to forget all about it until one Friday afternoon when he found himself with a "closing" Saturday, a Sunday and an ensuing Monday holiday on his hands.

"Better come with me for a run into the Berkshires, Cherub, and help me try out my new machine," urged Wilkinson, one of the "Chicago crowd," whose hobby was buying another and more expensive touring car every month or so.

"Thanks, but I guess I'm about due out at my place on the sound."

"Wha-a-t!... You don't mean to say you're set up a country establishment?" And Wilkinson gave him an incredulous look.

"Didn't have to—bought it all standing. Haven't seen it yet. It's only—well, say, blamed if I know just where it is. Boy, ring up Bulkins, will ya, tate!"

Having summoned Bulkins to the other end of the wire, Mr. Devine proceeded to ask enlightenment.

"That you, Bulkins? Well, this is Devine. Say, what's the name of that place you sold me? Eh? Hewington Acres? Oh, Hewington! Good! And where is it? Yes, where? No. How should I know? Ah, that's it, is it? Guess I can remember. But how do you get there? Sure. Thirty-fourth street ferry. Thanks. So long."

And ten minutes later Mr. Devine had started on his voyage of discovery into the fashionable wilds of Long Island, bent on inspecting the first piece of real estate which he had ever owned, the first tangible fruits of his newly acquired millions.

Owing to the foresight of Bulkins, who had sent a warning telegram in advance, Mr. Devine was met at the station by one Simmins, who singled him out with unerring promptness, introducing himself as caretaker and general superintendent of Hewington Acres, and waved him obsequiously toward a yellow wheeled park trap drawn by a pair of glossy colts.

"Whose team?" Mr. Devine was asking.

"Yours, sir."

"All right. Let 'em go."

X-RAY FOUND PORCUPINE QUILL IN PATIENT'S BACK

Sufferer in Hospital Thought He Had Serious Liver Trouble But When Quill Was Removed He Admitted Fight With "Porkie" Twelve Years Previous

The X-ray department at the Montreal General Hospital is, unlike every other branch of work carried on at this institution, lit by the hospital detective's lantern on behalf of the human body. All kinds of elusive maladies and unusual causes of disease and suffering are tracked down by means of the X-ray and exposed.

A man was brought to the General supposed to be suffering from serious liver trouble. But he did not respond satisfactorily to treatment, and the X-ray department was asked to "throw a light" upon his case.

Photographs, or to use the more sullable word, shadowgraphs were taken, an examination of which led to the following questions being asked the patient:

"Did you at any time in your life swallow a needle, or any similar article?"

"No."

Can you think of any circumstances under which such an article could have passed into your body?"

"No."

However, the X-ray is incapable of a lie, and the plates clearly showed that a long needle, a hat-pin, at any rate an article quite foreign to the human anatomy, was lodged in the man' back close to the liver. A simple operation was performed, and a thin needle-like quill was extracted, the cause of all the trouble. It was shown to the patient, who examined it closely and whistled his astonishment.

"Twelve years ago, I was out hunting," he explained, "and I fell on a porcupine. I got a prick in the back, I remember, but thought no more about it.....And I've had that quill sticking in me ever since."...Phew! And I let him get away."

Not Bright Light

It is commonly believed that the X-ray is a super-dazzling light that penetrates through and photographs the human body, bones and all by the very strength of its brilliancy. As a matter of fact, it is practically invisible, and when it is operated in a dark room the grey-greenish ray is so dull that it resembles colored darkness rather than light. The X-ray really takes pictures of shadows; the density of up to the shadow depends on the atomic weight of the substance photographed. Bone, being of a higher atomic weight than flesh, casts a stronger shadow; steel, being of a still higher atomic weight, throws a denser shadow than bone. A Rontgen shadowgraph of a human hand with a needle embedded in it, will show the bones standing out distinct from the flesh, and the needle distinct from the bones. Buttermilk with sulphate of barium—the latter of high atomic weight—is given to a patient at the General prior to an X-ray examination of the stomach. The intestines, when this compound is passing through them, cast a dense shadow, and any foreign growth, such as cancer or an ulcer, stands out in relief on the photograph and is readily located.

10,000 Pictures Last Year

In the special X-ray department of the Montreal General Hospital, three of these wonderful instruments are kept busy every day. Last year 10,000 plates were used, and in the first month of 1917 over 1,000 shadowgraphs were taken. The plates are carefully filed away and kept for reference for ten years. A special index file lies on the principal surgeon's desk, and by which all the plates on any particular subject, a fracture or disease, can be turned up at a moment's notice.

In the ante-room is to be seen a gallery of shadowgraphs of some of the most notable cases dealt with at the General. Pictures of shrapnel and machine gun bullets and fragments of shell, locked in every part of the human body, also find their place here, where soldiers were X-rayed in order that these all too practical relics of the war might be properly located, and extracted if practicable.

SIGN OF HIGH LIVING
(Hamilton Spectator)

A gain of 23,000 pleasure cars in Canada, and notably in Ontario, during 1916, is an inkling how the national plea for economy is being lived up to.

A FEW WORDS FOR BRYAN

Ex-Judge Speaks His Mind to Former Secretary

Ex-Judge Alton B. Parker has sent this telegram to William Jennings Bryan:

"If you and your friends, Senator La Follette and your joint followers and sympathizers, had gone to Heaven three years ago Germany would not have attempted to drive the United States from the seas or to conspire with other nations to make war on her, for we should by now have been well prepared to defend ourselves, nor would you have had occasion to sneak from Washington upon discovery of the German plot.

"While you can never undo the mischief you have planned, yet if you act quickly you may be able to persuade those now ambitious to become the Benedict Arnolds of the Congress to end the shameful scene now being enacted."

PAYS $3,000 FOR OLD MANUSCRIPT

ALEXANDRIA BAY, N. Y., March 8 —The sale of a very valuable book was recently made by Frank Donohue to Dr. C. B. Forsythe which is of more than passing interest to bibliographers.

The book is by Robert Fulton, the inventor of the steamboat, and is absolutely unique. It is entirely in manuscript, mostly in Fulton's own hand-writing and is profusely illustrated by designs made by Fulton. It is a large volume and is dated 1811.

It was formerly in the possession of Judge Ogden, the famous jurist, after whom the city of Ogdensburg is named. It was given by him to the late Judge of Donohue with the remark "Fulton's fame is not great now, but you are a young man and may live to see monuments put up for him and celebrations held in his honor." As a matter of fact Judge Donohue did live to see the Fulton Celebration in New York.

Judge Ogden is said to have refused an offer of $10,000 for the book, but Dr. Forsythe secured it for $3,000.

The Donohues are well known on the St. Lawrence, having owned a beautiful island about a mile below the Bay for many years.

In these days of economy let pa hand his safety razor over to ma to peel potatoes with.

TEN CENT SILK PETTICOAT HAD HALF A MILLION WOMEN ON THE RUN

A fraud that is being perpetrated on the women of the United States has aroused the postal authorities, and they are endeavoring to put a stop to it and arrest the culprits.

Floods of letters are arriving at the Minneapolis post office at the rate of from four to ten thousand a day. The Postal Letter Office in Washington is fairly swamped with the letters.

The Postmaster General has issued the second order to postmasters directing them to withdraw and return all mail addressed to the "National Mail Order Brokerage Exchange" This was the name selected by the perpetrator of this fake scheme under which letters were sent out promising that a $4 and $5 silk petticoat would be furnished in return for ten cents, providing the person remitting each dime would make five copies of the letter and mail them to friends. Of course each of the five friends were to get petticoats if they did the same trick and so it went around.

$30,000 in dimes, representing 85 per cent. of the money thus far mailed, is the coin contribution. The other 15 per cent was sent in the form of postage.

Hundreds of thousands of people are still being defrauded of their dimes, time, and postage, while the postage service is being put to great expense and trouble to search for the senders to return the money.

NOW, ALL TOGETHER, DIG!

Philadelphia Ledger: This spring is destined to see an expansion of the vegetable garden under private cultivation to an unprecedented extent. The man with the hoe instead of being a remote and isolated target of the poet, or the facetious paragrapher, will be domesticated in every suburban household and even in city back yards he will be found engaged in raking a deep, loamy plaint, growing where only the clothes-tree flourished before. It is time for everybody to raise something besides prices. There is no room for the golf links and the garden: there is breeding exercise to be found with the rake as well as with the racket. The market-garden monopolist, keen to see a fancy price on his asparagus artichokes or his Brussels sprouts because Jerusalem and Brussels are involved in the war, will have to abide his exorbitant demands, or home-grown green goods will flaunt their lustrous foliage in his mercenary eyes. Many who never knew it before are finding the joy of life in the outdoor toil that reveals the blissful productivity of Eden.

There's not a pair of legs so thin, there's not a head so thick.
There's not a hand so weak and white,
nor yet a heart so sick.
But it can find some useful job that's waiting to be done,
For the Glory of the Garden glorifieth everyone.

COLLECT ELEVEN TONS

WATERLOO, March 8.—The pupils of the Waterloo Public School collected this afternoon 11 tons of scrap, including iron, waste paper, rubbers, etc, the proceeds being donated to the patriotic and Red Cross fund. The pupils were a half holiday to make the collection, and they entered into the campaign with the greatest of enthusiasm.

FARMERS' DEMONSTRATION

R. B. Wiseman, of Belleville, Ont., announces that special representatives of the Sharples Separator Co. will hold a demonstration of the famous Up-Ward Squeeze Milker and New Suction Feed Cream Separator, in his warerooms, on Saturday, March 10th. Particular attention is called to the Babcock Test, which will be run from 1.30 P.M. to 3 P.M. This is to prove beyond question that the New Suction Feed Separator will skim, clean and give same cream test at any speed from 40 to 60 Rev.; also that no other machine can do it. There will also be exhibited the only milker with adjustable, upward squeeze.

Farmers, whether interested in buying or not, are invited to call. A special supply of Sharples Repairs will be on hand and users of old Sharples Separators are especially invited to call for service. 2 11

The Canadian Army in Action and the ADVANCE OF THE TANKS

OFFICIAL MOVING PICTURE OF
The Battle of Courcelette

Monday and Tuesday, March 12th and 13th. Prices---Matinee and Night---Children 15c; Adults 25c.

"At 6.24 a. m., Sept. 15, We All Went Over the Top."

"I hope that the greatest success will attend the efforts of those who have organized this means of spreading throughout Canada news of the progress of this great war."---The King of England.

"These pictures are official and authentic, vividly and intensely interesting. Everyone should see them."--Sir John Hendrie, Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario

"By far the most interesting war pictures I have seen."--Premier Hearst. "The pictures are not only acceptable but should be of incalculable service to the country as a stimulus to the recruiting movement."--E. J. Chambers, Chief Censor, Ottawa.

An adequate musical setting accompanies the pictures, creating an atmosphere of such an illusion as to permit, in effect, those who watch to take part with their sons and brothers in their glorious charge across the battlefield with the Tanks, and the triumph of their victory that day last September at Courcelette. GRIFFIN'S THEATRE Monday and Tuesday, March 12-13.

A DOUBLE FUNERAL

From Tickell & Sons, undertaking parlors this morning, the funeral of the late Misses Mary and Jennie L. McConaghy who died in Toronto, took place. The remains arrived in Belleville last evening. The bodies were taken to St. Michael's church at 9 a.m. where Rev. Father Hyland conducted a service, which was attended by a number of friends. They were then taken to Belleville cemetery vault, where they will remain until interred in the spring in St. James cemetery. The bearers were Messrs. F. Dolan, J. M. Hurley, F. P. Carney, M. Doyle, W. E. Britton and Wm. Kenney.

RETURNED SOLDIER DIES

The Bancroft Times has the following item in reference to the death of a member of the 80th Battalion who returned home: The death took place in the Peever Settlement on March 5th of Charles H. Reiss, who arrived home only about two weeks ago from overseas. The deceased enlisted in the 80th Battalion and served for over a year in the trenches. He was wounded and appears to have been discharged from the hospital while still in a very weak condition. When he landed at Maynooth it is alleged he could not get anyone to drive him home. He had to walk a distance of seven or eight miles and the effort was too much for him." He contracted a severe cold which developed into pneumonia and caused his death.

In addition to the parents, two sisters, Misses Ella and Mabel are living. To the bereaved will be extended the sincere sympathy of relatives and friends.

BeCareful What You Wash Your Hair With

Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else that contains too much alkali, for this is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is plain mulsified cocoanut oil, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap and beats anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fluffy, looking bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.

NO "SYSTEM"

Of testing the eyes is any better, than the man who uses it...it depend on the man—not much you...No man is infallible, but some get a little closer to it than others. For eye troubles consult ALEXANDER RAY, Belleville's Eye Sight Specialist.

This Simple Rule Soon Strengthens A Delicate Stomach

It really is unnecessary to dose yourself with pepsin pills or artificial digestives or to live on miserable nursery diet. If you will observe one simple rule you can eat the hearty, nourishing foods that your appetite craves and your body needs. That rule is to take a teaspoonful of Bisurated Magnesia in a half glass of hot water with each meal. Bisurated Magnesia is non-laxative and harmless and possesses medicinal qualities that promptly overcome impaired digestion, fermentation, acidity, catarrhal conditions of the stomach, gas, distress after eating and other stomach disorders. As magnesia is prepared in various ways be certain to insist on obtaining it in the Bisurated form, especially recommended for stomach purposes. Sold by all druggists.

CONCERT AND SOCIAL A DECIDED SUCCESS

Massassaga Red Cross Society Entertain With Excellent Financial Results

The Red Cross concert and social Massassaga Thursday evening, proved a rousing success. Among the interesting items of the programme arranged for the occasion, was the presentation by the Massassaga Red Cross Society, by Mr. W. H. Mabee, of Belleville, of one hundred good cloth bound books to be sold for patriotic purposes.

Mr. Arthur Jones, manager of Molson's Bank, gave an interesting talk, and also officiated as auctioneer for the sale of books, the proceeds of which were $33.60.

Miss Winnifred Pearce of Belleville, rendered several solos in excellent voice, and Miss Rae Farrell of Belleville, recited to the great pleasure of all present. As an evidence of her influence in recitations, Miss Farrell has been instrumental in lead-

STOMACH WAS VERY BAD MUCH DIZZINESS AND PAIN

The Liver Got Out of Order and the Whole System Was Poisoned

Ottawa, Ont., March 9—When the course of the food through the alimentary canal is impeded by sluggish action of the liver, it bowels become constipated, and as a result it ferments.

The liver struggles to remove the poisons from the blood, becomes enlarged, and finally fails, allowing the poisons to pass on to every part of the human system. Complications arise, and there is Bright's disease, hardening of the arteries and apoplexy.

The earlier derangements of the digestive organs such as are described by this letter from Mr. Rochon. He also points the way to cure by use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

Mr. Louis Rochon, R. R. No. 11, Ottawa, Ont., writes: "For about seven months my stomach was very bad. I was troubled with dizziness, and had gas on the stomach and awful pains in the right side. The liver seemed to be out of order, so I began using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. This treatment seemed to be exactly what I needed, and before the first box was all used I was cured and feeling as well as ever. I also used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food when feeling weak and suffering from nervous headache, and was soon restored to good health. I am proud of Dr. Chase's medicines, and recommend them above any doctor's medicines."

Military News

All the officers of the 254th Battalion were in the city yesterday for the purpose of attending the meeting in the Armouries last night.

Instructions have been received by the 254th from Headquarters, Kingston, to make personal canvas of the men in the battalion's recruiting territory, who are A 1 men, under the National Service, men between the ages of 18 and 30, unmarried and who have no dependents. A report will be made to Kingston, by the 254th, stating the excuses given by those men who will be unwilling to enlist when interviewed.

Several changes have been made, by the transferring of officers in the various recruiting centres of the 254th Battalion. The following officers have been transferred: Capt. Monck from Napanee to Bancroft; Major McCullough from Bancroft to Picton; Capt. Ingram from Picton to Napanee; Lieut. Bongard from Wellington to Tweed; Capt. Wallace from Tweed to Campbellford; Lieut. Denyes from Belleville to Wellington; Lieut. Sims from Maynooth to Millbridge.

A patriotic meeting is to be held in Demorestville to-night. The 254th Band will be present and Capt. Sanford and Lieut. Leaveus of the 254th Battalion will speak.

About 500 school children witnessed the presentation of the Canada in Khaki film at Griffin's Yesterday afternoon. During the performance the children sang several patriotic songs, and showed their hearty approval of the pictures in a general way.

Capt. Hyman of the 254th proceeded to Kingston on duty to-day.

Extended order drill was commenced by the local detachment of the 254th Battalion to-day.

Divine service will be held by the 254th Battalion in the Armouries on Sunday morning at 10.30. The members of the general public are cordially invited to attend this service.

Major Ferguson and Capt. Carman of the 254th Battalion, will be present this evening at a Patriotic meeting to be held in Madoc.

WHY YOU SHOULD USE M.S.C. SHAMPOO

It maintains healthy hair, corrects unnatural scalp conditions, and assists nature in restoring normal, healthy conditions, by cleansing and renewing the hair-growing processes.

UNHEALTHY HAIR NEEDS ATTENTION, and any disorder of the scalp or falling hair will grow worse by neglect.

M. & C. SHAMPOO contains pure Cocoanut Oil and other hair health ingredients, which by constant use will keep the scalp and hair in perfect condition.

Being in LIQUID form, it is easy to apply: You simply wet the head thoroughly in Hot water, then apply about two tablespoonfuls, which will instantly work up oceans of lather that will thoroughly cleanse the scalp, and after thorough rinsing will leave the hair beautifully soft.

Buy a bottle from your dealer and follow directions carefully, and you, like thousands of others, will be convinced of our claims.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH WEST LAND REGULATIONS.

The sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. Application must be made in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the district. Entry by proxy may be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (but not Sub-Agency) on certain conditions by the father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of an intending homesteader.

Duties—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required except where residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Must reside upon the homestead three years after earning homestead patent and cultivate fifty acres. Pre-emption patent may be obtained as soon as homestead patent, on certain conditions.

A settler who has exhausted his homestead right may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.00.

The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land. Live stock may be substituted for cultivation under certain conditions.

THREE BROTHERS DIE WITHIN SIX DAYS

In the little Anglican cemetery at L'Amable, Hastings County, on Thursday last, the remains of the late Geo. and Edward Bartlett were laid away side by side. The latter was a charter member of Bancroft Lodge, A.F. & A.M.

A most remarkable coincidence was the death of the three Bartlett brothers within six days, George died on Saturday, February 24, Edward on Monday night, and Chas. on Thursday. George and Chas. lived at Beamsville, but formerly resided in Montague. The two first-named were 75 and 73 years of age respectively and the latter about 62.

Monster Trawler Fleet Gets Subs

Great Britain's Coast is Guarded as Never Before in History of Empire

NEW YORK, March 8.—The New York Times prints the following: A monster fleet of 500 trawlers from Grimsby, Hull, Leith, Yarmouth, Lowestoft and other North Sea fishing ports, aided by fast destroyers and patrol boats, is guarding the mouth of the English Channel and Irish Sea with many devices for catching and destroying submarines, according to one of the first cabin passengers of the Cunarder Carmania, which arrived here to-day from Liverpool.

The passenger said that when he was at Devonport dockyard on February 21 one of the Admiralty officials informed him that the German navy was credited with having 100 submarines of all sizes, from the old type of submersible, 90 feet long, which operated from Zeebrugge, Belgium, to the large, ocean-going boats, ranging from 136 to 200 feet long. The result of the defensive move on the part of the Britishers was that the mosquito fleet had destroyed or captured forty-eight by February 16, which caused the big decrease in the number of vessels torpedoed after that date.

Very few of the submarines were captured and brought into port, it was said, as it was too much trouble to raise them. A few were taken on the surface after they had been disabled by a bomb from an airplane. The others were destroyed by bombs from the trawlers, after they had been entangled in the vast nets. THCH

AN OLD TIME FARM

And the Methods That Were in Use in the Year 1840.

DAYS OF THE SIMPLE LIFE.

When All Kinds of Clothing Were Made at Home, When Eggs Sold For a Shilling a Dozen and the High Cost of Living Was Not a Big Problem.

In view of the modern day high cost of living and of the many wonderful changes that have been made in the century—the railroad, telegraph, the ocean cable, the telephone, the automobile and farm and labor saving machinery of all kinds and the amazing changes these inventions have necessarily brought in all directions in almost every walk of life—it may be of interest to recall living conditions on a farm in the year 1840.

The farm I have in mind consisted of 200 acres. The stock was fifteen cows, a yoke of oxen, twenty sheep, an old white horse, a dozen pigs, fifty hens, ten geese, a few ducks and a flock of turkeys.

The farm produced practically everything the family consumed, both clothing and food. The sheep furnished the wool, which was carded at a "rolling" mill and made into rolls for spinning.

At home it was spun into yarn and woven on a hand loom. For beds it was left white; for clothing it was dyed any color desired. A competent housewife could make dyes of logwood, indigo or cochineal. The white and black wool were mixed to produce a gray like the Confederate uniform.

There were no ready made clothes; all clothes were made in the home. There was no woven underwear, Stockings were knitted at home as well as mittens and tippets. Caps with earlaps were of rabbit skin. There was no shoes. In the winter boots came up to the knee.

Several cows were killed each year. There was a tannery near by, where the skins were tanned. A shoemaker made our boots. They were usually too small and gave much trouble and pain.

The day, cut and laid down until the finer luxuries of the family part, was put through a heckle worked by hand and then spun and woven. This strong linen cloth was used for summer clothing, towels, etc. The seed was saved to make flax-seed tea (a medicine) or poultice for bruises.

For food we had everything needed—fresh meat, poultry, beef, cabbages, parsnips, pumpkins for pies, apples, which lasted from fall to spring; cider, which gave us vinegar or produced a cider champagne.

Half a dozen pigs killed in the fall gave us plenty of ham and bacon, lard, sausages and salt pork. The hams and bacon were hung up in the smokehouse, a small building with no opening except the door. A small fire produced more smoke than heat, but gave the hams and bacon a very delicious flavor.

There were plenty of chickens for roasting and pot pies and eggs, turkeys for the Thanksgiving and Christmas occasions, a roast goose with apple sauce.

From the cream the milk was made into butter and cheese. What butter and cheese the family did not consume was sold in a nearby village. Butter usually brought 12½ cents a pound. Cheese was also made at home, as there were neither creameries nor cheese factories. Cheese was sold at 5 to 6 cents a pound. All eggs not used went to the village store and brought 10 cents to 12 cents a dozen.

Every farmer made his own soap. It was called soft soap. "It was soft, but very strong, and took the dirt off your hands and face very thoroughly and some skin also unless you were careful in your ablutions.

Little was heard of the world at large. Twenty miles from the railroad the great four horse stagecoach came every day, bringing the mails. There were few newspapers or magazines. The telegraph was unknown. The Atlantic cable did not succeed until 1866. There were only twenty-three miles of railroad in 1830.

All the wonderful agencies which have added to the power of man to the last century will not be lost, but will be added to constantly. The many problems of the modern day high cost of living can only be solved by time and the efforts of our greatest minds.—Warner Miller.

New Indigo is Produced.

A primitive but effective method of obtaining indigo in southern India is practiced by the natives. The plant is tightly packed the day it is cut, in a large vat, into which water is run. Wood boards are then placed over the top and are kept in position by heavy stonebeams. The plant is allowed to soak for ten or twelve hours, during which time a heavy fermentation takes place. The liquid is then drained off into another vat, after which comes best and stir the soaked mass thoroughly with flails until the dye begins to emerge. The whole is then allowed to settle. The clear liquid is drained off and the residue is boiled in copper vessels. It is then pressed into hard cakes ready for the market.

A Cool Soldier.

A French grenadier who was exasperated at some injustice that had been done him by a field marshal drew his pistol from his belt and even pulled the trigger, but it did not go off. Almost speechless with rage he turned and cried, "Four days in the cells for keeping your arms in a bad state!"

Puzzled Over Plot "Leak"

Germany Alleges Treason — No Steps With Mexico Until War With U. S. is Declared

BERLIN, March 8—The Overseas News Agency today made public the following official statement concerning Germany's plan to have Mexico engage in war with the United States if the United States should not remain neutral after the declaration of unrestricted submarine warfare by Germany:

"The decision to begin the unrestricted submarine war, February 1, having been taken, an eventful conflict with America had to be considered by reason of the previous attitude. The facts have proven that the surmise was justified, for the American Government, immediately after our notification concerning the barred zone, broke off diplomatic relations, and, moreover, requested other neutral powers to join in this course of action. In anticipation of this possibility it was not only the right, but also the duty of the Government to take measures in time to counter balance the lotting of an additional ally on the side of our enemies.

"The imperial Minister of Mexico was therefore instructed about the middle of January to offer an alliance to the Mexican Government, and to arrange the details, in case that the United States should declare war against us. The minister was expressly charged by instruction to take no steps with the Mexican Government, before he had obtained the absolute certainty that war had been declared by the United States.

"It is not known by what means the American Government acquired knowledge of the instructions, transmitted by secret ways to Mexico. It seems that treason—and treason it probably is—has been committed on American territory."

SALARIES PAID TO CITY OFFICIALS INVESTIGATED

No Reductions Made, But One Slightly Increased — Recommended That Stenographer be Engaged For City Work — Discussion at Times Rather Heated — Comparison of Salaries Paid in Other Cities Objected to

At a recent meeting of the City Council, Ald. Robinson made a motion that a Special Committee of the Council be appointed to consider the question of salaries paid to all officials in the various departments of the city's management. This committee was composed of the whole Council, and last evening it met and thrashed the matter out. The result was that the matter had been debated at considerable length, that all the present officials were retained at the salaries they are receiving, and in one instance an increase was made, namely, to Mr. John Colden, superintendent of the water works department. It was also decided to engage a stenographer to write letters, etc., for the various officials of the city, at times the discussion waxed somewhat warm, and the remark Mayor Ketcheson showed that in a number of places in Ontario, with a population not much larger than Belleville, larger salaries were paid than is paid in this city for the same work performed. Ald. Robinson, the promoter of the Special Committee, objected to the comparisons being used or published, as he alleged it had nothing to do with Belleville, what other places paid.

Mayor Ketcheson presided over the meeting, and the Aldermen were all present, namely, Woodley, Smith, Platt, Macpherson, Parks, St. Charles, Wasden and Robinson.

The salary of every official was considered separately.

CITY TREASURER

Ald. Robinson drew the first item on the list "as the City Treasurer. The citizens generally are against the increase made to certain city officials. If a man gets paid for his work, that is all that is necessary. What services does the City Treasurer render to secure $100 from the Gas Department?

Ald. Woodley—He handles the money for the Gas Department and signs cheques.

Ald. Robinson—I believe we can save $100 by having the gas manager sign the cheques.

Mayor Ketcheson—Owen Sound with 1,000 less population than Belleville, gets $1,000 salary, as City Treasurer, and $300 for other utility work.

Ald. Robinson—The salaries paid in other places is no criterion for Belleville.

Mayor Ketcheson—Thrash this matter out, and then, as all the members of the Council were elected by acclamation, resign our positions and go back to the city and see who will be elected to-day. I am willing to do this.

Ald. Robinson—I will not do anything of the kind.

Ald. Platt—I asked Ald. Robinson as Chairman of the Gas Committee, what the revenue from the Gas Department was?

Ald. Robinson—I don't know.

Ald. Deacon—You should know, as chairman, and not be ignorant of the matter. It stood $20,000.

Ald. Robinson—If we take off $100 from the Treasurer, for what he does for the Gas Department, he would then be getting a nice, neat salary.

Ald. Deacon—The Treasurer is held responsible for the funds of the Gas Department, and under the law held responsible. He keeps a separate bank book.

Ald. Robinson—If there is any law in regard to this matter, we can pass it subject to any law. The Manager of the Gas Department keeps all the accounts.

Ald. Marshall—The City Treasurer has to make provision for the sinking fund, and keeps track of it and other matters in connection with the water works department. He moved that the $100 be continued to be paid to the City Treasurer from the Gas Department, and that his salary of $1,200 be confirmed.

Ald. Robinson—If this is passed I will enquire into the matter. I want to save money for the city and the taxpayer. I do not think the city has an honest City Treasurer, and he has looked faithfully after the city's interest, but he is well paid for it.

Upon a vote being taken the present salary paid the Treasurer, was retained. Ald. Robinson, Parks and Platt voted for a reduction of $100.

THE CLERKSHIP

Ald. Robinson—I have a proposition that the position of the City Clerk and City Solicitor be amalgamated, and that official's salary to be $1,350. This to include fees for all litigation the city may have, and the employment of a stenographer.

Mayor Ketcheson—Have you got the man to do the work?

Ald. Robinson—No. But he can be secured.

Ald. Woodley asked Ald. Robinson if he could get a man who would be Solicitor, City Clerk and furnish a stenographer at $1,350.

Ald. Robinson—There are 300 people in the city, who would accept the position at the salary the City Clerk is getting. We could advertise for applicants for the position, and stipulate the salary at $1,350.

Ald. Platt—Why not have a Clerk separate, and engage a Solicitor when necessary?

Ald. Robinson—If we have a lawyer as Clerk, we will get our legal advice free.

Mayor Ketcheson—The Tax Collector, City Clerk and other city officials have to consult the Solicitor on matters appertaining to the city's welfare. Ald. Platt "the city loss money when we had these offices combined."

Ald. Robinson—I do not think so.

Ald. Deacon—If we are going to employ an official for these duties, we will have to pay some salary.

Ald. Whalen—When Mr. Mikel was Clerk and Solicitor, was he not employed as Solicitor for the C.N.R.

Ald. Deacon moved that the salary of the City Clerk remain as at present, and the same official be retained.

This motion prevailed, Ald. Parks, Platt and Robinson, voting against it.

TAX COLLECTOR

Ald. Robinson—I have nothing to say about the Tax Collector.

A motion prevailed that the salary of the Tax Collector remain as at present, namely $1,300.

ASSESSOR

Ald. Robinson—I will not move to interfere with him.

A motion prevailed that the salary remain as at present, namely, $1,000.

CITY AUDITOR

Ald. Robinson—Citizens generally are against the engaging of a permanent auditor.

Mayor Ketcheson—It was necessary to have a permanent auditor, and he is doing good work.

A motion prevailed that the Audi-

GREAT WIRELESS PLANT LINKS MEXICO CITY WITH GERMANY

An Investigation is Ordered by Washington—Grave Danger to American Interests is Seen

WASHINGTON, March 9.—Information has reached the Government from a semi-official source that through the perfection of a powerful wireless telegraph plant in Mexico City, direct communication between the Mexican capital and Germany has been established.

Officials realize that if confirmed, the news is of great importance, and an investigation has been ordered. Through connection by Mexico City with the land telegraphs leading into the United States, Germany would be able to secure complete exemption from the censorship which now is imposed upon its communications by the American Government at the wireless stations at Sayville and Tuckerton, and by the British and French Governments in their control of the Atlantic cables.

Far-reaching possibilities thus would be opened for the violation of American neutrality or even the menacing of the national safety in the critical situation existing. Sea raiders and submarines might be directed, and full information concerning the departure of ships from American ports furnished. German agents in this country might keep in close touch with affairs, and in case of war even more serious results might follow.

From other semi-official sources information has reached Washington that secret meetings are being held by Germans in Vera Cruz and in Monterey to determine upon uniform action by Germans in Mexico in the event of an outbreak of war between the United States and Germany.

SHIP BUILDING IN CANADA

Large Constructive Industries With a View to Furnishing Steel Ships for British Government

Special To The Intelligencer.

MONTREAL, March 10.—An extensive programme of ship building for the British Government in Canada is in contemplation, announces a London cable to the Montreal Star.

If plans, which are now in view, are carried out successfully, existing shipyards in Canada may all be utilized for the construction of steel steamers of large carrying capacity, while new industries along the same line will be established on a large scale if it is learned that the British Government is utilizing the resources of Canada in this way, acting through the Imperial Munitions Board; and there is reason to believe that with available resources of raw material there may be developing industry equalling in extent the vast enterprises of the Munitions business.

READY FOR LOAN ISSUE

Fourteen Tons of Documents Prepared

OTTAWA, March 9.—Sir Thomas White and the officials of the Finance Department have everything ready for the launching of the third Canadian war loan on Monday next. The announcement giving the details of the loan will not be made until then.

A great deal of preliminary work has been necessary on the part of the Department of Finance and the King's printer. Stereotypes will be in the hands of the press throughout Canada. Application forms and prospectuses to the number of a million and a half will be sent to the 3,500 branch banks throughout Canada and the offices of the assistant receivers-general. The weight of these documents is about fourteen tons. The work of financial arrangements has been completed by the Minister and the whole Dominion will be covered thoroughly. The prospects for the success of the issue, which will be of a most attractive character, is believed to be excellent

FRENCH PUSH GERMANS BACK

Hold all Ground Captured, Penetrate Enemy Positions and Take Prisoners

Special To The Intelligencer.

PARIS, March 10.—Violent fighting occurred last night on the Verdun front in consequence of a German attempt to recapture ground won by French between Haute Jumenil and Maisons de Champagne. Today's official statement says that after several desperate charges had been made with infantry advances and retreats, the French succeeded in holding all they had gained and in making fresh progress.

On the Verdun front the Germans attacked trenches recaptured by the French north of Cauriere Woods. They penetrated these positions at some points, but were ejected by counter attacks. For this reason no mention is made of advances and retreats, the French succeeded in holding all they had gained and in making fresh progress.

On the Verdun front the Germans attacked trenches recaptured by the French north of Cauriere Woods. They penetrated these positions at some points, but were ejected by counter attacks. For this reason counted their raids, penetrating German positions east of Armapcourt as far as the third trenches, and taking prisoners near Crony, northwest of Soissons.

President Orders Vessels Armed

Calls an Extra Session of Congress For The 16th of April

WASHINGTON, March 10—Special—President Wilson from a sick bed today ordered the arming of American merchant ships against Germany's ruthless submarine warfare, and at the same time issued a proclamation calling the extra session of Congress to meet April 16.

The President's decision came suddenly late this afternoon, following the action of the senate yesterday in revising the rules to permit prompt action of important questions, and the receipt of formal explosion by Secretary of State Lansing and Attorney-General Gregory that he has the power to arm merchantmen without action by Congress.

Dominion Has Grown Busy Building Ships

The Shortage of Ocean Tonnage Results in Increased Activity

OTTAWA, March 9—Shortage of ocean tonnage and consequent high charter rates have resulted in increased activity in shipyards in Canada with a probability of still greater activity in the near future. Reports so far received here indicate that more than one hundred vessels ranging in size from 250 tons to 6,000 tons are now under construction. Applications for yards are the majority and most of them are being built on the coast of western Nova Scotia. Next to Nova Scotia, the greatest activity in the Maritime Provinces which had been idle since steamer replaced sail have now ships on the stocks.

Two yards at Toronto, those of the Polson and Thor Companies, are reported to be building steel steamers and there is activity in shipyards at Port Arthur and on the Pacific coast. Norwegian capital is said to be interested in steamers now in course of construction.

He was feeling dead in his room by one of the hotel employees on Thursday morning.

OPPOSED TO COMPULSION

Labor Congress Head Notifies Sir George Foster

OTTAWA, March 2.—The unalterable opposition of organized labor in Canada to compulsion in any form for military service is voiced in a letter sent to the Acting Premier, Sir George Foster, by J. C. Watters, President of the Dominion Trades and Labor Congress, following the address of Captain, the Rev. Mr. Hindley in Winnipeg recently.

"The declared policy of our congress is for voluntary enlistment to the compulsory service," Mr. Watters wrote, "hence our opposition to the Militia Act bein gput into effect."

Sir George Foster replied that Captain Hindley had no authority from the Government to make the statements he was reported to have made.

AMPUTATED ARM WAS PUT BACK AGAIN

Amazing Operation on Soldier Reported to be Successful

LONDON, March 9.—A son of the Hon. J. O'Grady, a member of Parliament, was wounded several months ago in France in such a manner that his arm had to be amputated. The surgeons left the arm, severed the shattered bone, and then put the arm back again, setting the bone and sewing the tendons.

The arm has now healed, and is gaining strength. The patient can use it effectively. The only defect is that it is two inches shorter than the other arm.

DETROIT ELEVATOR BURNED

Wheat for Export Lost in Million Dollar Fire

DETROIT, March 9.—A spectacular fire caused, it is believed, by spontaneous combustion, to-day destroyed the grain elevator of the Detroit Railroad Elevator Company, Adjoining buildings and valuable railroad property also were damaged. The total loss has been estimated at more than $1,000,000.

The elevator, a sheet iron building, forty years old, contained more than 300,000 bushels of grain, mostly wheat. The fire started during the noon lunch hour when all but two or three employes had left the building. Less than an hour after the blaze was discovered the building collapsed. No one was injured.

WORK OF FRENCH PEASANTS KNOCKS HUN SUB CAMPAIGN

A Canadian Correspondent Nears The Battle Line and Inspects France's Idea of Production

PARIS, March 9.—So far as foodstuffs is concerned France smiles at the submarine blockade. The strain of the war has prevented the cultivation of the land even here in the north.

In a motor-run along the coast toward the Canadian field headquarters a remarkable proportion of tilled soil is seen, whereas in the English Midlands fully one-third above the railways is devoted to grazing. Here I note the landscape has the brown of the plowed field.

The work of farming is largely done by old men and women, with facilities lessened through the use of the farms for billeting men and the lines of communication and the use of the roads to bring up munitions supplies only. The wonderful industry of the French peasant enables the work of food production to go on under these difficult conditions.

The forward movement, to which the British press makes frequent reference depends to a marked degree on the drying up of the roads. The winter here has been almost unprecedentedly severe, and the frost which was deep in the ground is coming out slowly. The strain on the road system will be lessened when the railway construction behind the British front is finished. Roads are added to the force employed in the up-keep and extension of the light railways.

Meanwhile the clean-up along the Ancre continues, having already restored to France more of her soil than any more since the battle of the Marne. The Canadian front trench raids are frequent, and these keep our men keyed up for the big show.

PREMIER BORDEN REVIEWS CANADIAN TROOPS IN PARIS

Famous First Brigade Marched Past Canadian Officials, With Whom Was Arthur of Connaught—Ontario Bugle Band Plays "Jingle Bells"—New Contrivance For Comfort of Soldiers

Special to The Intelligencer.

LONDON, March 10—Stewart Lyons—In honor of Sir Robert Borden's late visit to the front took place in 1915, when Canadians had Ypres under conditions that made their exploit history, a review took place at the Canadian Headquarters in France, Friday morning. The famous first brigade of the original division marched past the Premier and party, which included Prince Arthur of Connaught and Rogers and Hazen. Relatively few of the men were at Ypres, but reinforcements maintain the glorious traditions when occasion serves. Since the Somme battle the Canadians have been treated with the greatest respect by the enemy, and their losses have been relatively light. The men reviewed were splendidly fit, and the entire corps is in similar condition, and look forward confidently to the end of the present inactive period.

The party visited part of the front and obtained a general idea of the configuration of the ground held by the Canadians and gained a view of the German lines. Watchful snipers, however, ever ready to prevent the enemy from observing any unusual movement of the troops or from learning where to plant an admonitory shell.

During the march past the bugle band of the Ontario battalion played "Jingle Bells," which cold weather rendered appropriate. A recent invention added greatly to the comfort of the soldiers is the "Nissen Hut." It is semi-circular, and looks like a genuine piece of corrugated iron half buried in the earth, with doors and windows at the end. Each holds twenty-five men, and one thousand have been ordered. They are easily transported, and swiftly erected, which means sleep under cover for many, who would otherwise litter down under the sky. Already Tommie in My little Nissen Bed," has become a popular song.

Tennyson Smith Slams Montreal

Worst Place in The World For Immorality

TORONTO, March 9—At the temperance convention yesterday there was a lively exchange over the following words, contained in a resolution: "The permission of gambling and permitting social vices" in Britain. Mr. Joseph Gibson, honorary president, drew attention to the loose wording, claiming that it might be interpreted that the British Government sanctioned immorality. Mrs. Thompson had stated that in this respect, Canada was outraged by the treatment of her soldiers.

Rev. E. Tennyson Smith, widely known as a British temperance worker was indignant, declaring that Canada's soldiers would find no more temptation in the Old Country than in their own. It was not true that the British Government favored immorality. He spoke from experience of ten months in the camps. "You cannot," he said, "find a worse place in the world than Montreal." After further discussion it was decided to delete the word "permission" and substitute "existence."

ONTARIO'S GIFT LARGE

One-Third of Empire the Total on Trafalgar Day

OTTAWA, March 8—Ontario contributed one-third of the total amount subscribed by the whole Empire to the British Red Cross collections taken up in Great Britain and throughout all the overseas Dominions on Trafalgar day, October 21, last.

A statement of anuary, 17 issued in London shows the total receipts at that date to be £1,099,811; of this amount £713,474 was from the overseas Dominions, and half the overseas contributions came from Ontario. At that date Australia had contributed £300,000, but this has been increased to £347,225 by a further remittance on February 1, thus bringing her contribution to practically one-third of the sum subscribed by the whole Empire. Other Canadian Provinces have contributed as follows:

Nova Scotia	$16,339
Saskatchewan	14,681
New Brunswick	1,000
British Columbia	8,130
Yukon Territory	61

There were no contributions on that date from Quebec.

The Giants Are Considered Best

The Club Which Beats Mc Graw's Rustlers Will Win Pennant

News from the south of baseball practice is hot, blistering weather is music to the ears of the baseball fans of New York. With all the clubs at their training camps preparing for the season's campaign, speculation has already started about the chances of the various clubs. In another short month the clubs will be back home.

In the National League, there is very reason to believe that the club which beats the Giants will win the pennant, says The Times. Just what club will be able to accomplish this feat is a mystery. Brooklyn is not expected to be able to repeat last year's extraordinary occurrence. Brooklyn, by the way, is the only one of the Major League clubs which has kept of its best players outside the ranks. Zack Wheat and Ed Pfeffer are still hanging out.

With the addition of much promising new material, the Giants should be even stronger this year than last. There will be trouble, however, from the Boston and Brooklyn clubs because of their strong pitching staffs. Philadelphia will be shelved by the Giants for the same reason, but none of the western clubs look formidable enough to cause the Giants serious difficulty. As a batting and batting combination, it is doubtful if the New York Club has an equal.

GOD SAVE THE KING

During this course of Lectures Mr. Tennyson Smith will give his thrilling impersonation—"An Interview with the Drink Fiend," and his famous Realistic Representation of a "Tug of War" between the Prohibition Party and the Liquor Traffic. He will also produce a number of share lists of Brewery and Distillery Companies and make some startling revelations, showing the corrupting influence of the traffic in public life.

LETTERS FROM OVERSEAS

FROM SGT.-MAJOR J. H. BRADLEY

France, 10, 2, 17

Mrs. Howard G. Huff,
Rossmore, Ont.

Dear Madam:

Received box O.K. with socks, yesterday and they could not have reached me at a more opportune time for the boys have to change every day in order to prevent trench feet and as the weather is so cold we cannot have too many socks. It has been very much like Canada here this winter and sometimes it makes one wish to be at home in the good old land of the Maple. Kindly accept my sincere thanks and extend them to the Rossmore and Massanagga Red Cross for the Canadian boys with me at present.

I remain,

Yours sincerely

Sgt. Major J. H. BRADLEY,
2nd Canadian Infantry Battalion.

P.S.—Thank Miss C. B. Simonds for the pair I am wearing and tell her they are just the thing.

NEVER KISSED A GIRL

27 Princetown Seniors—41 Consider It Morally Wrong

PRINCETON, N.J., March 9—The annual statistics of the senior class have recently been published and disclose some interesting facts about the university and the members of the class.

In reply to the question what Princetown needed most undergraduates gives it the following order: Endowment, better paid professors, a football championship, a hockey rink and the restoration of the hazing of freshmen.

Probably, a broader viewpoint and experiences were the most voiced the things gained from the college career. The majority of the seniors admit kissing a girl, but seventy-seven men have never done so and fourteen feel that it is morally wrong to kiss.

Prof. McClellan, one time Mayor of New York, and now professor of European economics here, was voted the favorite professor, Booth Tarkington was declared to be the best fiction writer. He is a Princetown graduate.

Elsie Ferguson is first in the hearts of the seniors as an actress and Douglas Fairbanks is acclaimed the best actor.

SALARIES PAID TO CITY OFFICIALS INVESTIGATED

for be retained, at a salary of $90 per month.

CITY SOLICITOR

Ald. Robinson moved that in future the Solicitor's work be done by fees. Why should we pay a retaining fee? I do not think it is necessary.

Mayor Ketcheson—We want a Solicitor who is retained by the city, and who will not take cases against the city.

Ald. Woodley said he was not altogether in favor of the City Solicitor.

Mayor Ketcheson—There is no conflict of interests.

Ald. Platt—What if there was a suit from the county against the city?

Mayor Ketcheson—I do not think Mr. Mason would act against the city.

Ald. Parks—What about the G. T. round house matter? That building was taken out of the city, it was shown that Mr. Marson was not City Solicitor at that time.

Ald. Marshall—If the Mayor and city official consults the Solicitor frequently, and he is paid by fees, it would amount to a large sum.

Ald. Parks—If a chairman of committee wants to consult the Solicitor, he should be when the Council says an.

Ald. Whalen—The Chairman of a committee or any city official cannot always wait for a Council meeting if he wants to consult the Solicitor.

Ald. Robinson—I never saw Mr. Mikel do anything against the city in the matter of the city and the C. N. R.

Ald. Whalen—Was not Mr. Mikel the Solicitor for the C.N.R. when he was City Solicitor?

Ald. Robinson—He did pass some titles.

Mayor Ketcheson—We have got to have a City Solicitor, and the question is how is he to be paid?

Ald. Robinson—Mr. Mason would have the privilege of applying for the amalgamated office, if the position is open for competition.

Ald. St. Charles—Give the Solicitor a retaining fee.

Ald. Platt moved that a retainind fee of $100 be paid the Solicitor, and also that he be paid by fees for his work, and that the Bylaw appointing him be rescinded. We can try this.

Ald. Marshall—This will be an expensive task.

Ald. Deacon suggested that a Special Committee be named to look into this matter and report. He felt confident the city would be paying more than it pays now, if the fee system was adopted.

Ald. Platt—What do we get as a retainind fee.

Mayor Ketcheson—He will be the City Solicitor, and can be consulted at any time.

Ald. Robinson moved in-amendment that the Solicitor's fee remain as at present, namely, $500 per annum.

Ald. Platt withdrew his motion, and the amendment prevailed.

STREET SUPERINTENDENT

As there was no objection raised as to the salary or official, this was confirmed, and the salary of $1,080 per year was allowed to stand.

GAS MANAGER

Ald. Robinson—I do not object to Mr. Gardiner's salary of $1,200 per year, as he is a practical man, and always upon the job.

The salary as paid was confirmed; also the salary of the assistant of the Gas Department at $480.

MEDICAL HEALTH OFFICER

Mayor Ketcheson—The salary paid is only $300, which is less than is paid in many other places.

This salary was not interferred with.

TRUANT OFFICER

Ald. Robinson—Could not Mr. Quincy, who is Bread Inspector, be Truant Officer. What does Mr. Ruston, as agent for the Children's Shelter, get as a salary.

Mayor Ketcheson—The Police Commissioners appoint the truancy officer, Mr. Ruston as Agent for the Children's Shelter, is paid partly by the Society and the Department at Toronto pays so much per month.

Ald. Marshall—Is the inspection of bread being properly carried out?

Ald. Woodley—Is, and Mr. Quincey is a good man, and we might give him some other duties to perform. There were two inspections of bread last week.

Mayor Ketcheson—The truancy officer requires a man who is handling children. The Police Commissioners fix the salary.

Ald. Robinson—Who is Sanitary Inspector?

Mayor Ketcheson—There is none at present. Mr. Arnott resigned the position. Part of his duties were in reference to ascertaining the number of dogs in the city and he did other duties.

It was decided to confirm the salary of the Truant Officer.

Ald. Woodley—Mr. Quincey could do the sanitary inspection of the city.

Ald. Robinson—Recommend to the Board of Health that Mr. Quincey be appointed as Sanitary Inspector.

Ald. Marshall—Could we not combine three offices, namely; Water Inspector, Plumbing and Sanitary Inspector.

Ald. Woodley—A Weed Inspector is needed.

The matter of appointing a Sanitary Inspector, etc., was left in abeyance.

On motion the salary of Mr. J. Harris, as City Messenger ,was confirmed also the salary of $80 to Mr. Robin as Clerk Inspector.

WATER WORKS

The salary of Mr. B. Stafford, as engineer of the Pump House at $840 per year, was confirmed.

The request of Wm. Colden, Engineer, was left in abeyance.

Ald. Woodley moved that the salary of Mr. John Colden, Superintendent be increased from $720 to $780.

After a brief discussion ,Ald. Woodley's motion prevailed.

The matter of appointing a manager for the Water Works Department was left in abeyance for the time being.

POLICE DEPARTMENT

Ald. Robinson—I suppose we cannot do anything in this matter, as it is under the Police Commissioners' jurisdiction. The salary of the Police Magistrate might be considered.

Ald. Deacon—There is not the case before the Police Magistrate that there used to be.

Mayor Ketcheson—It is an Ontario Government appointment, and his salary is fixed by the Government.

Ald. Robinson read an article which was published in The Intelligencer in reference to Kingston proposing to reduce the Police force.

Ald. Woodley—Could we get along with four policemen and the Chief.

Ald. Robinson—It was one of the planks in the temperance people's platform that there would be less work for the police to do when prohibition came into force.

Mayor Ketcheson—Two new men were appointed; Smith and Jarvis, but the latter enlisted. If we had a different fire alarm we could do away with one policemen, but at present one constable must be on duty all the time to answer the alarm of fire.

Ald. Robinson—The time is arriving when we should certainly make a reduction in this Department.

Mayor Ketcheson—The police collect the Pool-room licenses, Dog taxes and other licenses. They do it under City By-Laws.

Ald. Robinson—Could not one man do this work.

Ald. Woodley moved the matter be left over for further consideration.

Mayor Ketcheson—The Commissioners do not want to engage any more policemen than is necessary.

Ald. St. Charles.—Put in an alarm at the Fire halls, and then that will only remedy matters. The city might build a telephone line in the Fire hall for telephone purposes. This would take the fire phone out of the Police Station. Put in a phone at No. 1 and No. 2 Fire Halls.

Ald. Deacon said that Mr. Stock was willing to do this.

This completed the discussion in regard to this matter.

FIRE DEPARTMENT

The following report from a Special Committee of the Council was considered clause by clause:

At present this contract calls for an expenditure of $3050.00 per annum for the use of six (6) horses only—two drivers in the Fire Department assume the duties of looking after the horses.

(1) This committee would recommend that the City purchase at once four (4) horses at a price to be agreed upon.

(2) One (1) fully equipped Motor Fire Truck, 1½ tons capacity with chemical equipment—to cost not more than $3500.00.

(3) We would also recommend that the Auxiliary Firemen be reduced from ten (10) to five (5) men—at an annual saving of $615.00 each.

(4) That the duties of the Fire Chief and Assistant Fire Chief be defined—and embodied in the By-Laws governing them.

The purchase of the horses and Motor Fire Truck will entail a capital expenditure of about $4000.00.

The annual charges for same would be:

Interest 6 per cent.	$240.00
Upkeep of four (4) horses	600.00
Expense of maintaining truck	150.00
Total	$990.00

There will be an annual saving over present contract for horses of $1066.00

Saving in Auxiliary Firemen $325.00

Making a total saving of $1801.00

Ald. Woodley moved that a committee composed of Aldermen St. Charles, Woodley, Whalen and the Street Foreman be a committee to ascertain what four of the present horses used in the Fire Department and equipment can be purchased for and report.—Carried.

Ald. Robinson—The Auxiliary Firemen should never have been appointed since we had a paid force.

Ald. Woodley moved that Ald. St. Charles, Deacon and Whalen be a committee to secure information re a fire motor truck and report at next meeting.—Carried.

Ald. Robinson—I would like to see the insurance rate reduced.

Ald. St. Charles—The present Auxiliary firemen are working and they are docked their wages if they attend fires during the day time.

Ald. Deacon—We have had no check on these men, and some fire stand not to have attended fires.

Ald. Robinson—since we got to have these men?

Ald. St. Charles—Yes. The Underwriters demand it.

Ald. Woodley moved that five Auxiliary firemen be engaged at a salary of $100 per year each, to be selected by the Chief of the Department.

Ald. St. Charles—The men will not accept $75 per year.

Ald. St. Charles—Who will be kept on as Auxiliary firemen?

Ald. Deacon—It is up to the Chief of the Department to select the men.

CLERICAL HELP

A bill presented by the Assessor of $16 for Clerical help, was passed after discussion.

Mayor Ketcheson said he had been urging the City Assessor on in his work so that we can have the rate struck earlier and the first payment of taxes made in July. This would mean a saving of $1,500 in interest to the city. We have to borrow some $100,000 from the bank; and if we can reduce that amount it will mean a great saving. We have been chasing pennies and allow dollar bills to go by.

Ald. Robinson—I cannot see how the city is saving money. There is a time for taxes, but by collecting the taxes 3 months sooner, will it not be taking the money out of the taxpayers who can get more interest for them?

Mayor Ketcheson—Then there is no need of having the taxes collected at an earlier date to save money?

Ald. Robinson—After the 5% is earned then collect the taxes. If you collect the taxes before the proper time the taxpayers is on his money as it is worth 7 per cent. to him where as the city has only to pay 6 per cent.

Mayor Ketcheson—Is the city to borrow money to lend same to citizens?

Ald. Robinson—No, I will discuss that matter in the City Press. Let the people use the money until the 1st of October. It will be a loss to the people. The city borrows money at 6 per cent, whilst the citizens can have the use of their money and receive 7 per cent.

Ald. Deacon—On the 1st of July we will owe the bank $100,000 and should we not commence to pay it back when we can.

CITY ENGINEER

Mayor Ketcheson—We cannot issue our debentures until we have a competent engineer. There are many things in abeyance because the city has no engineer.

This matter was referred to the Council.

At this stage of the proceedings, Aldermen Robinson, Platt and Parks left.

A STENOGRAPHER

After some discussion it was recommended to the Council that a Stenographer be employed for City work and to be under the supervision of the City Clerk.

The Committee adjourned.

Salient Features of Dardanelles Report

Following are some of the outstanding features of the report made by the committee which investigated the circumstances leading up to the unsuccessful attempt of the Dardanelles expedition.

The question of attacking the Dardanelles was on the initiative of Col. Winston Churchill, brought under consideration of the War Council on November 25, 1914, as the ideal method of defending Egypt.

Earl Kitchener declared on three occasions that no troops were immediately available. This statement was not investigated by the War Council; had it been, the Commissioners believe, a sufficient force would have been found available.

The First Sea Lord (Baron Fisher) and Sir Arthur Wilson, expressed no dissent. Lord Kitchener, who occupied a commanding position, was in favor of the project.

A communication from the Russian Government of January 2 introduced a fresh element into the case. The British Government considered that nothing but vague details in response to it, and the question of attacking the Dardanelles was raised again.

Col. Churchill appears to have advocated an attack by ships alone, before the War Council, "on a certain morning at half-tide," and on no other member of the War Council, to see that the views of the naval advisers were clearly put before the council, and that the naval advisers should have expressed their views whether asked or not.

The Commissioners do not think the war council were justified in coming to a decision without much fuller investigation. The Commissioners hold that the possibility of making a surprise amphibious attack on Gallipoli offered such great military and political advantage that it was mistaken and illadvised to sacrifice this possibility by deciding to undertake a purely naval attack.

The Commissioners are of the opinion that Lord Kitchener did not sufficiently avail himself of the services of his general staff, with the result that more work was undertaken by him than it was possible for one man to do, and confusion and want of efficiency resulted.

Although the main object of the expedition was not attained, important political advantages were secured by the expedition. Whether those were worth the loss involved must remain a matter of opinion.

The Commissioners do not concur in the view of Lord Fisher that it was his duty, if he differed from the chief of his department, to maintain silence at the council or to resign.

The Commission finds that Lord Kitchener was sole mouthpiece of War Office opinion in the War Council. When he gave a decision, it was invariably accepted as final. He ventured to argue with him. The general staff had virtually ceased to exist because it was not consulted, said Gen. Caldwell.

The principle of centralization, the report says, was pushed to the extreme point by Lord Kitchener. It proved successful in the minor operations in the Sudan, but in larger operations it threw on one man too much work.

Andrew Fisher and Thomas McKenzie, High Commissioners of Australia and New Zealand, respectively, dissented from the findings as to the duty of Baron Fisher to voice his protest.

"THIRTY PIECES OF SILVER"

At a patriotic meeting in the Carnegie Hall, New York, mention of the treaty, United States Senators who caused the defeat of the Armed Ship bill was jeered and hissed, while cries of "Traitor," "Hang Them," rang through the hall. The suggestion of James M. Beck that "thirty pieces of silver" should be sent to Senator William J. Stone, chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations, and leader of the filibusterers, met with prolonged cheering. Resolutions were passed condemning the actions of the naval senators. One speaker, who adopted a conciliatory manner, was told to "Sit down, Von Bernstorff." The meeting was exceedingly stormy.

Picton Liberal Conservative Asso. Holds Meeting

At the annual meeting of the Picton Conservative Association held this week there was a good attendance with President T. W. Kinney in the chair. The election of officers for the ensuing year resulted as follows, Mr Kinney requesting to be allowed to retire after several years' service as President.

President—H. S. Calliff.
First Vice-President— Geo L. Hubbs.
Second Vice-President—N. Baillie.
Treasurer—Fred Newman.
Secretary—A. E. Calnan.

A resolution was passed congratulating the Premier of the Province, Sir William Howard Hearst, on the well merited honor that has recently been bestowed on him by his Sovereign, and assuring him and his Government of continued confidence and support for giving to Ontario advanced legislation that we believe meets with the approval of the great majority of its citizens, and in aiding financially as they have done the Dominion and Empire in the great war in which we are engaged.

A further resolution was also passed putting on record the continued confidence of this Association in the Government of Sir Robert Borden that in this time of great national and imperial responsibilities has fulfilled actively the obligations devolving upon it. Since the Government assumed office it has upheld the traditions of the great Liberal-Conservative party in no uncertain manner. At the request of the British Admiralty it endeavored to assist the Motherland by the gift of their Dreadnoughts, and once war was declared its single purpose was how to aid with men, money and munitions the Empire of which we are proud to form a part, and whose record in the war has been one of wholehearted unselfishness in the aid of the weaker nations.

NEWSPAPERS BADLY HIT BY HIGH COST OF OUTPUT

Paying $80,000,000 More for Paper in America This Year—White Paper Shortage—Rates Have Not Yet Met Increased Cost

The daily newspaper business in America will have to be readjusted to meet the rapidly increasing costs of production, or in many instances publishers will be forced to the discontinue publication. Such is the conclusion reached in a special article in the New York Evening Post by A. G. McIntyre, a Canadian, who has recently become the paper expert of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, which includes Canadian representatives.

He says: the newsprint paper supply in the United States now threatens so seriously to handicap publishers that many will be forced out of business. The whole basis of publishing daily newspapers in this country must immediately change and readjust itself to new conditions. In this the public are interested because they must eventually pay the bill in increased subscription costs and increased costs of doing business in all commodities which they buy, with the increase in advertising rates and increase in price of paper used by all retailers.

The United States consumes more than six thousand tons of newsprint paper a day, and only manufactures two-thirds of its supply, the balance coming in Canada. Canada is at war; labor is short; prices on everything are high. The United States is also affected, due to the enormous prosperity resulting from the war, with the result that paper manufacturers need not face the increased costs and difficulties in obtaining supplies, coal, wood, labor and repair materials. The paper manufacturer has refused all his increases on to the publisher many months before they were effective and added considerable thereto, with the result that very few daily newspapers in New York City are now being published at any profit at all and a number at a very considerable loss. A situation of this kind cannot, of course, exist permanently. The publishing of daily newspapers must be readjusted to meet these conditions.

Shortage of Waste Paper

Already throughout the United States in many large cities such as Philadelphia, Buffalo, Detroit, Pittsburg, and in many other cities newspapers have increased their subscription price and advertising rates. These increases, however, have not met the new costs.

In addition to these costs now, all publishers are now threatened with a menacing shortage of paper without which they cannot publish. One-third of our paper coming from Canada is now delayed and held up by car shortage and shortage of coal coming from the United States. Today there are four paper mills shut down on this continent for either lack of coal or wood.

Papermakers in the past have been grossly indifferent to the claims of labor in the bush and to everyone cutting pulpwood. It has been well known that the prices of pulpwood have been so manipulated and handled that the man cutting it obtained only a return for his labor and nothing for the actual wood itself. The result is that, under present conditions, the bush where the farmer cutting pulpwood to sell are taking advantage of the paper manufacturer and obtaining prices as high as $12 per cord, for not cutting wood at all this year and working in factories at enormous wages.

A million cords of pulpwood comes into the United States from Canada every year. Two cutting of wood in Canada is curtailed this year at least 25 per cent., so that not only are the publishers of the United States depending on Canada for paper, but even mills are also depending on Canada for a large part of their wood supply. Papermakers have not explained their troubles and passed them on to publishers, in every case with an enormous unearned increment.

$80,000,000 More This Year

Canadian and American paper-makers, have, according to the best evidence and information, agreed on obtaining not only all these higher actual and prospective costs, but also much additional profit as well. The hardships now being worked upon publishers of the United States is impossible to estimate. Newspaper publishers are paying about sixty million dollars more for paper this year than last. The situation and action of the papermakers has become so flagrant that the Canadian Government has taken action to fix the price and regulate Canadian distribution. The paper mills in Canada and the United States which are selling their paper at a price based upon cost advance could be counted on the fingers of one hand.

Congress, through the Federal Trade Commission, has investigated the situation, and accordingly editors, found a very serious situation for the country. They have now, it is reported, started action by the Department of Justice to bring about redress and restore the sale of paper to a fair competitive sale.

Many Papers Have Suspended.

A large number of papers throughout the United States have already suspended from the lack of supply of print paper. Many others will be forced to suspend on account of the prices they are obliged to pay. There is now no open market for newsprint paper. Publishers are forced to buy from their usual sources of supply, except those smaller users who purchase from jobbers.

Paper mills are, in spite of all shortages and conditions, in a wonderfully favorable situation. Large returns are being earned on investment. Paper investment is the safest of any of the country, and the return has always been said to now handsome. The wonderful success of all legitimate paper mills has led many stock jobbers and promoters to organize companies without the necessary physical conditions. This is not always a byproduct of prosperity in any industry, and must be guarded against by publishers and the public as well. Newspapers are published in the public interest. They are now being severely handled by paper manufacturers. The public will eventually suffer unless some redress is obtained by manufacturers themselves making concessions, or being forced by natural conditions th relinquish their grip.

CHILDHOOD AILMENTS

The ills of childhood come swiftly and often before a doctor can be called in or medicine obtained the little one is beyond aid. The wise mother will always safeguard her little ones by keeping Dr's Own Tablets in the home. This medicine always does good—it can never do harm. Concerning it Mrs. Napoleon Lambert, St. Ignace, Que., writes: "Baby's Own Tablets are an excellent medicine for childhood ailments and I am well pleased with their use." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

THOUGHTS OF HOW TO PLEASE EVERYONE

He had opened up a fish shop, and he ordered a new sign painted, of which he was very proud. It read, "Fresh Fish Sold Here."

"What did you put the word "fresh" in for?" asked his first customer. "You wouldn't sell them if they were not fresh, would you?"

He painted out the word, leaving just, "Fish Sold Here."

"Why do you say 'here'" asked his second customer. "You're not selling them anywhere else, are you?"

So he rubbed out the word "here."

"Why use 'sold'?" asked the next customer. "You're not giving them away, are you?"

So he rubbed out everything but the word "Fish," remarking:

"Well, nobody can find fault with that sign now, anyway."

A moment later another customer came in.

"I don't see the use of that sign 'Fish' up there," said he, "when you can smell them a mile away."—Tit-Bits.

COMFORT AND CURE FOR BABY'S SKIN TROUBLES

Dr. Chase's Ointment Cured When Baby's Body Was Covered With Distressing Eczema

If every mother could try Dr. Chase's Ointment for the chafing, skin irritation and resulting eczema which tortures so many babies, what a blessing it would be for the little ones.

This letter will give you an idea of what a wonderful work this Ointment is doing in the way of bringing comfort to children who are so unfortunate as to contract eczema. It is so easy for this trouble to develop from chafing and irritation caused by the clothing, and so difficult to get it cured, that Dr. Chase's Ointment is appreciated when once its healing qualities are known.

Mr. M. L. Dudos, Postmaster, Dogsnayville, N.B., writes: "I believe it is my duty to recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment as a cure for eczema. My baby was afflicted with eczema and his face and arms were covered with this terrible disease. After trying all sorts of ointments the disease continued to spread until it covered the entire body. When the itching became bad he would scratch himself and was sometimes found in his cradle covered with blood. Hearing about Dr. Chase's Ointment I bought two boxes and before this was all used the child was cured. That was a year ago, and there has been no trace of eczema since. I recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment to all who suffer from eczema as being the best treatment in the world for itching skin diseases."

Dr. Chase's Ointment is for sale by all dealers at 60 cents a box. It is a good idea to keep it at hand along with the bath soap to be used for roughness of the skin, chafing or irritation. Prevention is so much better than cure. Powders clog the pores, but Dr. Chase's Ointment cleanses the pores and thereby keeps the skin soft and smooth. Sample box free if you mention this paper. Enemies of Tea

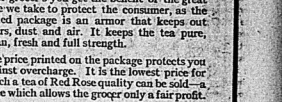
If tea is left open near oranges, soap, spices, matches, etc., the tea will take on the flavor of any of these articles.



In fact, tea absorbs odors as readily as does butter. This is because of the high temperature at which it is "fired" during the drying process, which makes the tea very sensitive. It thus quickly loses flavor and strength, and goes "flat" if left exposed to odors, dust or air.

To Protect the Consumer

When you buy a package of Red Rose Tea at your grocer's you get the benefit of the great care we take to protect the consumer, as the sealed package is an armor that keeps out odors, dust and air. It keeps the tea pure, clean, fresh and full strength.

The price printed on the package protects you against overcharge. It is the lowest price for which a tea of Red Rose quality can be sold—a price which allows the grocer only a fair profit.

You will enjoy the distinctive flavor, rich strength and splendid economy of Red Rose Tea. TRY A PACKAGE.

DEWART AND NICKEL.

Mr. Dewart, M.P.P. for South Toronto, notwithstanding the oft exposures of his charges against the Government's Nickel policy, he continues to repeat them. He is following the example set him by a witness in a horse deal who swore, when in the witness box, that the horse was sixteen feet high. On the Judge asking him if he had not intended to say sixteen hands and not sixteen feet high, replied, "did I say sixteen feet? If I did I'll stick to it." So with Mr. Dewart, he made a nickel statement, and though not true, he sticks to it.

A TYPICAL SCANDAL.

The weekly Nation, an English journal which assisted Germany powerfully before the war by its pacifist policy, publishes an anonymous letter severely criticizing Sir Robert Borden. It says, "If the Laurier Government was corrupt it amused people and did things." Certainly. It amused the writer of that letter. "It did things"? Yes, It did many things that made it much harder for this Government to finance the war. In this connection we mention only the G. T. P. bargain.

The weekly review would naturally have little love for Sir Robert Borden, or the late Lord Roberts, or for anyone else who opposed its pacifism, and it would naturally be pleased to publish this insulting letter, but Canadian newspapers who would pay tolls to cable such insults home have no reason to complain of hard times. It is folly to be so extravagant in the transportation of offensive abuse when it can be manufactured quite as well at home. The whole affair is a dirty scheme to lessen Sir Robert's influence at the Imperial Conference by alleging that his Government is "corrupt" and "discredited," and that he will only be "the tame cat of Lord Milner." He is represented in England as being "dull." Is there a Liberal member of Parliament who echoes the charge? He is by far the biggest, brainiest man in the Parliament of Canada. If he is dull this is a nation of dunces, and the English periodical which published the article insulted every citizen of Canada, and the newspapers which dignified the letter by publishing it here assisted the petty scheme of a Little Englander.

BUSINESS IN GOVERNMENT.

It is said that the chief cause of the turnover in New Brunswick was the management of the Intercolonial Railway. Since Hon. Frank Cochrane took over the management he has run it as a business enterprise. His officials are instructed to consider only business interests and yield nothing to polities. This has resulted in increased revenues, improved equipment and efficient methods. It is well for Canada and for the Empire and her Allies that this is the fact. The war placed great responsibilities upon the Intercolonial Railway. It was the one great artery through which the red blood of Canada flowed to the support of the Empire. The terminals at Halifax had to be enlarged and improved to tranship the immense traffic overseas. Congestion there would have made itself felt in every part of Canada—in England, too, and France and Belgium. Business management enabled the Intercolonial to meet the demand.

But while business management was efficient it was apparently unpopular in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, so much so that it is credited with having won two elections for the Liberals.

The gentlemen who are demanding a business government—what have they to say of this? Are they prepared to do their part to vindicate the business administration of the Intercolonial by Hon. Frank Cochrane? Are the people who demand business administration of our public affairs in earnest? Are they prepared to defend it by their votes or are they only too glad to see it work mischief politically to the Government that undertakes it?

CANADA'S PREMIER.

When Sir Robert Borden enters into conference with the greatest statesmen of the Empire he will be by no means the least commanding figure. No man will enter the conference with better intellectual equipment. Ever a close and serious student of imperial concerns he has a well stored mind and his views are firmly based upon a complete and accurate knowledge of the situation. His confreres are not likely to go away with the impression that because he is courteous he is lacking in strength. They are not likely to mistake patience for irresolution. It is only a few Canadian politicians who endeavour to make it appear that he is lacking strength and leadership. Some of them appear to think that because he eschews rough-house methods he is "spineless." That is the Montreal Herald and Brockville Recorder view. This is not really their view—it is only their pretended view promulgated with persistency to create a misapprehension in the public mind. Hon. George Graham himself knows better. He has seen too much of Sir Robert's mettle to have ever a doubt as to his strength. He has never seen Sir Robert's courage fail him. He has never seen him shrink from combat and what is of more consequence he has never seen him worsted. He is amiable, he is courteous, he is modest—but he is not weak. He is "the oak that defies the storm."

Current Comment

It would have been far more gracious had Mr. Redmond deferred his demand for Home Rule till the end of the war.

Public utterances of Hon. G. Howard Ferguson assay at least as high in veracity as the editorial columns of Mr. Ferguson's critic, the Toronto Globe. If they do not the assay will be very low.

"What has become of the Conservative Government in New Brunswick?" is an important question, but far less important than the urgent query "Where are those New Brunswick potatoes?"

Hope the withdrawal of John Redmond & Co., does not mean that there will not be enough of the British House of Commons left to help Lloyd George win the war. It would be a good thing if Redmond and his army never returned.

By the way, where are all those Deutschlands and Bremens which were to do a thriving business between Germany and the United States?

The Poet's Corner

TO THE POTATO

Twinkle, twinkle little spud,
As up among the clouds you send;
You are doubtless feeling gay,
Chasing round the milky way,
You have reached such a height
You are surely out of sight,
Like a diamond now you seem
In your price—and that's no dream,
Twinkle on another twink.
But you'd drive us all to drink
As we chase for needful chink,
You are sailing rather high,
As you wink your shriveled eye
Up there somewhere in the sky.
As a flyer, you're a bird,
Spud so mighty, too so small,
You make diggers of us all;
Farmers dig you with a hoe,
While we have to dig for dough,
If you keep on, I'll be bound,
You'll bring bullion pound for pound
You'll fulfill the adage old
That you're worth your weight in gold,

Tuber, since the coop you flew,
We have only longed for you;
That our fireside you forsook
Broke our heart and pocketbook,
Never felt how dear you were,
Till we paid four dollars per,
Small potatoes please come back,
In our small lives there's such a lack;
For your presence we so pine.
That our stomach hits our spine,
We are tired of eating greens,
Stewed prunes, sauerkraut and beans,
'Tis for you alone we yearn,
Darling tater, please return.

STITCHES THAT TRIM.

Suggestions About Using Needlework on Small Gowns.

In the days of grandmother, when cheap trimmings—braids, laces and edgings—were not so cheap as they are nowadays, there was real economy in finishing off the little girl's dresses by means of neat lines of herringbone stitch, or tatting. In fact, almost never did children's frocks show any sort of trimming that cost anything but the time taken to make the stitches and the trifling cost of thread.

It is usually more convenient to finish the child's garment entirely before adding the stitches. Sometimes it is more convenient to buy inexpensive, absolutely untrimmed frocks and rompers for the children and bring them home to double their value by a half hour or so spent in finishing them with handwork.

To begin with, if you do not know how to make the herringbone or feather stitch practice with a piece of heavy embroidery twist and a piece of gingham or kindergarten cloth, such as you use in making the children's clothes. Practice until you have acquired a uniform stitch. There is an infinite variety in the length and the angle of the stitch, and it doesn't much matter which you adopt so long as it is always uniform. This stitch is useful for trimming the neck and wrist lines of the frocks. If the dress is made at home simply baste the skirt hem and use this stitch by way of hemming and trimming the skirt at the same time. A simple chain stitch made with coarse cotton is another good way of finishing hem, cuffs and collars.

Even woolen dresses can be trimmed in this way. Our grandmothers made herringbone stitches in colored wool on the brown holland everyday frocks their little girls wore, and, though we do not have to give our children brown holland frocks these days, this sort of colored woolen trimming is very pretty. Besides that, it is very smart just now, and for that reason, as well as because it is inexpensive, deserves attention. It is not difficult to learn the sort of wool embroidery that trims the new frocks, and a little practice with bright wool threads will make anybody an adept at doing it.

Canadian Won Prize.

The first prize in the Economic Essay Contest, conducted by Chicago University, has been won by Duncan A. MacGibbon, of McMaster University, Toronto. The second, third, and fourth prizes were won by students of American universities, the contest being an international one.

Von Tirpitz Triumphs Over More Humane Huns. Cause Growing Desperate

Admiral von Tirpitz has triumphed. His original campaign of submarine "ruthlessness" has been adopted in spite of the protests of the more humane Germans. The people of Canada are naturally asking what light does the policy of U-boat frightfulness throw on German opinion of the military situation in Europe. "The decision of the war is still pending," said the Prussian Minister of War recently. Here is confession from an authoritative source that the assertion of victory on which Bethmann-Hollweg's offer of December 12 was expressly based was only pretence. It is true that in Germany's official notification of ruthless sea warfare the avowed aim is to shorten the war, to bring it to an end, to demonstrate an established fact to the Allied mind. But when von Stein speaks of a decision still pending, he says plainly what the German editors have been saying, that Germany has still to win the war. The inference is plain that on land the war has not yet been won and cannot be won. It is a startling admission that Hindenburg has failed—Hindenburg, to whom the German people turned as the sole hope of victory; Hindenburg, who was to bring the war back to its true purpose, an assault upon Russia and the establishment of Berlin-Bagdad; Hindenburg, who began so well with the conquest of Roumania. On the morrow of this impressive victory, with the German people aglow over the realization of the dream of Middle-Europe, comes this apparent abandonment of the high hopes of the last half-year, the apparent recognition that not in the east or the southeast is the much-talked-of decision to be had, but, after all, on the sea. At the height of Hindenburg's prestige Hindenburg makes way for Tirpitz.

A swift decision—That has been the aim towards which German efforts have been directed from the first, now on this side and then on the other. To win a decision the German armies invaded Belgium. To win a decision they stormed at the British lines before Ypres on the way to Calais. Mackensen was to force a decision in the spring of 1915 when he pressed forward into Russia. Mackensen was to win a decision once more in Servia. The Crown Prince strove for a decision around Verdun. And finally Hindenburg was called in. So regularly did these successive campaigns begin with the expression of confidence that at last the decision was in sight, and so regularly did they fail, that at last the outside world was forced to the belief that Berlin's confidence was only pretended. From a swift, unmistakable decision Berlin came down to academic discussion on the basis of the war map. By means of area and population figures Germany tried to show that the Allies were beaten, and the only difficulty was that the Allies refused to admit it. Reason had to attempt the demonstration of a military truth which the armies of the Central Powers were not quite able to drive home. Bethmann-Hollweg's argument at first was that Germany having won the war, it was not for her to talk of peace. By last December his argument had become that Germany having won the war she could afford to broach the subject of peace. Now that the Allies have rejected the discussion of peace, it appears that the war is not won after all.

If Germany's latest bid for decisive victory did not carry with it such extraordinary implications, it would be natural to conclude that the German statesmen and war-leaders are at heart not much more confident of forcing a decision on the sea than they have been in their earlier undertakings. It might be said right out that they are no more confident of starving England into submission than they were of forcing France to a separate peace after taking Verdun, and certainly not as confident as they were of forcing Russia to a separate peace after overrunning Roumania. But in the present instance Germany seems prepared to take such enormous risks that inevitably the question arises whether this time the Kaiser really is not confident of attaining the swift decision he has been striving for these two years and a half. Yet rational opinion refuses to recognize the probability of the starving of England. Other explanations have therefore been sought. Is it desperation? Or is it an attempt to make surrender easier by bringing the whole world against Germany? Or is it an attempt to make the terms of peace easier by bringing the United States into the peace conference?

A Lucky Prisoner.

Pte. F. Mesley, who comes from Earlscourt, a suburb of Toronto, has had an odd career since he was taken prisoner by the Germans some months ago. Pte. Mesley is an ambitious youth, and while living in the Hun prison camp he learned to speak French and German. He made such rapid progress while recovering from his wounds in a hospital that the captors used him as an interpreter. Pte. Mesley was later interned in Switzerland, and there he learned that he could go to a Swiss college if he was able to pass the required examinations. He did so, and is now taking a course in French, German, Spanish, as well as several commercial subjects under Swiss teachers. Although a prisoner of war, he is by no means wasting his time.

Iron in China.

Iron ore is found in almost every Chinese province, but it is mined extensively in only a few.

Very Impatient Prisoners.

Canadians do not make patient prisoners-of-war in Germany, and make more attempts to escape than any other section of the army. Moreover, they do not lose heart when recaptured, and almost invariably the man who has made one unsuccessful attempt repeats the attempt twice and even thrice. The spirit which animates these unfortunate victims of the war is shown in a letter from Donald MacNicoll, of Vancouver (16th Batt.), who writes from a German camp: "I am confined in my 3 x 4 room. I am not sick, unless it is of the home kind. I am here for that honorable offence of 'beating it,' as the Americans would say. This is my second attempt. The first time I got within four miles of liberty, and the next 3½. Fourteen days' solitary confinement on bread and water—that is what we suffer for these attempts; but, then, look at the prize if you win, and you know we are always going to win." The writer goes on to speak of his progress in the study of German and French.

Left Money in Banks.

There have been a lot of people in Canada to whom money was no object. They have left balances distributed among the chartered banks amounting to nearly a million dollars. A blue-book brought down by Sir Thomas White shows that to the end of 1915, there were $916,535.74 of unclaimed balances, held by the various banks as follows: Bank of Montreal, $103,299; Quebec Bank, $18,091; Bank of Nova Scotia, $40,314; British North America, $91,934; Bank of Toronto, $3,637; Molsons Bank, $20,151; Banque Nationale, $25,034; Merchants, $36,558; Banque Provinciale, $951; Union, $85,778; Commerce, $78,560; Royal, $54,345; Dominion, $61,989; Hamilton, $47,701; Standard, $4,012; Hochelaga, $17,752; Bank of Ottawa, $14,472; Imperial, $20,849; Home Bank, $2,598; Northern Crown $3,723; Sterling, $435; Montreal City and District Savings Bank, $118,794; Caisse L'Economie De Notre Dame De Quebec, $11,509.

Having read of "Fruit-a-tives", I thought I would try them. The result was simply wonderful. During the 12 years past, I have taken them regularly and would not change for anything. I also find they are a splendid remedy for Biliousness, using "Fruit-a-tives" as a laxative. AN INVITATION TO SICKNESS

Impure Blood Means a Breakdown in Your Health

Impure blood is an invitation to sickness. That blood is at work day and night to maintain the health, and any lack of strength or purity in the blood is a weakness in the defence against disease. Anaemia is the doctor's name for lack of blood. There may be an actual loss in the quantity of blood, or the real trouble of its constituents may be lacking. In the latter symptom is pallor, anaemia is another common symptom. It is not, however, confined to them alone, for it is this weak, poor blood that prevents full recovery after a grippe, fevers, malaria and operations. It is also present in old age and in persons who lead sedentary, unnatural or unhealthy physical states. If you are suffering from this trouble take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. They make pure, new blood with every dose and this new blood means health and strength. Thousands have proved the truth of these statements among them Mrs. John Heidt, Matthews, Alta., who says: "About a year ago I began to feel badly run down condition; my blood was watery, I was very nervous, slept badly, and suffered from frequent headaches and found my housework an almost intolerable burden. My appetite was poor and I did not seem to assimilate the food I took, altogether my condition seemed serious. I consulted no doctor in our neighborhood I decided to give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a trial, and I have much reason to be thankful that I did so, as in a few weeks I could feel a great change for the better. I continued the use of the pills for some time longer, and found a complete cure. I feel better than I have for years and can therefore cheerfully recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to all who are weak and run down."

You can get these pills from any dealer in medicine or by mail at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50 from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The Story of The Battle of Courcelette

By HARRY JOHNSTON, 20th Battalion, 2nd Contingent, C. E. F.

There was no official eye-witness with the Canadian army at the battle of Courcelette, Sept. 15 and 16, 1916, although the Canadian war correspondents secured stirring pictures of the action, including the first view of the occupation of the British tanks by the terrified Huns. Belleville will see these pictures at Griffin's Opera House, Monday and Tuesday, March 12 and 13, also Wednesday evening, matinee and evening. This is probably the first authentic official story of an eye-witness, albeit an official one, to be published here. It was told by a press representative by Signaller Percy Johnson of the 20th Battalion, a Toronto unit of the second Canadian contingent.

When seen at his home, 31 Price Avenue, which was still decorated with flags and bunting in honor of his return, he was hopping around, quite active on one foot, without a crutch or other support, and using his one hand and arm with as much energy as normal people use two.

"We went into the firing line at midnight, Sept. 14," said Johnston. "We had marched from Ypres nearly all the way to the Somme front, resting a week en route. We were about four days on the actual march, and each night slept on a train. We slept in barns and farmhouses on the way, except at Albert, where we billeted in houses. The men seemed glad to get away from Ypres for a change. On the road we saw the tanks for the first time. They stopped for the night in a field near Albert. They were lined along good roads under their own power in fine style; only they made more noise than a regiment of horses. They were painted a dull gray, and some of them had funny names written on them with chalk.

"We got to our positions in the dark by some roundabout way, and found that there were no trenches left—just shell holes, as I saw. Some of the holes 50 yards behind us all night. These tanks made so much noise when they advanced they couldn't surprise the Germans exactly, but they seemed to scare them pretty badly. They had been expected for an attack and had been shelling the position heavily. The shell holes were chucked up with dead. We laid in these shell holes all night. At 4.30 the next morning we all went over the top. That was the time set, to the second. There were about 1,200 men behind us in all—what the troops called 'Sausage Valley.'

"Just before the time for the attack our guns opened with a roar. The moment they lifted the barrage, my platoon commander, Lieut Corbett, jumped up, I was watching him and jumped up with him as I saw him raise and I followed on with particularly broad and clumsy boot, at once. The [illegible] rose from the whole house [illegible] disorganization, and the sport member had to hurry to his seat, shaking and surprised by this thrown of despondency.

Like Being Hit By Stone

"It felt just like I'd been hit with a stone, but my hip bone was broken. I fell on a little way, about 50 yards, but the pain got too bad, so I had to come back. I noticed that aeroplanes were about, but there were no German planes up at all. I guess they didn't believe in it. I was still carrying my Lee-Enfield, with the fixed bayonet. This was the first time our brigade had gone into the trenches with Lee-Enfields. I never found much trouble with the Ross except to get hot sometimes. It never jammed after I knew how to handle it.

"I got back to the first German trench we had taken and sat down into it. I was standing in there when I got hit by a big piece of shell case in the arm. I hardly felt it. It took the whole muscle out of my left arm and broke the bone two inches from the shoulder. It left it numb.

"I was talking to two stretcher-bearers of the 19th Battalion, Toronto fellows, about how would be the safest way to go to get back to the dressing station, and they were describing the way when I got hit. They took the handle of my bow respirator and made a tourniquet to stop the bleeding. Then they took me out of there and put me in a better place and left me. The pain in the arm was too heavy to try to get me out.

"The tanks were working towards the sugar refinery, where the Germans were preparing. Then with machine guns. The bullets glancing off the tanks hit a lot of our men like I was hit. The tanks were distributed all along the line where the generals knew there were villages or barricades by the photographs taken from the aeroplanes.

"I stayed where I was for about an hour. Then I got buried by a shell—managed to get myself out, but in about five minutes I was buried again. I was struck the same time by shrapnel bullets, one in the back high up near the shoulder, the lower down near the spine, and one in the stomach. I got that one in there yet. I got myself out, but was feeling pretty weak and wishing it would be all over soon, and me done with. I was feeling that way all the rest of the 16th, and I think I was buried exactly ten times. Sometimes I got out myself, sometimes men passing in the trench dug me out and fixed me up a bit. Then a shrapnel ball hit me in the left kneecap and smashed it.

Lay There All Night

"I lay in the trench all night. It was pretty cold, and I guess I nearly froze, but I was conscious all the time. I never lost consciousness once. There were seven other wounded men from different battalions which had been drafted to us, and whose names I didn't know, lying around near me before dark. In the morning they were all dead, some buried by shell, half buried. Early daylight a shell came and buried me up to the neck, all but my head and shoulders. The kind of shell exploded not get more than my head above ground. So I lay there five hours. Shells were flying all night.

"About 8.30 some stretcher-bearers found me and carried me out. Bandmaster McLean of the 20th Battalion band, was one of them. He's a Toronto man. He was acting as stretcher-bearer. My battalion, the 20th, had spent the night in a trench fifty yards beyond the sugar refinery, and they had been ordered to take and hold. The Princess Pats had come through the 16th, and were on a bit. Yes, good men, but all men are pretty good when they are put to it—even the Germans. It takes a big job to make the German soldiers know they're beaten, and they won't quit till then.

"The boys went on next day and took Courcelette. It was the biggest Canadian battle so far. Three Canadians were awarded the V.C. Indians, British and French attacked on a 25-mile front, and went ahead from one to six miles.

"But I was out of it by that time. They took me back to the first dressing station, and then to another one further back. The shells were still falling pretty thick. I saw two German machine guns didn't open up until we got nearer the sugar refinery, about 1,000 yards ahead. I am a signaller with the Canadian army at the battle of Courcelette, Sept. 15 and 16, 1916, although the Canadian war correspondents secured stirring pictures of the action, including the first view of the occupation of the British tanks by the terrified Huns. Belleville will see these pictures at Griffin's Opera House, Monday and Tuesday, March 12 and 13, also Wednesday evening. This is probably the first authentic official story of an eye-witness, albeit an official one, to be published here. It was told by a press representative by Signaller Percy Johnson of the 20th Battalion, a Toronto unit of the second Canadian contingent.

When seen at his home, 31 Price Avenue, which was still decorated with flags and bunting in honor of his return, he was hopping around, quite active on one foot, without a crutch or other support, and using his one hand and arm with as much energy as normal people use two.

"We went into the firing line at midnight, Sept. 14," said Johnston. "We had marched from Ypres nearly all the way to the Somme front, resting a week en route. We were about four days on the actual march, and each night slept on a train. We slept in barns and farmhouses on the way, except at Albert, where we billeted in houses. The men seemed glad to get away from Ypres for a change. On the road we saw the tanks for the first time. They stopped for the night in a field near Albert. They were lined along good roads under their own power in fine style; only they made more noise than a regiment of horses. They were painted a dull gray, and some of them had funny names written on them with chalk.

"We got to our positions in the dark by some roundabout way, and found that there were no trenches left—just shell holes, as I saw. Some of the holes 50 yards behind us all night. These tanks made so much noise when they advanced they couldn't surprise the Germans exactly, but they seemed to scare them pretty badly. They had been expected for an attack and had been shelling the position heavily. The shell holes were chucked up with dead. We laid in these shell holes all night. At 4.30 the next morning we all went over the top. That was the time set, to the second. There were about 1,200 men behind us in all—what the troops called 'Sausage Valley.'

"Just before the time for the attack our guns opened with a roar. The moment they lifted the barrage, my platoon commander, Lieut Corbett, jumped up, I was watching him and jumped up with him as I saw him raise and I followed on with particularly broad and clumsy boot, at once. AN INVITATION TO SICKNESS

Impure Blood Means a Breakdown in Your Health

Impure blood is an invitation to sickness. That blood is at work day and night to maintain the health, and any lack of strength or purity in the blood is a weakness in the defence against disease. Anaemia is the doctor's name for lack of blood. There may be an actual loss in the quantity of blood, or the real trouble of its constituents may be lacking. In the latter symptom is pallor, anaemia is another common symptom. It is not, however, confined to them alone, for it is this weak, poor blood that prevents full recovery after a grippe, fevers, malaria and operations. It is also present in old age and in persons who lead sedentary, unnatural or unhealthy physical states. If you are suffering from this trouble take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. They make pure, new blood with every dose and this new blood means health and strength. Thousands have proved the truth of these statements among them Mrs. John Heidt, Matthews, Alta., who says: "About a year ago I began to feel badly run down condition; my blood was watery, I was very nervous, slept badly, and suffered from frequent headaches and found my housework an almost intolerable burden. My appetite was poor and I did not seem to assimilate the food I took, altogether my condition seemed serious. I consulted no doctor in our neighborhood I decided to give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a trial, and I have much reason to be thankful that I did so, as in a few weeks I could feel a great change for the better. I continued the use of the pills for some time longer, and found a complete cure. I feel better than I have for years and can therefore cheerfully recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to all who are weak and run down."

You can get these pills from any dealer in medicine or by mail at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50 from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

What these boys do, you can do

SEVERAL hundred dollars worth of vegetables was the splendid contribution of the Broadview Y.M.C.A. boys of Toronto towards increasd of food production last season. No wonder the boys proudly fly the British flag in their "Garden City" and win fine compliments from everyone.

No army could fight very long on an empty stomach. Plentiful supplies of food must reach our heroes in France every day. Besides, there is all Canada to feed, and Great Britain depends largely upon us too. There exists a world shortage of food. Hundreds of thousands of Canadian soldiers are now consumers instead of producers. So you see that every bit of help in growing extra food supplies is of colossal importance. Every home should have a vegetable garden.

Helping in the War

Toronto Y.M.C.A. boys doing their bit by growing vegetables. "Each boy looks after his own plot, and either sells the vegetables or uses them at home.

Every dollar's worth of vegetables you grow saves money otherwise spent for vegetables or gives you vegetables you would not otherwise have, and thus helps to lower the "high cost of living." Growing vegetables saves the labor of others whose effort is urgently needed for other vital work. Boys, girls, grown-ups—everyone should help. Let the slogan for 1917 be

"A vegetable garden for every home"

Who doesn't enjoy nice fresh juicy vegetables on the table every day! Isn't it well worth everyone's while to grow vegetables this spring? Decide now. Boys and girls, ask your parents for the use of the ground and your help. They will gladly give you both. Grown-ups should plan now to have a garden.

Horticultural societies, lodges, school boards, etc., are invited to encourage vegetable growing everywhere. Parents and guardians are requested to give boys and girls their co-operation.

It is suggested that organizations arrange for addresses on vegetable growing by local expert gardeners. If these are not available, the Department will endeavor to send a speaker. It is urgently requested that applications for speakers be made promptly as the demand for them will be great and the supply of available experts is limited.

The Department of Agriculture suggests stimulating interest by forming organizations to offer prizes for best vegetable gardens. Every possible assistance will be given any organization encouraging vegetable production on vacant lots.

You do not need to be an expert. Scarcely any plot of ground is too small. Just write a letter to the Ontario Department of Agriculture (address below) and you will receive literature telling all about vegetable growing, how to prepare the ground and cultivate the crop; also a plan showing suitable vegetables to grow, best varieties for Ontario, and their arrangement in the garden. These will be sent free on request. Attend the meetings in your community.

Write for Poultry Bulletin—The high prices for eggs make a flock of poultry well worth while. They are not expensive to keep. In the average home the waste from the table is sufficient. Write for bulletin.

to the clearing station, where they took my arm off. From there I was sent to Boulogne and across to Dover and on to Birmingham." Blood poison had set in my knee, and they took off my leg at Birmingham, right from the hip. I was there a month in the hospital.

"Courcelette? It is a fair-sized village—we could just see it from where we were, but I guess there's not much of it standing now."

Johnston expects to get a pension of about $400 per year from the government for the rest of his life. He is having an artificial leg prepared. In the meantime he is hopping about the house on one foot, using his remaining hands for everything needful, and taking the whole thing absolutely as a cheerful matter of course. He's done his bit and is happy to be back home and through with it.

Do not forget the place and date—Griffin's Opera House, Monday and Tuesday, March 12 and 13, matinee and evening.

BOXING FLOURISES IN ENGLAND

Boxing is in a flourishing condition in England, despite the war, and the praises of Jimmy Wells are again being sung as a result of the Bombardier's victory over Company Sergt.-Major Dan Voyles, a British army champion. Having eliminated Voyles, Wells is again without a rival for his honors, and all his time, for the present at least, will be devoted to his military duties.

BASEBALL NOTES

Ball players don't care a rap if their owners snub them, but they get very angry if they are cut.

Benny Kauff was tougher than a Carnac record all through winter, but this year he hasn't made the notes of a week lamb bleat.

Connie Mack has released Second Baseman Harold Cable, formerly of the New York Americans, to the Atlanta Southern League team.

Carl Sawyer, Washington American infielder, has signed terms for 1917, and will quit the movie game. Sawyer was offered a contract that called for more money than he is receiving in the movies.

Harry L. Pease, president of the Boston American League Club, announced last week that he was considering an offer made by business men of Honolulu to have the team do the spring training there in the spring of 1918.

Harold Janvrin, who played second base for Boston in 604 after Barry was hurt, and till through the world series, has signed, after a long argument, Hooper, Lewis, Hoblitzel, Mays and Gregg are the holdouts now.

Jack Nees, former Detroit Tiger, has been cut from $3,000 to $2,500 by Comiskey, and says that he will play independent ball rather than sign at the salary mentioned.

Dave Griffith, who was proclaimed as the best catcher in the Western League last year, has been sold to the Mobile Club of the Southern League by Wichita.

Joe Benz announces his willingness and eagerness to enter the draft construction and says that a drill master will be welcomed by the Chicago White Sox players.

Pittsburg have secured Warren Adams, a former first baseman, whom Brooklyn asked waivers on.

Joe Bush, star pitcher, and Amos Strunk, the fleet outfielder of the Philadelphia American League baseball team, both of whom have been holdouts, have signed contracts.

Charles W. Murphy has sued the Chicago National League Club for the rent of the old West Side Park. He wants the court to decide either that the lease holds or that the property reverts to him. If the lease is cancelled, then Murphy will rent the park to Billy Sunday, who wants to hold one of his religious meetings there.

SLOW BALL PITCHERS

What has Become of this Type of The Slan Artist

The man who carries a superabundance of dignity must make himself almost a stirred as he makes other people.

What has become of the slow ball pitchers? Nap Bucker, who pitched the slowest ball that ever crept up on a batter began baseball, was retired from the service of the Brooklyns, while Jean Dubuc, another rather famous slow baller, is also through with the game. Both "Eppa" after some six years of splendid service.

To the layman it is often a mystery how these slow ball pitchers could get by. Reporters, some of whom had played ball at colleges and elsewhere, would sit behind Jack Warhop's service and their hands would itch for a bat so they could stick one of Hop's benders into the Harlem River. But Warhop, though never a star, darter in the big league seven years. And Jack never had any luck, or he would have batted .[illegible] much higher as a pitcher than was the case.

Then there is Al Demaree, with his dinky little slow curve, which has made monkeys out of the Giants for the last two years. Everybody always admitted Demaree had hardly a thing, but he gets by. While everybody was raving about Al the first year he was with the Giants, Jack McGraw once said: "No, Demaree is not a great pitcher. He has nothing but a little curve and confidence." Al perhaps has less now than he had then, but that little curve and confidence won five games from the Giants' sluggers last season. And Al always feels so bad after he has taken a fall out of McGraw's bunch.

CALL MEN FOR PATROL

Service on Both Coasts to be Established

OTTAWA, March 9.—The Naval branch will issue a call at once for volunteers to serve in a Canadian patrol service on both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts. The number of volunteers required is not yet announced. One hundred Canadian boys have been in training at Halifax and fifty at Esquimault, and the services of any such, or any would have been rendered much higher as a pitcher than was the case.

GREAT ENGLISH RECIPE FOR CATARRH, CLOGGED NOSTRILS, CATARRHAL DEAFNESS, HEAD NOISES

Sufferers from catarrh and catarrhal deafness usually have a history of repeated colds, sometimes resulting in chronic conditions.

Catarrh being a disease of the blood, the only possible way to cure it is to purify the blood. This is why S.S.S. drives out catarrh when all other remedies fail. S.S.S. goes down into the circulation, forces out every impurity, and makes the blood rich and healthy. Then the mucous membranes heal, the nostrils clear, the head noises cease, and the hearing is restored. S.S.S. is guaranteed purely vegetable. Write Swift Specific Co., 159 Swift Building, Atlanta, Ga., for free medical booklet.

Mr. Thomas Hughes, of Ashton, Ont., writes: "I was troubled with catarrh for about three years. I had a bad cough, and my throat was in a terrible condition. I was induced to try S.S.S., and after taking a few bottles I found that I was entirely cured. I have not had a cold since, and my throat is in a healthy condition. I cannot say too much in favor of S.S.S."

REMARKABLE SPEECH

Shortest Longest on Record, Lasting 10 Minutes

The shortest speech on record is believed to have been made by Mr. Thomas Hughes in the Parliament Buildings, Gotomaha, when a measure was under the passing of which would make it illegal to marry their aged. De Cosmos was in a hopeless minority. The job had been held over till the end of the close of the session. Unless legislation was taken before noon, on a given day, the act automatically would fall. The day arrived. Opposition of the measure, Mr. De Cosmos got the floor about 10 a.m. and began his speech against the bill. His friends cheered him, for it was supposed that by 1 or 2 o'clock he would be through and the bill would be put on its passage. One o'clock came and De Cosmos was still speaking—but not more than a quarter upon his subject. 2 o'clock arrived and he was in the second place. 3 o'clock he procured a fearful array of evidence, and insisted on reading it. The majority began to get suspicion of the truth—he was going till next noon and "kill the bill." For a while they made many efforts, but as it came on to dark they began to get alarmed. They sent Mr. Bidstrup, Mr. Reed, abandoned, because each affected that he planned to digress and gain time. They tried to shout him down, but that gave a breathing space, and finally they settled down to watch and calculate between strength of will and weakness of body. They gave it up at 5 o'clock, no adjournment for dinner, no chance to do more than wet their lips with water, no wonder. Mr. Young from the subject. Twilight darkened, the gas was lit, members slipped out to dinners in relays and returned to sleep in seats, but De Cosmos went on. The speaker, to all appearances, he was addressing himself, was alternately feeling snorting and shaking his head with awake. Day dawned, and the majority went out in squads to eat and breakfast, and the speaker still held on. It ended at 10 o'clock. He was very logical, eloquent, and humorous speech; there was no repetition also. But still the speaker kept on, and at last soon after 9 o'clock on the following morning, Speaker, sat up, rubbed his eyes, and was surprised, though he should have known it, that De Cosmos had been talking for nearly 19 hours. All eyes were turned upon him, and he, with a yawn and bloodshot, his legs trembling, his head full of lead, his throat cracked and flaked with blood, he must have spoken twenty-six hours and saved the settlers their land.

India Revolt Worth $60,000

What Germany Offers for Foment-ing Uprising Here—Startling Evidence

NEW YORK, March 9.—Evidence designed to show that Dr. Chandre designed, a Hindu physician, and Ernest Schmitz, a German citizen, received more than $60,000 from Wolf von Igel, a member of the staff of Count von Bernstorff, former German Ambassador to the United States, and on the order of Dr. Alfred Zimmermann, German Foreign Minister, with which to foment a revolt in India, was reported tonight to have been presented to a special Federal Grand Jury here.

The information was contained in papers confiscated in the Government's raid on Igel's offices in the Equitable Building, according to the plot against the Welland Canal. The papers were officially used by the Government today in the trial of Igel. It was stated, their utilization had been heretofore prevented by the vigorous protests of Count von Bernstorff.

The documents were taken to the grand jury room by Captain William J. Oeher, of the Department of Justice, who, it was said, knows virtually all of the German plot and group of arrests in this city have been made. Captain Oeher spent more than four hours in the grand jury room.

The Zimmermann order was obtained by Chakraberty in the summer of 1915, when he went to Berlin by the special purpose of interesting the German Foreign Office in his Indian rebellion, according to the Government agents. It is not believed that the Zimmermann memorandum is an telegraph letter, but it is understood to have been sent by the office of his dictation after Dr. Chakraberty's schemes had been fully considered and approved.

Although Dr. Chakraberty and Schmitz spent some of the money which they received from Igel in $3,600 and $6,000 payments, the authorities are making an investigation into a large sum said to have been invested in Dr. Chakraberty's name. He has $15,000 in savings banks, $15,000 invested in speculative securities, and $30,000 in property in the suburbs of Berlin, according to Steven Manhattan, the German agent, who is said to have found in his efforts between the

VIGOROUS SEED NEEDED FOR EARLY POTATOES

Farmers Urged to Give Attention to Early Planting

Under existing conditions, every farmer should plant as many early potatoes should make an early planting. Choice of seed stock is very important, and should be carefully selected with a view to vigor, smooth, uniform and well developed tubers. Seed for the earliest crop only the medium sized tubers, and not so favorable to the starting of the plant in early spring as slightly later, but early hill should be selected, as early hill seed should be cut as close to the stem end as possible through the early years of the plant's growth. The smaller is this season is usually

Before planting potatoes in an unfavorable soil, it is well to test for soundness by the tuber paper method, and if time is not to be lost in planting, to ascertain how sound and vigorous the seed is, the potato ready seed light should be placed in a warm room for three days in a dish in which it is subjected to the

Revenue Increase of Fifty Millions

Total for Fiscal Year Reaches Well Over Two Hundred Million s Sets Canadian Record

OTTAWA, March 9.—The Dominion financial statement has been issued showing that the Canadian revenue for the past year will be an increase of more than $50,000,000 over the year 1916, by the end of the fiscal year, March 31st. The total revenue for the eleven months ending February 28 was $203,419,095, as against $154,348,822 for the same eleven months of last year.

For the month of February, the revenue was $17,253,472, an increase over February, 1916, of over two and three quarter million dollars.

The total revenue for the fiscal year will be nearly $225,000,000, which is easily a Canadian record. The chief increases were in customs and "miscellaneous," which includes the business receipts tax, although excise, post office and railways all show substantial increases over last year.

The expenditure on consolidated account for the eleven months was $113,161,357 and a capital account $330,-000,000.

The war cost for the eleven months was $210,598,643.

The war expenditure for February was $25,295,893, which with the accounts which the British Government has against Canada, amounts to $30,000,000 dollars a day. There is a reduction of over ten million dollars during the eleven months in expenditure on public works, due to the stoppage of construction on railways. Canada's total net debt is now $768,911,626, an increase for the month of a little fewer million dollars.

But Imitations Only Disappoint

There are many imitations of this great treatment for coughs, colds, croup, bronchitis and whooping cough. They usually have some claim on the merits of the original, but it should remember that they are like it in name only.

Long Used by an Indian Tribe of the Amazon Valley.

In these days of wireless telegraphy it may be interesting to learn that as long ago as July, 1858, the Geographical Journal recorded the discovery of a wireless telegraphic apparatus in use among the Catauquinaru, an Indian tribe of the Amazon valley in South America.

The apparatus, called camberyun, consists of a hole in the ground about half filled with coarse sand; above this layers of fine sand, fragments of wood and bone and powdered mica fill it almost to the surface of the ground. These materials are surrounded by a layer of hard palm wood, which extends above the surface. The upper part of the apparatus consists of layers of hide, wood and hard rubber, between the upper layers and the lower layers there is a hollow space. With a club, much like the stick used to play the bass drum, the native strikes the layer of rubber that forms the top of the instrument.

One of these instruments is concealed in each hamlet of the tribe. The villages are not more than a mile apart and are placed in a direct north and south line. Although a person standing outside the building in which the apparatus is kept cannot hear a blow of the stick on the rubber top, it is quite distinct in a similar building a mile distant. When one of these instruments is struck the neighboring one to the north and south echo the blow. The Indian stationed at each of the posts answers the signal, and by means of code messages a long conversation can be carried on.

Jewels as an Idol.

The jewels of an Indian idol must be worth stealing if many of them recently missing images were of the same valuable head ornaments as one stone in the idol Parthasarthy, in the Triplicane temple in Madras. The ornament is worth some 50,000 rupees, and is made of sovereign gold studded with diamonds, emeralds and rubies, the largest emerald being valued at 1,000 rupees and the biggest ruby and diamond at 500 rupees apiece.

YOUR FURS.

How to Care For Them do They Will Look New and Wear Long.

Many women have an idea that lack is not necessary to a special care of good furs. They think that because the latter are a good quality they will stand more or less rough treatment and that they can be subjected to all sorts of variable conditions of weather. Never hang wet furs near the fire to dry. In the natural state the animal, whose pelt has been converted into a coat or muff or scarf, dries itself in the open and this fact should be borne in mind.

The bright sun is also harmful to good furs. In winter little time is done in this direction; but fure subjected to warm climates and worn frequently in a garish light are likely to lose the lustre which comes to them not only from natural causes but also from the scientific dressing and dyeing to which many of the fashionable furries are subjected.

THE HEIR TO THE HOORAH WITH MERMAN AND KING.

PALACE MONDAY

No story of the year has had a greater success in its dramatized form than "The Heir to the Hoorah," which is announced in pictorial form at the Palace Theatre on Monday and Tuesday, matinee and night. Three Wise Men sitting most comfortably in the great mining property, conceive the curious idea that there must be an heir to the mine which is called "the Hoorah." They were all bachelors and when the manager appeals to some one to name "Lone Jack" as the youngest one is chosen to marry. The fellow to marry places above shows the head of a woman in a field of corn to suit his fancy. It so happens that an Eastern society girl arrives in Nevada town just about the time Lone Jack gives up his search. He is attracted by the young woman, who in turn is attracted by the wealth of the miner. They marry but the differences in their social stations assert themselves very quickly, the union proves a failure and the husband leaves the girls. After he leaves a child is born. When he learns of that fact he hastens back and the child brings about a happy understanding and lasting happiness.

"THE LITTLE CAFE," BRIMFUL OF JINGLING MELODIES

The many inquiries for seats for the engagement of "The Little Cafe," the big New York New Amsterdam Theatre success, which comes to Griffin's Opera House next Wednesday night leads the management to believe that capacity business may be looked for.

"The Little Cafe" is a musical comedy modelled after the latest pattern; originally entitled "Le Petit Cafe" by Tristan Bernard, it was presented in Paris, where it enjoyed a most successful run of one year. C. M. & McLellan and Ivan Caryll, who were responsible for those well known successes "The Pink Lady" and "Oh, Delphine," made the American version, which was originally produced by Messrs. Klaw and Erlanger in Philadelphia, moving thence to New York, where it remained for almost a year at the "Theatre Beautiful." It is now in its third year of popularity, it having played successful runs in both Boston and Chicago.

The story deals with a waiter, the son of royalty who on the death of his uncle, inherits one million francs and a large castle. Instead of resigning his position and taking his station in life, he continues in the service during the day time, but at night appears in the same place as a gentleman and spends his money most lavishly. The machinations of his employer and a promoter to make him share his wealth with them form many amusing situations and complications, all of which tend to make "The Little Cafe" one of the best written books seen in musical comedy in years. The score is most tuneful, there being at least eight positive song hits.

Needs Attention in March or Face May Stay Covered

Now is the time to take special care of the complexion if you wish it to look well for the rest of the year. The March winds have a strong tendency to bring out freckles that may stay all summer unless removed. Now is the time to use othine—double strength.

This preparation for the removal of freckles was written by a prominent physician and is usually so successful that it is sold by druggists under guarantee to refund the money if it fails. Get an ounce of othine—double strength and even a few applications should show a wonderful improvement, some of the smaller freckles even vanishing entirely.

Be sure to ask for the double strength.

Prince Edward County Man Dies in Chicago

Mr. Sam Parliament, Formerly of Amelisburg Passed Away on February 10th

The death is reported in Chicago of an old Amelisburg boy, in the person of one always known as Sam Parliament. Mr. Parliament died Feb. 10th, at his home in beautiful Highland Park. Interment took place at Lake Forest. Mr. Parliament was a brother of Leslie Parliament, Amelisburg, and an uncle of Nelson Parliament, M.P.P. Mr. Parliament left his home in Prince Edward county when he was about seventeen years old and moved to Chicago. For some time he was driver on the old horse car line on Yonge Street. Being saving of his money he conceived the idea of going out in the country to buy cheese and butter from the factories to ship to Chicago and sell wholesale. In this way he built up what proved to be the oldest and largest wholesale cheese business in Chicago. He was successful from the first, and through his keen insight and extremely hard work, he accumulated a large amount of Chicago and other property. One of his pet holdings was a 40 acre farm one of the best in Illinois. He put up fine and up-to-date buildings and equipped it with all kinds of modern machinery, even to a threshing machine, and stocked the farm with the highest grade of cattle and horses that money could buy. This farm is valued at $40,000. It was one of Mr. Parliament's joys to motor down to his farm and for a few hours get away from the ever rushing business life. Besides his wife Mr. Parliament leaves a married daughter, and a son, Clarence A. Parliament, a splendid young man of marked business ability, and whom with his gifted mother, are fully competent to look after the large estate.

Starts Clean-Up For Vancouver

Mayor Does Sleuthing On His Own Account

VANCOUVER, B. C., March 8—Mayor McBeath initiated a moral clean-up crusade today when the police, at his instructions, issued summonses against a number of hotels and uptown cafes for breaking the regulations by selling liquor after hours and to girls and youths.

The mayor did a little previous scouting two weeks ago, and saw all over dining rooms in an unrestrained manner, are described by persons sent to the mayor.

Intended Bill Went Fishing

Filibustering United States Senators Unwittingly Did Canada a Service

OTTAWA, March 9.—The filibustering group of United States Senators who talked out President Wilson's Armed Neutrality Bill have unwittingly done Canada a service. Following the failure of an attempt made by Seattle fishing interests to get a bill passed in the Senate to prevent the importation through Canada of Pacific coast halibut and salmon caught by foreigners, no endeavor was made to tack the amendment of similar effect on the revenue bill. However, adjournment was finally taken without this being accomplished, thanks largely to the efforts of the doughty filibustering Senators mentioned. The proposed measure was designed against Prince Rupert which has become an important shipping point for Pacific coast fish thus competing with Seattle.

Tonnage Lacking For Fish Export

Serious Problem Confronting Main Industry of Newfoundland

ST. JOHNS, Nfld., March 9.—Newfoundland fish exporters are disturbed over the difficulty of obtaining enough vessels to market their product this year. The fisheries constitute the main industry of the colony and in normal times a large fleet of schooners and small steamers are engaged throughout the autumn and winter carrying to Europe and South America fish caught in the spring and summer and cured by being pickled and dried in the sun. The vessels, trading principally with Portugal, Spain, Italy and Greece, bring back cargoes of salt from Cadiz and Spain.

Difficulty in this war has not seriously interfered with this trade, except for a temporary shutting off of the Greek market by the Teutonic blockade. Since January 1, however, six fish-carrying vessels have been torpedoed off the Portuguese coast and in the Mediterranean. Fishing agencies here have purchased all vessels at present available, but as the British Admiralty has requisitioned many steamers formerly used in the trade there is a growing shortage of tonnage.

The trade will require at least 25,000 tons of salt to cure this year's catch of fish. Thus far only enough ships have been secured to bring in 5,000 tons.

Sir Edward Morris, Premier of Newfoundland, who went to England recently to participate in the forthcoming imperial conference, carried with him strong representations from fish merchants and fishermen as to the need of assistance from the admiralty in solving the problem.

STANDARD RELIANCE MORTGAGE CORPORATION REPORT SHOWS SUCCESSFUL YEAR

An examination of the 1916 balance sheet of the Standard Reliance Mortgage Corporation shows a healthy state of affairs. Compared with 1915 the Corporation's Capital and Deposits increased nearly a quarter of a million dollars. Debentures issued were more than $400,000 as at end of 1916, while $89,891.66 was added to the bargain security, composed of Paid up Capital and Reserve Funds, which now amounts to $2,315,870.

Net profits increased nearly $1,000. Mortgage loans increased by $465,522. 50, while cash on hand and in transfer on hand increased $156,000.

The most significant and gratifying feature of the report is that the annual cost of securing the large volume of new business has been paid from the year's earnings, as well as the small premium paid on the sale of debentures to make the yield equal to the market rate.

Both interest and principal payments on mortgages were met with promptitude. The few properties that came to the Corporation through amalgamation or foreclosure were invariably disposed of at a profit. The directors have also to congratulate the shareholders on having had a most successful year. The 5% debentures of the Corporation are becoming better known, consequently increasing in public favor as a profitable and conservative investment.

A copy of the report will be sent free to anyone who inquires for it.

Military News

The patriotic meeting in Demorestville last evening, was most successful. A program was rendered which consisted of vocal and instrumental numbers interspersed with selections by the 254th Band. After the concert a most sumptuous repast was served to the members of the band by the ladies of Demorestville, to which full justice was done. Capt. Sandford of the 254th Battalion, moved a vote of thanks on behalf of the battalion, which was heartily endorsed by the bandsmen.

Ten recruits presented themselves for enlistment in the 254th Battalion yesterday. Only three, however, passed the medical board as physically fit.

Capt. McManus, Divisional Adjutant, visited the 254th Battalion Headquarters this morning.

The 254th recruits at Madoc commenced drilling on Thursday last. There are about twenty men on the strength. Major Mallhouch, who is in charge, expects to see the number doubled within the next month.

Private Harry Cordes, who went overseas with the 2nd Contingent, has been promoted to the rank of Corporal.

DEATH OF EX-MAYOR HENRY McINNIS

In the death of Mr. Henry McInnis, which occurred at an early hour this morning, a well known and much respected citizen has been called to his reward. For some time the deceased had been ill, and his demise was by no means unexpected. The late Mr. McInnis was 77 years of age on the date of his death, having been born in Ireland on the 9th of March, 1840. At the age of 14 years he came out to this country, and for the past 40 years had been a resident of this city of Belleville. For many years he conducted successfully a blacksmithing business, in the shop on Mill Street, which he elected as one of the Aldermen for Samson Ward, and for six consecutive years held that position. In the year 1886, he was elected Mayor of the city, and upon completing his term of office retired from active municipal life. For some years past the deceased had lived a retired life. He was a member of Eureka Lodge, A. F. & A. M., being a Past Master. Mr. McInnis was a man who was highly respected by all who knew him, and his demise will be regretted by a host of friends. Surviving is a family of two sons and two daughters. The sons are R. H. and W. J., both of Ottawa. The daughters are Mrs. R. Harley of Mahany City, Penn., and Mrs. J. M. Truisach of this city. Two brothers, Patrick of Huntington, and John of Rawdon, are living. The sincere sympathy of all classes of citizens will be extended to the bereaved.

NEWSPAPER POSTERS DONE AWAY WITH

LONDON, March 9—Referring to the efforts to control circulation for the purpose of economizing in white paper, the Times announces:

"Though it is not possible to give the exact number of Times circles that have been formed in the provinces, we are able to state that we need 40,000. The average membership of the circle consists of three persons for each copy of the Times. Development of this and other forms of apartments is assisting in the circulation of these cooperative circles in the London area."

All the newspaper posters "familiar as daily attributes in London streets have been abolished.

MADE POLICE STATION LIKE POULTRY YARD

OTTAWA, March 9—Crowing roosters are disturbing the peace and quietness of the Hull police station and the members of the force are unable to quiet the obnoxious birds. Recently last week the station has been turned into a poultry house, as six fully matured fighting cocks were confiscated by a raid on a cocking main. The guardians of the law have the birds under their care for a day or two, when the participants in the cock fight will appear before Recorder Desjardins.

SHOOTS HIS PET HORSES RATHER THAN SELL THEM

JERSEYVILLE, Ill., March 9—Rather than see his beloved horses, the companions of years of toil on his farms, go to strangers, Charles Schmidt, a farmer near here, had his three pet animals shot. Schmidt is preparing to leave his farm and engage in rice farming in Arkansas, an occupation in which he will no longer need horses.

Schmidt handled his horses as his personal friends, and the dread that if he sold them others might be cruel to the animals was more than he could bear.

"ANY PLACE THAT IS WILD."

John Muir Wanted to Get Far From the Madding Crowd.

Once, on reading a magazine article by an enthusiastic young mountain climber who dilated upon his thrilling adventures in scaling Mount Tyndall, John Muir commented dryly: "He must have given himself a lot of trouble. When I climbed Tyndall I rup up and took before breakfast."

At a time when trails were few and far between he penetrated the Sierra, which, he said, should be called not the Nevada or Snowy range, but the Range of Light. "Even night came to selected the lee side of a log, made a bed of pine boughs, and went to sleep on a bed of pine needles. If it was snowing he made a bigger fire and lay closer to his log for warmth.

"Outdoors is the natural place for man," he said. "I begin to cough and sneeze the minute I get within walls. Never at a loss to make his way in the wilderness, was completely bewildered in the midst of city streets.

"What is the nearest way out of town?" he asked of a man in the business section of San Francisco soon after he landed at the Golden Gate in 1868.

"Why any place that is wild," he replied.—Mary R. Parkman in St. Nicholas.

EASY CHEMICAL FEATS.

How to Fireproof Cloth and to Make It Sympathetic Ink.

"Sympathetic ink," popularly considered a "first aid" to war spies in writing invisible communications, and "fireproof cloth" after two interesting chemical experiments the formulas for both have been supplied by a contributor to the Scientific Experimentalist. They follow:

Sympathetic Ink.—With a clean steel pen write on white paper with a cobalt chloride solution and let dry. Wash the paper in held near a fire or the writing will gradually appear and disappear again when it cools because the chloride absorbs moisture from the air. Even though the paper is scorched, the writing will still be visible.

Fireproofing Cloth.—First get two gram tungstates. Add two teaspoonfuls of ammonium chloride to the water in one glass and stir until dissolved. In the other glass put a piece of cotton cloth two or three inches square and then pour the dissolved ammonium chloride into it. Next put containing the cloth and see that it is well soaked with the solution. Hang the cloth up and let it dry. Then touch it with a lighted match. It will burn in the flame but will not go out as soon as the flame is removed.

Need a New Method on The Irish Problem

Nationalist Party Issues a Manifesto — Say Premier Broke Faith With Them

LONDON, March 9.—The Times Parliamentary correspondent wires: The Irish situation has developed on normal lines. The Nationalist party met at the House of Commons under John Redmond's chairmanship and issued a manifesto addressed directly to the President of the United States and the Prime Ministers of the self-governing Dominions. They further adopted the Irish Bill and pledged unqualified support of the war and its successful prosecution and uncompromising opposition to the Government which is waging it."

Finally they passed a resolution calling on the Nationalist members to remain in London under penalty of being pilloried in the vestry-hall lies.

Technically, the Nationalists have been in opposition since the failure of a settlement last summer, but recently by tacit consent they have suspended practically all opposition. The manifesto is the first step in a new campaign.

Miss Falkner,
62 West Bridge Street,
Belleville, Ont.

Dear Miss Falkner:

I have learned that you have formed a branch of the Canadian War Contingent Association in Belleville, and I write to tell you how glad I am to hear of this and to ask whether I can give you any assistance. We had a cable from Mr. Colmer last week saying that the need of woollen comforts is urgent, especially socks, and that there are only one hundred and fifteen pairs on the way to him, which, of course, will not go very far amongst the thousands of men at the front, but the Secretary of the War Contingent is money, and I think it would be a good thing if you tried to get the men of the place interested as well as the ladies, and then you would stand more of a chance of getting cash subscriptions. I should like the names of your officers.

Yours sincerely,
ADELAIDE A. PLUMPTREE.
(Sgd.)
Secretary.

The head office of the Canadian War Contingent Association is at the Westminster Palace Hotel, Victoria Street, London, England.

YOUR DOLLAR AND WHAT IT WILL BUY!

The Expert Housekeeper Can Still Get a Dollar's Worth of Food for It if She Knows What to Select, Declares One Domestic Science Expert.

(New York Sun)

Some people, no matter what the crisis of the catastrophe, always save the universe by keeping their heads. While all the agitated mob, whose rebellious acts are quite indispensable if this world is to move, are racing away in the market place, some more conservative and even a little more constructive person always comes forward to suggest that things may be terrible, but there are ways humanly possible out of the difficulty without all this social revolution. And even though you may think the social revolution and the boycott on Spanish onions to be one and interchangeable, you cannot if you will listen long enough, but admit that this person has some sense.

The person in this food crisis who has a very keen sense of the gravity of the situation, and yet has positively not allayed any pushcart in Greater New York is Miss Helen Louise Johnson, who lectures on home economics for the Institute of Arts and Sciences of Columbia University. The reporter heard her talk the other day on "What My Dollar Can Buy," and then later talked with her and learned that things after all were perhaps not so bad as they seemed. At least they would not be if the feminine intellect—that fight that always seems to be failing where it is needed most—were to be more consistently and directly applied.

It is Miss Johnson's firm conviction that the supposedly shrunken dollar is really as almighty as ever, and that it can buy quite as much food as it could before the present rise in prices. All that is necessary is a little more intelligence in buying, a little more knowledge of the foods, their values, and the possibilities of substitution. "I am continually being told," said Miss Johnson, "that children need this and that, that they must have an endless and varied succession of dishes. Now this is very nice, I admit, and I think every one should eat as many different kinds of food as possible, as long as they are nutritious. But not for one moment would I admit that such a diet was necessary to sustain a child or an adult in healthy efficiency. Unimaginative moderns who have always had everything they wanted to eat forget that civilization has elaborated the diet as it has everything else, and that their forefathers who founded the nation and laid the first stone walls became the pioneers that they were on a bread and molasses youth. I could show you today in the flesh a well known Philadelphia merchant who is 80 years old and a mountain climber, whose childhood diet was porridge and milk, porridge and gravy and porridge and treacle—three meals a day until he grew up. And similarly bread and molasses, corn cereal and milk is a wholesome diet for the growing child. Either contains all the food elements necessary for the growing child. And with certain other simple foods added, food that will give the adult more of the proteins and the starches he needs—such a simplified menu would sustain a brown person as well.

"But, cry all the housewives of the country, they do not like it and the husband will not eat it. Perhaps the one necessary thing if we are to apply the intelligence to the diet is that will power must accompany the intellect in its efforts to eat rationally. It is not—what you want to eat, but what you can and should eat, that directs the housewife, who really wishes to cope in some fashion with the rising prices of commodities. And she will have gone forward several steps if she will think of that power of resistance, which made it possible for her ancestors to survive a plain diet and a still plainer, primitive civilization as in some way of achievement of that diet."

As hard as it is for people to live with sugar—in a suburb—at 18 cents a pound, Miss Johnson thinks that the very necessity for a sudden intellectualizing of domestic management is what the housewife needs. Just as the industrial reorganization following a declaration of war, horrific as war might be, could not but benefit this country. "The more housewifes have to worry about their diminishing dollar, and the greater amount of brain that they are forced to put into feeding their family, the less unfavorably will the American housewife compare in the future with the European. There are, of course, two ways of buying for a household. You can walk into a grocery and stock your house in bulk for a week or a month to come, or you can do as the French housekeeper does—fill your basket at the market with the exact amount of food that you need for that day's menu. And you will have each person's ration so nicely adjusted that waste will be impossible. But the American housewife, who has always "just bought" or telephoned her orders to a solicitous grocer, has far to go to obtain that degree of skill.

"For the American housewife in a great many cases has still to apply to her purchases and her menus the four fundamental tests of foods. First, the chemical test—does it contain the chemical elements necessary to a properly balanced diet? Second, how many calories are you feeding your family—do you give your daughter too many and your son too few? For some housewives, even those who start gayly enough on the assumption that 3000 is the proper number of calories necessary to propel a person through one day's excitements, forget that calories supply energy. They forget that the person who does not lead the violent life of fireman or who does not work at hard labor in the open air for eight hours a day does not need as much nourishment. Gifts, who indulge in more indolent and less strenuous games, require about one-half of the calories that a growing boy can make away with. It has been stated that a small boy in a boarding school has to be given 5,000 calories a day if he is to be kept happy, and although I do not know how wise such repletion may be, I do know that is as much as required to sustain a lumberjack in the North Woods, and the lumberjack leads the most strenuous and exhausting of all outdoor occupations. I have my doubts about small boys. Of course they will eat 5,000 calories of food; they would eat ten if you set it before them, but do they need it? My advice in feeding small boys is to feed them food that have bulk. Beans and potatoes and bread and butter. And all the cereal they can stand—even though they may say they do not like it.

"The next question that the housewife must ask herself about the food she gives her family is: How much of these dishes which I am preparing is absorbed in the system and how much of it is wasted? For a varying quantity of every food eaten goes into the system into the form of protein, starch or what not, and so much is left over unabsorbed. Why buy or take the trouble to prepare foods which yield a comparatively small nutritive return?' A little knowledge is necessary on this point. And a little knowledge would settle the endless discussion that goes on as to whether you should purchase white or whole meal bread. It will not fool yourself that you get any more for your money by buying whole wheat bread, for there is quite as much if not more nourishment adjusted to the needs of man in the white bread. But in the course food you do get some of the much discussed and supposedly necessary vitamines—the elements that are needed by the system if it is not to suffer from the continual softening of modern diet.

"Food values differ for each individual, so that it depends on your husband, your skill as a cook and the conditions of your life whether you shall feed your husband beans three times a day and still keep him happy. For that is what a great many women ask me. But that would not take much ingenuity, and the husband might not reasonably be expected to stand it. But the fourth fundamental test of a wise diet is the economical one. Are you paying for value in your food? For price is no index of the nutritive value of a vegetable. Witness—the cabbage, which like the human head, is 75 per cent water."

Miss Johnson believes that the children would become more efficient. In the science back of the kitchen range if they were more familiar with its symbols—if they were educated for instance, on a more imaginative arithmetic that allowed them to add and multiply calories of food instead of treating them as if they were all destined to spend their lives papering '/8s or selling groceries over the counter. And she believes likewise in a certain amount of co-operation in buying the necessities of life—although she can understand why co-operative kitchens and dining rooms and cooking have failed.

"Not that I think individualism in the kitchen is necessary for the safety of the home," she said. "For if the tablecloth is necessary to keep parent and child together, the family might better be separated." United we eat but divided our appetite falls us.

PROTEST OVER LANGUAGE

Sons of England Demand Teaching of English

REGINA, March 9.—The Regina Sons of England Society has sent to Premier Martin a resolution protesting against the teaching of foreign languages in the northern portion of the Province. Some of the charges made are very serious. The resolution is as follows:

"Being in receipt of statements made by certain representatives of our organization in North Saskatchewan to the effect that,

"In certain districts adjacent to north of the City of Saskatoon the use of languages other than the English language as the basis of tuition is officially recognized and tolerated and further.

"That the use of the English language has been absolutely discontinued in twelve school districts in favor of the Austrian National Anthem.

"And ever, if the Sons of England Society, being an organized fraternity of purely British subjects, irrevocably pledged to uphold and defend the rights, principles and interests of Great Britain and British citizenship, and being thoroughly convinced that such conditions as are outlined in the foregoing statements are not conducive to the ultimate assimilation of the people of the affected districts, by the Canadian nation, as loyal and worthy citizens, but rather create in their minds, contempt for Canadian discipline and disrespect for British principles and institutions, do, therefore, hereby, resolve:

"That legislation be requested of the Saskatchewan Provincial Government bringing each and every school in the Province of Saskatchewan under the direct jurisdiction of the Minister of Education and his department, so that each and every school, its teachers and scholars, be subject to visitation and inspection by Government representatives and inspectors at the department's discretion.

"And, further, that the teaching of the English language by this act, instead of the 'indirect' method to all scholars in all schools, be rigidly enforced."

The Canadian Army in Action and the ADVANCE OF THE TANKS

OFFICIAL MOVING PICTURE OF The Battle of Courcelette

Monday and Tuesday, March 12th and 13th. Prices---Matinee and Night--Children 15c; Adults 25c.

"At 6.24 a. m., Sept. 15, We All Went Over the Top."

Harry Johnston, 20th Battalion, Tells the Story

MONDAY witnesses the first presentation in this city of the official war film of the Canadian army, and the first moving pictures ever taken of the now famous Tanks, which were successfully introduced into modern warfare by the British and Canadians on September 15, 1916. These are the pictures Canadians made—these are the pictures the world awaited.

THIS film is presented by Jule and Jay J. Allen throughout Canada from coast to coast. The Belleville presentation is under the auspices of The Belleville Intelligencer. The authenticity of the pictures is guaranteed by the Canadian War Records Office, under Sir Max Aitken (Lord Beaverbrook). The film is exhibited by authority, and copies will be preserved in the Canadian national archives. Lloyd George, Premier of Great Britain, attended their first private view in London.

ELSEWHERE in this paper is the story of the personal experience of a Toronto soldier who took part in this battle to be depicted on the screen at the Griffin Theatre, Monday and Tuesday, March 12 and 13. Read it. Then see the pictures and realize what Canada's soldiers are, and give them the credit that is theirs.

The Moving Pictures Will Show You

THEY are very lifelike," said Sir Sam Hughes, when asked for his opinion of the Canadian pictures, "and I recognize some of our guns there, and they have done good work."

"Sir Sam should know, for he has seen actual fighting and conditions at the front," interjected Dr. Norman Allen, who was seated next to the ex-Minister of Militia in a balcony box. "Do you think the pictures will encourage and give stimulus to recruiting." Sir Sam was asked.

"Yes, I think they will," he replied. "They should certainly inspire our Canadian manhood to a sense of their duty and of what we are fighting for."

It was by order of and under the instructions of Sir Sam Hughes that the Canadian war pictures were taken and produced, and he seemed immensely pleased with the result.

Dr. Allen declared the pictures were very fine and incidentally remarked that he followed the opinion of Gen. Hughes in everything relating to the war.

Cherub Devine

By SEWELL FORD

Copyright, 1909, by Mitchell Kennerley.

HANDICAPPED

Here is a fascinating latter day romance, written in the vein and style that have won fame for Sewell Ford. "Cherub" Devine is an inspiration in his refreshing outlook on life and people, and after a meteoric Wall street career and a season of recreation among the effervescent ladies of the stage he meets the charming Countess Vecchi. This sweet young American girl, victim of the execrable "international marriage" system, resolves that it is her duty to reform the Cherub, and the outcome provides a narrative seldom equaled in its fanciful humor, illuminating character delineation and tender sentiment.

CHAPTER 1.

THOSE who doubt that fate now and then indulges in irony should have observed the manner in which Hewington Acres came into the possession of "Cherub" Devine.

Bulkins, the real estate agent who made the sale, attributes the whole credit of the transaction to his own shrewdness. But, then, Bulkins is one of those persons who would cheerfully call upon the entire universe to prove that he (Bulkins) was gifted above all other men in that respect. Does life ask aught? Bulkins knew it would and for his profit. There comes a storm. Bulkins appropriates it, wrings huge therefrom and winks confidently at the solar system whose optimisms are conducted for his especial and particular benefit.

"I can sell anything, anywhere." This was Bulkins' philosophy, his religion, his declaration of faith in himself.

And of course Bulkins knew the habits and ways of Cherub Devine. Every one knew them. Any one, from man to the street, the clerk behind the counter, the very newsboy at the curb—could tell you all about Cherub, give you his entire history, from the time he started his career as office boy for a Chicago stockbroker until he arrived into the many millioned spectator whose ambitionless methods were at that moment stirring things up in Wall street. Cherub and every one could have told you exactly the kind of man he was and missed the mark widely, for such men do not so easily estimated.

Perhaps it was this, visible in his wide set blue eyes, with the flashes of light behind; perhaps it was only the calm cheerfulness of his clean shaven face, which earned him the name of Cherub, a designation applied impartially by pert messenger boys, irreverent brokers and staid heads of great corporations. He had been christened otherwise, of course, and possibly Cherub was inappropriate when you consider all that he was or seemed to be, but the designation was universally accepted, as you know.

Just where he might be expected to be found Bulkins had run across him, seated comfortably in a leather covered, wide armed office chair at an open window which looked out across Broad street toward the more or less ornate front of the New York Stock Exchange.

The time was a little past noon of an August morning. Therefore the stream of men was setting outward from the great pillars. The curb was lined with hansoms and autos, and into these climbed brokers variously attired, variously burdened. Here came one in blue serge wearing a yachting cap, there two who swung golf bags in their hands. Others were followed by boys carrying kit bags.

"Hello, Cherub! They got after you today, eh? Planning how to get even, are you?"

Mr. Devine showed no resentment.

"Maybe I was," said he.

Bulkins snorted out a sinfulness laugh.

"Good! Sic 'em, my boy! That's what I like. Show them they think they've got me beat worst I bob up and go at 'em hardest. That, say, you ought to take a rest once in awhile. Does a man good. You ought"—He grinned broadly. "Oh, I say, Cherub," dropping his tone, "I've got just the thing you ought to have—a country place."

"Yes?" Mr. Devine acknowledged the joke by flicking half an inch of cigar ash on the window ledge.

"You bet!" Bulkins was smoothing Cherub's coat sleeve. "It's Hewington Acres—up on the sound—gilt edged suburban property, and going dirt cheap on foreclosure. You know about the Hewingtons; swell family, but goes all to smash financially. Now, there's twenty acres of park along the water, nice little forty room cottage—"

"Only forty?"

"With stables, lodge house, gardener's shack and the like. It's fully furnished and goes as it stands, even to the servants if you want them. Just the place for a family man like you."

And Bulkins started a fresh approach—for his own humor, winking cogitably at an astonished broker's elbow—who happened to be passing.

Mr. Devine seemed to have missed the point.

"How much?" he asked, his gaze still fixed on the stone steps opposite.

"Receivers would take $60,000, but it's worth double. That's as sure as I'm standing here. I tell you, Cherub, that property—"

"I'll take it," said the Cherub.

"Eh?" Bulkins' pendulous under lip was sagging away from his yellow teeth.

"I said I'd take it at sixty. What do you want to bind the bargain—ten thousand? Fifteen? Well, call it fifteen." And before that under lip of Bulkins' had stiffened he was holding Cherub's check in his hands.

Observed Bulkins afterward when he had carefully added that commission to his bank account and recovered from his surprise: "Now, some men would have been six months turning over a property like that, but me, I just stuck it on the first sucker I met, though what in thunder Devine wants of a place like Hewington Acres is more 'n I can see."

Apparently Cherub had no immediate use for it since he allowed three weeks to elapse without referring to the transaction, except to toss the deed over to a clerk and tell him to have it recorded. He seemed to forget all about it until one Friday afternoon when he found himself with a "closing" Saturday, a Sunday and an ensuing Monday holiday on his hands.

"Better come with me for a run into the Berkshires, Cherub, and help me try out my new machine," urged Winston, one of the "Chicago crowd," whose hobby was buying another and more expensive touring car every month or so.

"Thanks, but I guess I'm about due out at my place on the sound."

"Bah-a-ah! You don't mean to say you're set up a country establishment?" And Willston gave him an incredulous look.

"Didn't have to—bought it all standing. Haven't seen it yet. It's open well, say, blamed if I know just where it is. Say, ring up Bulkins, real estate."

Having summoned Bulkins to the other end of the wire, Mr. Devine proceeded to ask enlightenment.

"That you, Bulkins? Well, this is Devine. Say, what's the name of that place you sold me? Eh? Howlington Acres? Oh, Hew-ing-ton! Good! And where is it? Yes, where? No. How should I know? Ah, that's it, is it? Guess I can remember. But how do you get there? Sure. Thirty-fourth street ferry. Thanks. So long."

"HELLO! I WONDER WHO THAT WAS?"

And ten minutes later Mr. Devine had started on his voyage of discovery into the fashionable wilds of Long Island, bent on inspecting the first piece of real estate which he had ever owned, the first tangible fruits of his early acquired millions.

Owing to the foresight of Bulkins, who had sent a warning telegram in advance, Mr. Devine was met at the station by one Timmins, who singled him out with unerring promptness, introducing himself as caretaker and general superintendent of Hewington Acres, and warned him obscurely to forward a yellow wheeled park trap drawn by a pair of glossy colts.

"Whose team?" Mr. Devine was asking.

"Yours, sir."

"All right, let 'er go."

gate Bulkins started a fresh approach—for his own humor, winking cogitably at an astonished broker's elbow—who happened to be passing.

Mr. Devine seemed to have missed the point.

"How much?" he asked, his gaze still fixed on the stone steps opposite.

"Receivers would take $60,000, but it's worth double. That's as sure as I'm standing here. I tell you, Cherub, that property—"

"I'll take it," said the Cherub.

"Eh?" Bulkins' pendulous under lip was sagging away from his yellow teeth.

"I said I'd take it at sixty. What do you want to bind the bargain—ten thousand? Fifteen? Well, call it fifteen." And before that under lip of Bulkins' had stiffened he was holding Cherub's check in his hands.

Observed Bulkins afterward when he had carefully added that commission to his bank account and recovered from his surprise: "Now, some men would have been six months turning over a property like that, but me, I just stuck it on the first sucker I met, though what in thunder Devine wants of a place like Hewington Acres is more 'n I can see."

Apparently Cherub had no immediate use for it since he allowed three weeks to elapse without referring to the transaction, except to toss the deed over to a clerk and tell him to have it recorded. He seemed to forget all about it until one Friday afternoon when he found himself with a "closing" Saturday, a Sunday and an ensuing Monday holiday on his hands.

"Better come with me for a run into the Berkshires, Cherub, and help me try out my new machine," urged Winston, one of the "Chicago crowd," whose hobby was buying another and more expensive touring car every month or so.

"Thanks, but I guess I'm about due out at my place on the sound."

"Bah-a-ah! You don't mean to say you're set up a country establishment?" And Willston gave him an incredulous look.

"Didn't have to—bought it all standing. Haven't seen it yet. It's open well, say, blamed if I know just where it is. Say, ring up Bulkins, real estate."

Having summoned Bulkins to the other end of the wire, Mr. Devine proceeded to ask enlightenment.

"That you, Bulkins? Well, this is Devine. Say, what's the name of that place you sold me? Eh? Howlington Acres? Oh, Hew-ing-ton! Good! And where is it? Yes, where? No. How should I know? Ah, that's it, is it? Guess I can remember. But how do you get there? Sure. Thirty-fourth street ferry. Thanks. So long."

"HELLO! I WONDER WHO THAT WAS?"

And ten minutes later Mr. Devine had started on his voyage of discovery into the fashionable wilds of Long Island, bent on inspecting the first piece of real estate which he had ever owned, the first tangible fruits of his early acquired millions.

Owing to the foresight of Bulkins, who had sent a warning telegram in advance, Mr. Devine was met at the station by one Timmins, who singled him out with unerring promptness, introducing himself as caretaker and general superintendent of Hewington Acres, and warned him obscurely to forward a yellow wheeled park trap drawn by a pair of glossy colts.

"Whose team?" Mr. Devine was asking.

"Yours, sir."

"All right, let 'er go."

Labatt's WINES AND LIQUORS

MAIL ORDER DEPARTMENT

Now Montreal, Que., 4 St. Helen St,
FORMERLY HULL, QUE.

SERVICE—Prompt shipment, no substituting, outstanding overpayments, immediate acknowledgement of all orders—these are the features of our service to which we give very special care.

DRAUGHT VERSUS BOTTLED LIQUORS

Liquors in sealed bottles in cases cost one-third more than in draught, and the quality is no better. Why one-third more? Because you are paying for the bottles and the labor of bottling, for the same goods.

Following are some draught liquors, especially "Balmoral" Scotch, which we can highly recommend:

DRAUGHT SCOTCH

"Balmoral" Five Old Scotch, 2 gals.	$12.50
"Balmoral" Extra Fine Old Scotch, 2 gals.	14.50

HOW TO KEEP WELL

BY JOHN W. S. McCULLOUGH, M.D., D.P.H., CHIEF OFFICER OF THE PROVINCIAL BOARD OF HEALTH.

THE BABY'S CLOTHING.

WE HAVE NOW gotten the baby along to the period that, for the first at least, its food is looked after; but like how world it's cold for, and the infant must have protection against as uncertain climate. Souls of trees must be provided against the baby's coming. It is a matter of pride for the prospective young mother to provide for her baby. She should lay in the following toilet articles, viz.: Soap, powder, white safety pins, two dozen; baby small sponge, a box of absorbent cotton, a few tubes of lanolin, one of pure vaseline, three cakes of unscented castile soap, one antiseptic talcum powder, one bath thermometer, a pound of boracic acid crystals, eight ounces of olive oil, four small bottles of alcohol, flannel, two woollen bath blankets, six soft towels, and a soft hair brush.

The Clothes.—Should comprise one soft receiving blanket, six one-yard-square flannel wraps, four knitted bands, two soft blankets for the cradle, six cloth shawls, two yards of double-sided rubber sheeting, four dozen napkins of cotton, four flannel binders, four high-neck long-sleeved woollen vests, four abdominal bands with shoulder straps with smooth inner seams, four nightgowns of flannel or canton flannel, white slips, three flannel petticoats, six barrow blanket pins for pinning baby in his crib, one-quart hot-water bottle with woollen cover.

It is the fashion that the baby's clothing changes as he gets older. At first, common sense says that he should wear long clothes, then short clothes, and as he begins to crawl he should wear set coat as provided. As these things are meant for people with moderate incomes, it is not intended that they shall cover all that may be required in the way of clothing for the baby, but only what is essential. The mother with plenty of ready money can easily augment her store.

The Long Clothes. In addition to what has already been advised to be procured, seven long dresses of white cotton or of more expensive material should be provided.

The Flannel Binders. Make these of all-wool flannel. They should not be hemmed as the hemming will destroy their elasticity and the hem is not to tight for the baby's tender skin. They should be fastened snugly but not too tightly by means of safety pins, tapes, or sewed with needle and thread. The binder should be fastened to one side of the middle of the abdomen and not at the back. The binder should not be too wide. It must not go so low as to interfere with the movement of the legs nor so high as to constrict the chest. It should be changed for three or four weeks, when the knitted bands may be used.

Knitted Bands. These have shoulder straps. There should be no inner seams and the shoulder straps should be fastened so as to be easily removed and avoid any rough joinings. They should fit the baby so as to avoid wrinkles.

Knitted Shirts. These should be high-necked and long-sleeved, of cotton, wool, or silk and wool. For summer a lightweight is needed. For winter a thicker but not too thick material. The baby should be dressed according to the temperature and not according to the season. Most mothers keep the baby too warm. When he perspires freely the underclothes his skin becomes irritated and he is less able to resist "catching cold."

Flannel Gertrudes. These should be made of all-wool flannel and not of canton flannel or flannelette. These garments should be open in front.

White Dresses. These should be made without any waistline, should not be loose at the arm hole and without lace. The dresses should be fastened with small buttons at the back or with tape.

Nightgowns. Nightgowns should be made of flannel, canton flannel, or stockinette, and of different weights to suit the temperature. Viyella flannel is the best of the flannels and washes better than other kinds. All flannels need careful washing. Flannelette is dangerous and is an inflammable sort should not be used for the baby's clothing.

Diapers. These should be made of soft cloth or stockinette. They should not be made (as they often are) of factory cotton which, at least when new, is harsh and irritating to the soft skin of a baby. The hem should be hand-made as it is after hem-machine made. The first diapers should be 18 by 24 inches or 20 by 40 inches. Begin by making two dozen large ones 22 by 44 or 22 by 45 inches. The larger ones should be used outside the smaller.

Applying the Binder. (1) Have the diaper snug but never tight enough to pinch the baby's stomach or legs. Vomiting and red lines sometimes indicate too tight a diaper.

(2) Do not bring too many thicknesses up between the legs.

(To be continued.)

The Car with the Half-Million Dollar Motor

Why It Has Taken Canada by Storm

$975 FULLY EQUIPPED

NO illustration could do justice to the beauty of this car. Its pleasing body lines are the last word in artistic design. And this is but the outward expression of the perfection of the vital unseen parts which mean so much to the motorist. The BRISCOE policy has always been to make the outward appearance of a car express what the Briscoe name has anywhere else in the industry—to build cars as good, and as beautiful, as that the verdict of users will be our best asset for future sales.

That, in a nutshell, is why the BRISCOE has taken Canada by storm. From its wide, luxurious seats to its Auxiliary Electric Starting System—Half Million Dollar Motor in its full stream-lined setting and floating rear axle, the BRISCOE is a real car in every sense of the word.

Two Passenger Roadster, Five Passenger Touring Car, Delivery Car, control of gasoline and engine possible from 30 to 35 miles to the gallon. The equipment includes Auxiliary Electric Starting System. Among the notable features of the BRISCOE, R. H. "4-24" are: 103-inch Wheel Base, 32 x 4 inch Tires, Demountable Rims, Ellipsoid Springs, Dash and rear; Electric Lighting and Starting System; Electric Horn; Speedometer; Gasoline Gauge on Dash; Combination Tool Compartment; Instrument Board; Gasoline Tank Capacity 20 gallons; Trouble Light Socket, Automatic Switch with Key Lock, Tools and Jack.

CHERUB DEVINE

"Tought so. Miss is too. But closer up. You'll get over it."

"Most extraordinary case," the new minister reported Eggings in the servants' quarters. "Thinks I'm mourning for my grandmother when, bless me, the old lady's dead and gone these twenty years."

CHAPTER II.

MR. DEVINE restored on little boisterous out around the lawn, but keeping the lighted doorway in sight, he shuddered to think what would happen to him if an elopid lion or some one should turn off the light.

He marveled at the increased bulk of the cotton.

"Looks as big as the Madison Square Garden," he commented. "Wonder how she'd show off if she was all lighted up?"

Then, getting a new angle, he perceived four yellow rectangles in an upper story. They were windows which faced the rear.

"That's where the help stays, eh?

"Oh, now that he remembered, the servants' quarters were in another wing. A few steps more brought it in view, and there were some lighted windows. He returned to cast a perplexed gaze at the four yellow rectangles. He could make out a shadow on one. It was the silhouette of a man's head, a man with a beard and eyeglasses. He seemed to be reading. Then another shadow flitted across the shade, a slighter, more graceful shape, evidently a woman's.

HE HAD A GLIMPSE OF A SLENDER, RESTED YOUNG WOMAN.

"Nothing ghostly about that," remarked the cherub. "Am I in a boarding house or what?"

Finding a lawn seat, he swung it around, lighted a fresh cigar and leaned back to make a comfortable survey and reflect upon his discovery at leisure. Instead of one there were two persons for whom he could not account. Perhaps there were more—four, five, six, a dozen. Why not? Room was lacking. True, he had been given to understand, both by Bullins and by Timmins, that he had bought a house tenanted only by servants. But persons who read books in the library, dropped lace handkerchiefs and occupied rooms in the main portion of the house could not be servants.

The Cherub wondered and speculated and made wild guesses as to the identity of the persons in those upper rooms. Having no starting point, no clew to follow, he arrived nowhere.

"Give it up," he said. "Guess I'll go to bed."

Why he should rise at the unearthly hour of 6, however, he explained in quite a different way. He acused a few twittering sparrows of waking him. Perhaps, too, it was the sparrows which drove him out to make a circuit of the grounds. Quite incidentally he glanced up at the rear windows he had watched the night before. The closed shutters revealed nothing.

Finding a bench under a tree, he sat down and began to wonder how long it would be before he might call for his breakfast without seeming unseasonable. He was aroused by a crunch, crunch of footsteps on the gravel. Some one was walking down one of the intersecting paths.

During the brief instant that he stared he had a glimpse of a slender, big eyed young woman whose hair hung in a thick, dark braid over one shoulder. Across the hollow of her left arm was a sheaf of freshly cut flowers, in her right hand a pair of shears. And then she saw him.

"Oh!"

Down fell the roses. The shears clattered on the stones.

By the time he could scramble to his feet she had gathered up her flowers and the shears. She stood quite still, eying him with apprehensive expectation.

"Eh?" said the Cherub.

"I—I said nothing," replied the young woman.

"But you squeaked, didn't you?"

"Possibly."

"Well, I was scared out of a year's growth. Next time you feel like squeaking you might send me word, so I can brace myself. I'm here, do you?"

"Why—or—that is—not exactly."

"Neither do I, thank the Lord! Just down the place. But don't mind me. Go ahead with your posy picking."

"Too—you don't object to"—

"Great Scott, no! Cut 'em all if you like."

Only after she was out of sight did Mr. Devine realize that here was another person whose presence at Hewlington Acres was not fully accounted for. The world had to be one of servants. He was sure of that. But when you find a person about the grounds of a private house, spectacle quite at home, and they reply when asked if they live there, "Not exactly," what is one to infer? She couldn't be a guest. Who was there for her to visit? Not a blooming.

"Strikes me I ought to take a census," commended the Cherub.

Going back to the house he rang a bell until Eggings appeared, heavy eyed and bareheaded.

"Breakfast ready yet?"

"Breakfast, sir? It's rather early, sir, but—"

"Early! It's the middle of the forenoon. Go stir things up in the kitchen."

As Eggings departed the hall clock struck 8 and the Cherub sighed. He had not breakfasted at 7 for years. Is this thar'sh how?, thought the Cherub. It was an accomplished fact, and Mr. Devine now soothed by one of his best cigars, sat in the library and waited for breakfast to be announced. He did not feel at his best, sir, but he was not the man to let that worry him.

"Eggs and bacon, sir. It's rather early, sir, but—"

"Early! It's the middle of the forenoon. Go stir things up in the kitchen."

As Eggings departed the hall clock struck 8 and the Cherub sighed. He had not breakfasted at 7 for years. Is this thar'sh how?, thought the Cherub. It was an accomplished fact, and Mr. Devine now soothed by one of his best cigars, sat in the library and waited for breakfast to be announced. He did not feel at his best, sir, but he was not the man to let that worry him.

"Maybe I didn't mention last night, sir," began Timmins suavely, "anything about the Hewlingtons."

"I guess you didn't, Timmins."

"Haven't set it, sir, they haven't gone."

"Haven't gone! Where are they?"

Back at the house, sir. It's all on account of the old lady, sir, Mr. Hewlington's sister, who has took so bad she couldn't go. Perhaps it"—

"It's all right. There's Mr. Hewlington and his sick sister, is there? That all?"

"And the Countess Vecchi, sir."

"The which?" Mr. Devine grabbed the cigar from between his teeth and turned quickly on Timmins.

"The Countess Vecchi, sir, as stayed to look after the aunt. The countess is the married daughter, sir. The count's been dead two years, sir, and"—here Timmins coughed apologetically behind his hand—"the Hewlingtons won't precisely sorry to lose him."

"Not a howling success, eh?"

"Hardly, sir. The countess left him two hours after the wedding."

"She must be a flyer, Timmins," observed the Cherub, and then reflectively: "Countesses are handy in my line. Guess you can book up pretty soon and drive me back to the station. I don't want to disturb the old lady."

"Lord, sir, you won't see any of them! Soon as ever the first they got were coming than they moved into the top floor of the east wing, and there they're shut themselves up like the house was quarantined. Besides, sir, there isn't anodyne you could get to get to the city until the 10:23 tonight."

"Oh, well, there's plenty of time then! Perhaps you'll be able to dig up some more reports before night."

Mr. Devine was thinking of the young person he had seen in the garden. It didn't matter who she was, of course, but it might be interesting to know.

The day passed, however, without further discoveries, although at any moment the Cherub was prepared to find himself confronted either by Mr. Hewington or the countess or the young woman of the roses or some wholly unknown person.

He had seated himself for another solitary and stately meal when a bell rang somewhere, and Eggings excused himself to answer it. Then ensued out in the reception hall a whispered conversation, part of which Mr. Devine could hardly avoid hearing, although he was certain it was not intended for his ears.

"Is that—that dreadful man in there?" asked a voice.

Eggings responded to announce impressively, "The Countess Vecchi, sir."

"Oh, the devil!" Mr. Devine grabbed his napkin and end from between the second and third buttons of his waistcoat and dropped it across his left knee. He had a vague notion that all countesses were large, stout women, who rustled and glared at servants and trimmed robes and a multitude of flags.

Through the doorway stepped the big eyed, slender young person whom he had seen breakfasting in the garden. She wore neither crown nor ermine robes. The braid of dark hair had been transformed into a simple but effective setting for the long oval face.

"Hello! You?" he exclaimed. "Say, honest, you aren't the countess, are you?"

She bowed an admission of the fact, evidently much disconcerted by this greeting.

"Well, I'll be hanged!" continued Mr. Devine. "Say, have a seat, won't you?"

She walked resolutely to the opposite end of the table from Mr. Devine and nervously clasped and unclasped her fingers in her lap.

"My father wishes me to say that the serious condition of my aunt makes it impossible for us to leave the house at present. Just as soon as she improves we will go away."

"Oh, that's all right! Stay as long as you like."

"We don't want to stay at all. My father wishes you to understand that. H—it is very painful for him to accept a favor, even toleration, from you. He charged me not to apologize, however, as the circumstances are beyond our control. I am not apologizing. You see, only explaining."

"Oh, you're doing fine!" said Mr. Devine assuringly. "Anything else the old gentleman wants me to understand?"

"No. I think that is all, except that during your stay," continued the countess, "we shall keep to our rooms."

Show Your Practical Sympathy with Slave-Raided Belgium

If ever Belgium needed sympathy—OUR sympathy—she needs it now! To the ravages of fire, sword and a savage, brutish soldiery, Germany has added deliberate, cold-blooded slave-raiding.

Over 100,000 Belgian workmen have already been snatched from their homes and taken into slavery in unknown places. The mothers, wives and children who beg for their release are driven back by the Huns in utter despair. Neutral protests have failed to change Germany's inhuman purpose, nor can the Allies free Belgian manhood until the Teutons are crushed.

But we can save the women and children through the neutral Belgian Relief Commission, which, is feeding three million of them. We can express our indignation, and our sympathy with our Ally's wrongs, in a practical way, by giving more liberally than ever to the Belgian Relief Fund.

Make this a personal matter! Decide what you can afford to give, and send your subscriptions weekly, monthly or in one lump sum to Local or Provincial Committees, or

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS.

The sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (but not Sub-Agency) on certain conditions.

Duties—Six months residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required, except where residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Six months residence in each of three years after earning homestead patent; also 50 acres extra cultivation. Pre-emption patent may be obtained as soon as homestead patent, on certain conditions.

A settler who has exhausted his homestead right may take a purchase homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land. Live stock may be substituted for cultivation under certain conditions.

CHERUB DEVINE

"Oh, you needn't say that!" protested Mr. Devine.

"But it is my father's desire," added the countess. "And we shall take all our meals there."

"Looks as if I didn't stand very well with your father," commented Mr. Devine. "Is there anything special?"

"He thinks that you are rather—that is, that you—you"— A sudden rush of color came into the olive shaded cheeks of the countess, and her brown eyes began to study the rug pattern. Mr. Devine suddenly decided that sometimes countesses were nice to look at.

"Yes," he said encouragingly, "rather what?"

"Well, rather wild and wicked and reckless, you know. He was afraid that you might become—er—intoxicated."

A cherubic expression spread over the pink and white face of Mr. Devine. "Thinks I'm a sort of a cross between a cowboy and a pirate, eh? Seems to know all about me too!"

"He has read about you in the newspapers," ventured the countess, with a shy, half curious glance which for an instant met the calm, level gaze of Mr. Devine's blue eyes.

"Oh!" The Cherub spoke as one who has seen a light. "Something about how I spent half a million in Paris one week, or was it a million?"

"Half a million, the paper said. But you won it all back at Monte Carlo the next week, didn't you? We read about the big poker game, too—the one that started in Liverpool and ended off Sandy Hook."

"That was a corker!"

"And the champagne supper you gave to forty chorus girls."

"Yes, I believe there were forty. You have certainly kept well posted."

"I—I suppose that I should explain," she began. "Papa, you see, is interested in sociology, the study of social conditions and all that. He reads books about it and gathers statistics. He is writing a pamphlet on the subject."

Mr. Devine nodded uncomprehendingly.

"He has been particularly interested in—in your career. In fact, he has made quite a study of it. He gets everything that is printed about you from a newspaper clipping bureau, and he has the pieces pasted in a big scrapbook."

"Must make lively reading."

"Oh, it does. Papa says that you are a typical product of the present commercial age."

"Well, that's nice of him. I've been called worse names."

"Of course"—here the countess nerved herself to look sternly at the smiling Mr. Devine—"he disapproves very strongly of you. He says it isn't simply that you spend so much money foolishly, but that you set such a bad example to other young men who cannot afford perhaps to follow it. Of course I know that the newspapers often exaggerate," admitted the countess. "Perhaps they have about you."

"Think so? Why?"

The Countess Vecchi gazed at the clear skinned, chubby face of Mr. Devine.

"Well, you don't look at all as I had expected."

"Horns and hoofs not in evidence?" chuckled the Cherub.

"You know what I mean," protested the countess. "One can usually recognize the marks of—of dissipation."

"Oh, you can't always tell by the looks!"

"No, you cannot," she said decidedly, "and papa is quite certain that you are an improper person."

"Too wicked for you to eat dinner with, am I?"

"Papa thinks so."

"And he has read the newspapers, eh? All right. But it's dull business eating alone."

"I couldn't make up for the absence of forty chorus girls." She delivered this parting shot over her shoulder.

But Mr. Devine had not seen the last of the countess for that night. In a moment she came back.

"I—I hope I did not say too much," she began, glancing timidly at him. "You are not offended, are you?"

Mr. Devine smiled reassuringly. "Do I look very savage?"

"I was afraid, you know, that on thinking it over about the clippings and so on you might be angry. If you should meet my father you wouldn't say anything about it, would you?"

There was a look in her eyes which somehow made the Cherub feel as if he had been shaking a club at her.

"Not a word from me. Why, I would act as if we were the best of friends."

"Papa, you know, is merely shocked and indignant at the wild things you do. He thinks that you should be restrained or punished, but I believe that perhaps it is all owing to the influences which surround you—your companions, you know, and the men you meet in business. They are not very nice men, are they?"

"Most of them manage to keep out of jail."

"Yes, of course. But, tell me, don't they drink heavily and gamble and—and do other things which they shouldn't?"

"Well, there are a good many high rollers in our bunch."

"And they lead you on to do as they do, don't they? And there isn't any one to tell you that you are worthy of better things? I knew it! But if you could be brought into contact with a different class, if you could mingle with persons in the higher grades of society, I am sure you would wish to live differently."

"Think I ought to go in for society, do you?" The Cherub's beaming face presented a picture of complacent interest.

"Well, in a way. Of course you would find it difficult to step at once into the best society, but you could make a beginning."

"I could work up, eh?"

"It would be slow, there is so much reserve about our best families. In fact, there are certain circles which you would probably find it impossible to enter."

"Couldn't break in with an ax, I suppose?"

The countess smiled. "You have such an odd way of putting things. It wouldn't be necessary for you to enter the most exclusive sets, but there are plenty of nice people that you could meet—that is, if you wanted to change your associates."

"You think it would be a good scheme, do you?"

"Oh, splendid! You'll not mind my speaking to you about it, will you? You see, I have wanted for a long time to do something of the kind for some one. Our bishop has urged me to go into home missionary work. I have tried, but the villagers here are so unresponsive that I haven't had much success."

"Well, you can try any kind of reform on me that you like."

"Oh, the bishop will be delighted when I tell him!"

"It's what you might call a stroke of luck for both of us, isn't it?" queried the Cherub. "But just how are you going to tackle the job?"

"I'm sure I don't know." Perplexity dwelt in the brown eyes for an instant. "It is my idea, you know, that personal influence and example count for a good deal. If I could only talk to you about your reckless habits"—

"Well, why not? There'll be all day tomorrow."

"But probably I shall not see you again. Papa doesn't expect me to."

"Oh, say, you're not going to stay shut up in your rooms all day, are you?"

"Except for a little walk in the garden right after breakfast."

"About 9 o'clock, eh? I'll be there."

"No, no, you mustn't! That is, you mustn't plan to be there. Of course if it should be purely by accident"—

"I'll see to that part of it, all right. You'll be in the garden, will you?"

The countess hesitated. Then she half whispered, "Possibly," gave him an elusive glance and fled as if to escape the results of her daring.

CHAPTER III.

As to the matter of raiment, Mr. Cherub Devine was fastidious in but one particular. He was fond of fancy waistcoats. His fastidiousness began and ended with waistcoats. His trousers and coats were invariably of the same cloth and cut, summer and winter, year in and year out. His waistcoats betrayed a catholic taste for color and variety. Whenever he felt like indulging himself or celebrating a victory or forgetting a defeat he went out and bought a new waistcoat.

As he was "traveling light," he had brought to Hewington Acres a bare half dozen of them, and of these he had narrowed the choice to two—one a creation of tobacco brown silk with red dots in it, the other a white pique with buttons of smoked pearl. Which should he wear for a Sunday morning stroll in the garden? In the end he tossed a quarter. The brown silk won, much to his satisfaction, for he had a newborn suspicion that the white one made the waistcoat appear more conspicuous than it really was.

Still, he was in the garden at 9 o'clock. Probably it was mere curiosity that led the Cherub to pace up and down the trimly kept walks for a long half hour. He was about to give up the vigil and leave when he caught sight of the countess peering from behind one of the stone gateposts.

Making a pretense of not having seen her, Mr. Devine sauntered by to the gate and seemed surprised when he found her before him. He noted that this morning she was in gray, with something white at her throat. He even remembered that last night she had worn black.

"You must not misunderstand my coming here," she began hurriedly. "It was very wrong of me to think of such a thing. I came only to tell you so."

"Anything new about me in the Sunday papers?"

"No, but papa was talking about you again last night, and he"—

"Oh, that's the trouble! He got out his scrap book. Which chapter of my many wickednesses furnished the text this time?"

"He read to me about that French singer."

"La Belle Savoy?"

"Yes; the one to whom you gave the diamond tiara which was stolen."

"Oh, yes. That was Kittie's birthday present. Nice little thing, Kittie. Her real name is O'Neill, you know."

The countess was retreating up the path, but she still kept her brown eyes fixed on Mr. Devine. There was a curious, apprehensive look in them such as a small boy bestows on a cannon cracker to which he has touched a match.

"Yes, I ought to go directly back."

"But how about the reform? I thought we were to have a talk and that you were going to give me some pointers on breaking into good society. You're not going to quit like this, are you?"

The countess shook her head.

"I was mistaken. It was very silly of me to make such a promise. But I—I— Oh, can't you see? I ought not to be here talking to you at all."

"Well, why not? What's the particular matter with me, anyway?"

"It's only—only that"— The countess glanced about in desperation. "Well, I will ask you. Do you consider yourself a—a gentleman?"

For a moment Mr. Devine stared at her speechless. He had insisted on knowing, and now that he had her answer he was too much astonished to frame a reply. He had expected nothing of this kind. The question opened up before him a wholly unexplored field. In all his career he had never before been confronted with such a query.

"ADELE, WHO IS THIS?" HE DEMANDED.

Here was something new. Did he consider himself a gentleman?

"Now that you mention it," he said, "I don't remember that I have ever been accused of being a perfect gentleman. But what is a gentleman? What's your idea of one?"

"Why—why"— The Countess Vecchi hesitated. "Why, a gentleman is a man of honor, one who has regard for the rights and feelings and sensibilities of others."

"What about his bank account? Doesn't that cut any ice?"

"No," said the countess slowly, a hint of regret in her tone. "A gentleman may be poor. For instance, my father is no longer wealthy, he does not attend church, he shuns social life but he is honorable, he is thoughtful of others; he is a gentleman."

The Defender of the Barricade

A Story of the Paris Commune

By WILLARD BLAKEMAN

The human race lives on the edge of the chasm of war. All modern wars, civilized people having now reached a stage where war is dreaded, may be referred to as stupidity. One of the most stupid contests within the last half century was the uprising of the Paris commune at the close of the Franco-Prussian war in 1871. If ever a country needed peace in which to recover from its wounds France did at that time. And yet a number of impracticable idealists, led by villains, for a time paralyzed the government by fire and sword. And when they had succeeded in acquiring the power to carry out their ideas their whole structure fell to the ground because these ideas were utopian.

The singular feaure of all this is the sincerity and devotion to a cause under which there was no foundation. That the leaders were unscrupulous, as well as idealists, goes without saying. But many of the revolutionists undoubtedly fought and died, actuated by pure motives.

During the period when the communists held Paris by means of barricades erected upon the streets through which the national troops were attacking them, Captain Pierre Le Moyne was ordered to take his company into a narrow street and demolish a barricade, behind which a party of communists were entrenched. There was but little room in which an attacking force could operate, the street being not over thirty feet wide. Captain Le Moyne was obliged to march his men down the narrow lane, the houses of which rose on either side to a height greater than the width of the street. The distance from the beginning of the street to the barricade was about 1,000 feet. From the windows and the roofs of the houses it was to be expected that the advancing troops would be picked off by the communists.

Many a soldier, when he received the order to march into the death trap or heard the reverberation between the houses of the first tap of the drum which announced it, felt that there was little chance of his ever getting out alive. Each stroke on the drum-head sounded sharp and loud and ominous. As the little column moved onward there was a crack from a window, a faint cloud of smoke, and one of the men fell on the pavement. Another crack from a roof on the opposite side of the street, and another man plunged forward on his face.

"At this rate," thought Captain Le Moyne, "by the time we reach the barricade there will be not enough of us left to take it."

"Tap-tap! Tap-tap-tap!" came the drumbeats, while at short intervals a crack of a weapon here and there added to their viciousness.

But as the men advanced the shots came fewer. When one-half the distance had been covered, where there had been a dozen shots a minute there was now only a straggling fire, and the marksmanship was wild.

"Either they are breaking down," said the captain, "or they have concentrated all their force at the barricade."

On marched the troops, reduced by a fifth of their number, till, turning a bend in the street, they came in sight of the barricade. The firing from the windows ceased entirely. The silence, broken only by the sharply reverberating drum taps, was more ominous than if the drums had been deadened by a fusillade. The pile of cobblestones which floated the blood red flag of the commune looked ugly—more ugly because the weapons behind it, aimed down the narrow street, were invisible.

Captain Le Moyne halted his men for the purpose of taking in the situation. He cast quick glances at the upper stories and roofs of the houses on each side. No one was in sight, nor was a single shot fired.

"They are reserving their fire," said the captain. "We shall get it from the windows when we charge the works."

He strained his eyes in an endeavor to get sight of something stirring within. Not even the flag moved, for there was no wind.

Silence before the storm is more depressing than after it breaks. Men standing waiting for a fight to open are more unreliable than in the heat of battle. Le Moyne's soldiers seemed restless. There was no reason for them to move till they received an order to advance, yet they changed position constantly, casting the while glances at the houses above them and the barricade.

Though they expected a hailstorm of bullets, when the order "Forward" was given they felt relieved. Suspense at least was ended. Again came the sharp tap of the drum as the little column moved on without opposition. Evidently the communists were reserving their fire till the last minute. When within a hundred yards of the barricade Captain Le Moyne halted his men again and called on the enemy to surrender. His demand was answered by a single shot.

Expecting this to be a signal for a volley, the captain quickly deployed his men so far as the narrow street would permit and gave the order to fire. A volley of bullets rained upon the stones composing the barricade. There was no response.

Le Moyne was puzzled.

Drawing up his men in two lines, the one behind the other, he ordered them to fix bayonets and advance. A third of the distance was covered, but no volley; another third, with the same result. Captain Le Moyne, who was in advance of his men, went to the barricade, climbed it and looked down on the other side.

There was but one living being there, and that was a woman. She had been wounded by a shot from the troops and lay bleeding on the pavement.

Most of the women who fought with the commune were hags. This woman was not more than twenty years old. She looked up at Le Moyne with a pair of large dark eyes. They expressed a spirit of martyrdom.

It was all plain to Le Moyne. The commune was breaking down. The barricade had been deserted except by this Maid of Orleans, who constituted herself its sole defender.

Le Moyne turned, called on a lieutenant to bring the men to a rest, then went down the barricade to the woman.

"Are you badly wounded?" he asked.

"No; I have a broken leg."

"Who are you?"

"Elise Fourchet."

"What are you doing here alone behind this barricade?"

"I could not get the men to stay. They heard that our defenses are broken down in other parts, and they dared not remain."

"And you?"

"I would not desert."

By this time the soldiers had climbed the barricade and were waving the tricolor of France from its crest. Le Moyne called upon them to carry its defender into a house beside it, going with them as they did so. There was only one person besides the captain and his men, an old woman, who ministered to the wounded girl. A surgeon accompanied the soldiers, and he was called in to set and bandage the broken limb.

Had the damage done by the commune ended with its loss of control perhaps the wholesale slaughter of its votaries which followed would not have taken place. When its leaders found that they were beaten, adopting the motto of rule or ruin, since they could not rule they resolved to ruin. They murdered the archbishop of Paris and other distinguished persons whom they held as hostages. Not content with this, they undertook to destroy the city. Paris was then full of beautiful buildings. Many of these were destroyed, including the most interesting, historically considered, the palace of the Tuileries, the ancient abode of the kings of France.

It was these acts of vandalism that led the government to get rid, so far as possible, of so dangerous a portion of the population of Paris. The captured communists were marched out to the yards of the prisons in which they were confined, stood up with their faces to the walls and shot down by scores. Doubtless many of these believed that they were dying in a sacred cause.

Captain Le Moyne could he have foreseen these horrors would undoubtedly have continued to save his prisoner from the universal sacrifice, though he had but little time, and Elise Fourchet was not in a condition to avail herself of a permitted flight. The only thing the captain could do for her was to leave her with the woman who was caring for her. He marched his men away, but the national troops were pouring into the city, and when Mlle. Fourchet was found wounded and confessed that she had received a bullet while defending a barricade she was removed to a prison.

If the communists received a trial they were tried in large numbers together. When Elise Fourchet was brought before a judge for one of these wholesale sentences, noticing she was of a different class from most of the others, he asked her why she had engaged in such nefarious work.

"I fought to build, not to destroy," was her reply. "I did not know that we were led by bad men. One of our leaders, Cluseret, fought with the Union armies in the late war between the states of North America, and I supposed that a man who had risked his life in the cause of civil liberty must be representing the same cause in France."

The judge was touched by this appeal and remanded the prisoner to prison for further evidence. But the Parisians soon tired of the wholesale slaughter of the communists, and Mlle. Fourchet was never again brought to trial. In time, when all danger of a recurrence of the outbreak had passed, the prison doors of all communists who had not been executed were thrown open, and among those who walked out free was Elise Fourchet.

She ever afterward had a horror of the men who had led so many innocent persons into crime. Not all of them were punished unless by their own consciences. A few escaped, others perished in the havoc they had made, while others were banished from France. Probably no body of men ever set in motion a revolution that involved so much ruin, not only of historic treasures, but of persons they deceived. As Paris is France, their chief devastation was in that city. Just before its capture bands of men and women—such men and women as followed Louis XVI. to the guillotine seventy years before—went from one historic edifice to another, applying petroleum and to petroleum the torch. When the ruin was completed Paris was a very different city from what it had been before. How that art treasure, the Louvre, escaped will always remain a wonder. While Elise Fourchet was long remembered as one of the heroines of the commune, she never afterward affiliated with communists. And as for the commune leaders, she detested them.

With paints and powders so plentiful and so cheap nowadays a girl does not need to worry half so much about her complexion as she used to do.

Woman denies that she goes from one extreme to the other and then proceeds to button her shoe with a hairpin.

THE MINISTRY UNDER CHURCH UNION

By Major The Rev. R. Bruce Taylor, Montreal.

Considerable misunderstanding exists as to the status of the ministry in the United Church. The permanance of the tie between ministers and people has always been a strong point with Presbyterians. They have felt that the itinerating system of the Methodists was justified mainly where the ministry was of a less highly educated type than the Presbyterian ministry, and where there was danger that a man might say all that he had to say in a limited term of years. The system hardly gave a minister time to settle down before he was once again on the move, and it prevented that close personal relation between minister and people which subsists when the minister has held his pulpit for many years and has seen half his congregation grow up from childhood. Such a man has a hold that no mere preaching gift can give. He has proved himself in all the intimacies of the pastoral relation. He knows his people in their joys and sorrows. He remembers the hard and wounding places in the lives of those before him. He never can preach in the void, for every condition and circumstance of life he has known to be represented in the stories of some of his people. Our Presbyterian system has been preserved practically intact in the United Church. The ministry is to be without a time limit. The itinerating system is to be dropped.

At present when a charge becomes vacant the congregation fixes its choice on some minister, and the matter has to come before two Presbyteries, the Presbytery under the jurisdiction of which the minister has been working, and the Presbytery to which the congregation that is giving the call belongs. In the United Church the congregation in the same way will send a call to the minister, and this call will come before the Settlement Committee, which in this manner takes the place of the Presbytery.

The special paragraph in the Basis of the Union dealing with the congregation's choice of a minister runs thus: "Any pastoral charge in view of a vacancy may extend a call or invitation to any properly qualified minister or ministers, but the right of appointment shall rest with the Settlement Committee, which will report to the Conference for information only."

Two innovations have been made in the procedure with reference to the supply of men for the ministry, and in both cases they seem to meet felt wants. Only those who are in the work of the ministry know how often men feel that they have reached the limit of usefulness in a particular charge. They may have been so pressed with labor that their book work and hard study have got behind and their freshness is gone; or some issue may have arisen which has introduced unpleasantness in their lives and rightly or wrongly set the congregation against them; or some sorrow may have come into their home and they feel that a change would take them away from painful associations and give back to them their joy. Under the present system they can get a change only by entering into public competition, and so their secret becomes known to everybody. They are put in the humiliating position of candidating against other men who may be twenty or thirty years junior to them. Under the new system such a man can intimate to the Settlement Committee that he would welcome a change. And a congregation can act in the same way. One great problem of the Presbyterian Ministry has been to reach the man who has been inefficient or indolent. Inefficiency acts have been passed and have been found difficult in operation. In the United Church when a congregation is able to intimate that on its part it is ready for a change, it will avoid tedious and invidious process. The second innovation that has been introduced has been borrowed from the practice of the Established Church of Scotland. There, if a vacancy is not filled up within six months, the Presbytery must intervene and fill up the vacancy itself. There are few evils in congregational life greater than a prolonged vacancy. The provision in the United Church following these lines is that "when a pastoral charge about to become vacant at the end of the conference year fails to give a call or invitation within the time specified by the General Council, the Settlement Committee shall make an appointment."

The government of the United Church is to be in the hands of sessions, presbyteries, the conference and the general council. Sessions and presbyteries are just what we have been used to. The conference is practically a strengthening of the synod which in Presbyterianism has never been of much service. The conference is to meet once a year, and is to have oversight of a great deal of matter that at present overloads the general assembly; broadly spaking, is to have the oversight of the religious life within its bounds and to deal with matters arising out of the pastorate. The general council, which will correspond to the general assembly, will meet once in two years and will deal with the general policy of the Church. Such a policy is a better thing than we have at present.

Amazing Power of Bon-Opto To Make Weak Eyes Strong

Doctor Says It Strengthens Eyesight 50 per cent in One Week's Time in Many Instances

A Free Prescription You Can Have Filled and Use at Home

Victims of eye strain and other eye weaknesses and those who wear glasses, will be glad to know that according to Dr. Lewis there is real hope and help for them. Many whose eyes were failing say they have had their eyes restored by this remarkable prescription and many who once wore glasses say they have thrown them away. One man says, after using it: "I was almost blind. Could not see to read at all. Now I can read everything without my glasses, and my eyes do not hurt any more. At night they would pain dreadfully. Now they feel fine all the time. It was like a miracle to me." A lady who used it says: "The atmosphere seemed hazy with or without glasses, but after using this prescription for fifteen days everything seems clear. I can read even fine print without glasses." Another who used it says: "I was bothered with eye strain caused by overworked, tired eyes, which induced fierce headaches. I have worn glasses for several years, both for distance and work, and without them I could not read my own name on an envelope or the typewriting on the machine before me. I can do both now and have discarded my long distance glasses altogether. I can count the fluttering leaves on the trees across the street now, which for several years have looked like a dim green blur to me. I cannot express my joy at what it has done for me."

It is believed that thousands who wear glasses can now discard them in a reasonable time and multitudes more will be able to strengthen their eyes so as to be spared the trouble and expense of ever getting glasses. Eye troubles of many descriptions may be wonderfully benefited by the use of this prescription at home. Go to any active drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets. Drop one Bon-Opto tablet in a fourth of a glass of water and let it dissolve. With this liquid bathe the eyes two to four times daily. You should notice your eyes clear up perceptibly right from the start, and inflammation and redness will quickly disappear. If your eyes bother you even a little it is your duty to take steps to save them now before it is too late. Many hopelessly blind might have saved their sight if they had cared for their eyes in time.

Note: Another prominent Physician to whom the above article was submitted, said: "Yes, the Bon-Opto prescription is truly a wonderful eye remedy. Its constituent ingredients are well known to eminent eye specialists and widely prescribed by them. I have used it very successfully in my own practice on patients whose eyes were strained through overwork or misfit glasses. I can highly recommend it in case of weak, watery, aching, smarting, itching, burning eyes, red lids, blurred vision or for eyes inflamed from exposure to smoke, sun, dust or wind. It is one of the very few preparations I feel should be kept on hand for regular use in almost every family." Bon-Opto, referred to above, is not a patent medicine or a secret remedy. It is an ethical preparation, the formula being printed on the package. The manufacturers guarantee it to strengthen eyesight 50 per cent in one week's time in many instances or refund the money. It can be obtained from any good druggist and is sold in this city by J. S. McKeown, W. H. Lattimer.

A Farmer's Son

His Father and Mother Stood by Him With Parental Affection

By GREGORY MOORE

They say that doctors and clergymen see more of humanity as it is than any other class of men, but I question if the endless panorama of incidents typifying the different phases of human life is witnessed by any class that every day passes before bankers. Sometimes whole stories are enacted before us spread over a term of years. I am the repository of one such story that I watched from its beginning to its climax.

One afternoon a weather beaten old farmer with silky white hair scattered over his head came to my desk and, pulling out a wallet, asked for a draft on Denver for $200 in favor of Thomas Williams. He counted out the money, and then, having nothing to do while the draft was being prepared, began to tell me the beginning of this story.

"I'm sendin' the money," he said, "to my boy out in Colorado. He went out there a year ago, takin' some money with him that I give him, but he hasn't had much luck, and it's all gone. First he got sick; then when he got well he went prospectin' and struck somepin that looked good, but some other fellers jumped his claim, whatever that means, and took it all away from him.

"Then Tom got sick ag'in and went to a horsepittle and stayed there three months. Now he's got out of the horsepittle and lookin' about for somepin. I'm sendin' this money to give him a chanct. Tom's his mother's pet, and she lays awake nights worryin' about him. I'm mighty fond of the boy myself somehow.

"When he got old enough to work I wanted him to help me on the farm. He tried it for awhile, but I see purty quick he didn't take to it. He was too smart to be contented to follow a plow same 's his father, who didn't never get no eddication. So I says to him one day: 'Tommy, reckon you'd better go to the city and work that a-way. This don't suit you.' He was mighty well pleased at that. It almost broke ma's heart to part with him, but she knowed it was better for him and let him go.

"Tom didn't like it in town so well as he thought he would. Leastaways he didn't stay long in the place he went into. They must 'a thought a heap of him, though, for they raised his salary twice, so he wrote me. But he got into a fight with one of the head clerks and got himself discharged. He said the head clerk accused him of stealin' some money.

"Tom was allus an ambitious little chap, and after leavin' his place he concluded he'd go west and try and do somepin big, for ma and me agin we got too old to work. So we scraped up $500 and give it to him, and he"—

At this moment a clerk laid the farmer's draft on my desk, and the first chapter of his story was finished, for he began to count over his soiled and torn bills, now and again wetting his thumb on his lip as he turned them up. Then, leaving them to me and carefully folding his draft, he put it in his wallet, crammed the wallet down into the bottom of his pocket and with a "Goodby, Mr. Cashier," left the bank.

The second chapter of the story is very short. There is hardly enough in it to make a chapter, but there is a good deal beneath the few words required to tell it. A girl of eighteen came to the bank, laid down $24, nearly all in silver coin, and asked for a draft to cover the amount.

"To whom will you have it made payable?" I asked.

"Tom Williams," in a soft voice, almost a whisper.

I ordered the draft made out, and the girl stood waiting. Unlike the farmer, she didn't tell all I would have liked to know, so I asked:

"Is Tom Williams your brother?"

"No," she replied, looking down on the floor.

I had not liked the indications as to Tom's character as they appeared in his father's account of him, and now that money was going to him from his sweetheart I began to despise him. I handed the girl the draft and had a good opportunity to study her, for she never once looked up at me. She went out with it hugged up against her heart, as though she loved it because she had saved it for Tom.

My next visitor in behalf of Tom was his mother. She stood by my desk emptying on it from a carpetbag a lot of bills and silver and copper coins. Not knowing who she was, I asked what I should do with the money, and she said, "Send it to Tom." By this time I was not likely to forget Tom and asked if she wished a draft for Thomas Williams. She said she did. I turned her funds over to a clerk to count, and he reported that they amounted to $843.47. I ordered the draft to be made out, placed a chair before the old lady and said, with a view to my enlightenment:

"Mr. Williams pretty busy nowadays?"

"No, pa ain't busy. He's sick. I wish we had our boy here to help us. He's out in Colorado perspectin'. He says he's struck a mine or a-goin' to strike a mine or somepin and wants some money for grubstakin' or somepin like that. We're sendin' him all we kin jest now, but hope to send him some more bimeby. We had some money saved up for old age, but we've been a-drawin' on it for Tom, and this is all there is left."

When she went out with her draft I found myself boiling with indignation at this worthless scamp who was sucking the lifeblood out of his old father and mother—even his sweetheart.

There was a visit from the sweetheart after this to ask for a draft of $18.50, which convinced me that Tom had accepted the last amount she had sent him. Then one day the old farmer came in pale and trembling, evidently just out of a sickbed, with the check of a mortgage company for $1,000. He asked for a draft in exchange for it payable to this vampire of a son. We bankers make it a rule to mind our own business, but I had reached a point where I could no longer refrain from warning this poor old man.

"So you have mortgaged your farm to send money to your son?" I said.

"Yes; Tom's in powerful need of money. The mine he thought was goin' to turn out so fine petered out. He says it closed up as he went down instead of openin'."

"And you lost all the money you sent him for the development?"

"Yes, we lost it," replied the old man, with a tremulous voice.

"Aren't you afraid you'll lose this too?"

"I dunno. Tom's got another mine. He says he's sure o' this."

"Of course it's no business of mine, but I don't like to see you, an old man, mortgaging your farm to send money to a son who should be giving you money instead of you giving it to him. Suppose you can't pay the interest on the mortgage when it is due. You will lose your farm."

The old man stood wiping his face with a bandanna handkerchief, the picture of misery.

"I know what yer mean," he said, "but ma she won't keep back anything the boy wants. She never did. I always told her she'd spoil him."

"I'm afraid she has spoiled him. You should know that your son is not wasting your money at gambling or something like that and telling you that he's on the verge of making a fortune in a mine before risking any more money on him."

"That's what I tell ma."

At this moment the draft was laid before me, but instead of handing it to him I said:

"Hadn't you better think this over?"

He stood, his eyes fixed on vacancy, slowly swaying or tottering, and I knew there was a great contest going on in his mind. His love for his boy conquered.

"I'm 'bliged to you, Mr. Cashier, and mebbe you're right, but I allus believed in my Tom, and I can't go back on him now."

I handed him the draft, and he scuffled slowly out of the bank.

The old man must have borrowed all he could on his farm, considering the transaction as a sale, for he failed to pay the first interest that fell due on the mortgage. I knew this, because I saw in a newspaper a legal notice of foreclosure proceedings on his farm.

"Well," I sighed, laying down the paper, "the old man has given his home to his reprobate son. He has nothing more to give. I shall not suffer again at seeing him come into the bank to do what I can't prevent his doing."

On the street the same day I met the young girl who I was sure was Tom's sweetheart. I stopped her and asked:

"Is Farmer Williams turned out of house and home?"

"Not yet, sir."

"But he will be?"

"I suppose so."

"Has his son sent him anything to help him?"

"No, sir. He wrote to say that he was awful sorry to see the farm go, but he could not help it."

"H'm! Do you think a son who will treat his father and mother like that would treat a wife any better?"

Tears came into her eyes. I was ashamed at giving her this useless pain. I walked on.

About a month after this a strapping young fellow with a fine, manly face came into the bank and said he wished to open an account. I assented, and he made a deposit of $49,506.

"Will you please leave your signature in this book?" I said. He took up a pen and wrote:

"Thomas Williams."

"You Tom Williams?" I exclaimed.

"Yes. What do you know about me?"

"Son of Farmer Williams?"

"Yes."

"Sold your mine?"

"Yes; I've sold a mine in Colorado, or two-thirds of it. This money I'm leaving with you is the first cash payment. There are two others of $50,000 each."

"Has your father's farm gone to the mortgagee?"

"No; I'm in time for that. I was afraid I wouldn't be, though. Anyway, I'd have bought it back. If it hadn't been for the money father sent me I couldn't have carried the deal through. I expected the farm to go for the mine."

"And the young girl to whom we gave drafts payable to your order?"

He colored and said: "It's in with the rest, but she and I'll be one anyway. I shall transfer two-thirds of this deposit to father. I took him and mother in for thirds."

I went to see the old farmer and his wife and found them jubilant. "I told you I had confidence in my boy," the farmer said. "He was always straight."

I attended Tom Williams' wedding and kissed the bride. I couldn't help it.

What a Kiss Cost

A Story of Southern Persons Long Ago

By F. A. MITCHEL

My granddaughter Marian was my favorite of all my descendants of her generation. What was the cause of my feeling for her is hard to specify. She was Marian Whitlock, and there was but one Marian Whitlock. It was not that she was a strong character, for she was not. She was not only heedless, but blind to the result of her heedlessness. But she was lovable. Indeed, she was loved through her faults rather than her good qualities. At least I, her grandmother, loved her on that account.

Marian used to tell her grandmother more about what was going on between her and her young men associates than any one else. Why she did this I don't know unless it was because I realized and therefore sympathized with the conditions under which she labored. Candor compels me to admit that she possessed traits which had shown themselves in me when I was her age, and it is more than probable that she inherited them from me. While I endeavored to guide her out of the effects of her indiscretions I never lectured her for having been indiscreet. I realized that indiscretion was a trait born in her and was not likely to be eradicated till she had grown beyond the age when it would lead her into trouble.

Marian used to come to me in a light hearted way with her perplexities, but one day she gave evidence that what she had to tell was of a serious nature.

"Grandma," she said, "I have gone and done it now and no mistake."

"What is it, child?" I asked.

"You know Elliot Walker?"

"Yes."

"Well, Elliot and I were in the music room, I at the piano, he turning over the sheets."

She paused. I gave her time.

"Elliot bent lower and lower over my shoulder. I suppose I should have moved, but I didn't."

"Well?"

"He kissed me."

I refrained from comment on this and waited for the denouement.

"I don't know what it was that prompted me to act as I did. I was certainly not offended. I had expected when I didn't move that he would kiss me and should not have thought much of him if he hadn't. It was not that I was prudish; it was—well, I don't know what it was, unless it was Old Nick got into me. But I arose from the piano, looked daggers at him and, turning, started to leave the room. What was my surprise to see Herbert Kenworthy standing in the door of the music room. Elliot and I had not been aware of his approach, and he had seen the whole performance."

"What did you do next?" I asked anxiously.

"Why, you see, I couldn't very well say that I had encouraged Elliot to kiss me, could I?"

"Go on."

"And I couldn't say that I was not really offended."

"What did you do?"

"Why, I went on out of the room."

"And didn't go back?"

"Yes, after a few minutes."

"And what did you say?"

"Nothing about what had happened. I began to chat with Herbert, while Elliot sat looking very much embarrassed."

"Oh, Marian!"

I was aware that these two young men were rivals for Marian's favor. We were southern persons, and in the south our men are hot blooded. Herbert Kenworthy had seen Elliot Walker give Marian what appeared to be an insult, which she could only resent as a woman. If trouble between the young men did not result then I was no judge of human nature. All this flashed through my brain, and I said to Marian:

"Did your two visitors show any animosity toward each other?"

"None whatever. But, grandma, I have heard since that which leads me to fear"—

"What?"

"I have been told that this morning they were playing billiards together at the club and Elliot charged Herbert with shoving up points that he had not made. Herbert called Elliot a liar, and Elliot struck him."

I did not ask to hear any more. I knew well that the young men would not play billiards together after what had occurred except for a purpose, that purpose being to make it appear that a different cause from the real one had resulted in an animosity which would doubtless lead to a duel, their object being to keep Marian's name from being involved in the affair.

"What have you heard since?" I asked anxiously of Marian.

"Nothing."

I doubted if Marian foresaw what would be the probable result of all this, and I dreaded to tell her. Nevertheless if she did not prevent a meeting between these two young men and one of them killed the other, she being responsible for the act, her life would be blighted.

"Marian," I said, "you must go at once to Herbert Kenworthy and tell him that it was your fault that Elliot kissed you."

"Oh, grandma, I can't!"

"This quarrel has nothing to do with billiards. It is about you. Herbert has constituted himself your champion, understanding that Elliot insulted you."

"I have thought that myself," said Marian, paling.

"A duel will surely follow."

Marian looked at me with a frightened expression that excited my pity, but I knew that it was no time to indulge in anything but action. I impressed upon her the necessity of her preventing any further trouble between her two suitors. During our conversation it came out that she had made a choice between all her suitors, including the two in question. This she revealed to me, though I was the only person she confided it to. She loved Elliot Walker. Thinking she needed my support, I told her that I would go with her to see Herbert Kenworthy. She made no reply for awhile to this proposition. I could see that a struggle was going on within her, but I was ignorant as to just what it was. Presently she rose.

"What are you going to do?" I asked.

"I am going to see Herbert."

"Do you wish me to go with you?"

"No, grandma."

This was the first indication of strength I saw in her, and it was some relief. She left me, and later I heard her pony phaeton on the gravel walk. I waited anxiously for her return. When she came I saw by the expression on her face that she had not succeeded in her object.

"Well?" I said interrogatively.

"I went to Herbert's house," she said, "called him out and we had a conference on the veranda. I told him I had heard that he and Elliot had had an altercation. I inferred that he had seen Elliot kiss me and me resent the act. I begged that he would not constitute himself my defender. He replied that he had not done so, but admitted that he and Elliot had got into a quarrel from words that had passed between them relative to Elliot's act. I then admitted that I had encouraged Elliot to kiss me.

"He looked very much surprised and pained at this. I knew that his contempt had passed from Elliot to me. I told him that since I had exonerated Elliot I should expect him to apologize to Elliot for anything he might have said under a misunderstanding. After some thought he told me that any woman in such a case, to prevent trouble between two of her men friends, would assume the blame. There was no sin in my doing so. The affair had gone too far to be smoothed over. I argued with him for some time, but could get nothing out of him. Then I came away."

"You must see Elliot. The one who has given the challenge is the one to offer the olive branch."

"I have seen Elliot. The challenge had come from Herbert, Elliot having struck him. Elliot apologized to me humbly for having kissed me. He admitted that the scene in the billiard room had been concocted to keep my name out of the quarrel. He would gladly on my account put a stop to it, but could not refuse a challenge without being disgraced."

"And as the matter stands the two men will meet tomorrow morning?"

"I suppose so."

The case was a knotty one. The only way I could see out of it was for Marian to choose between the two men. She might tell Herbert that she loved Elliot, but I doubted if this would prevent a meeting that had become a public matter and with which she was not known to be connected. It would probably save Elliot from injury, but this would not be fair to Herbert.

"The only hope I see to prevent this meeting, Marian," I said, putting my arms about her, "is to tell them both that you love Elliot. That would, I think, dispose of the matter. Herbert would withdraw his challenge."

I could feel her shiver in my arms at this alternative, but she said nothing, though later she told me that Elliot had made her no proposal.

The day was now ended, and nothing had been accomplished. I determined to leave Marian free to act for herself till the last minute; then if she did not act I would endeavor to force her to do so. We remained in the same room through the night without disrobing. After 12 o'clock I fell asleep on a lounge. I was aroused at dawn by Marian.

"Come," she said.

Without asking her where we were to go I went with her. I knew. She knew where the meeting would take place, and we proceeded there. Since Elliot had not proposed to her I could not see what she would do. We waited an hour a short distance from the field and finally saw one party come on to it, then the other. The seconds were engaged at the preliminaries when Marian advanced, I following her.

"What will stop this affair?" she asked.

There was no reply from either. Marian asked all to withdraw except the principals.

"I can think of only one way to stop it," she said. "I love one of you gentleman. Will you both agree to shake hands if I name the one I love?"

At this they were all attention. Then Herbert nodded an assent, and Elliot followed.

"The one who kissed me," said Marian and covered her face with her hands.

Elliot started for her, but I was too quick for him and carried her away.

The duel did not take place. There is a sequel to this story, but it is a long one. Elliot was a long while in gaining Marian's consent to marry him. That kiss kept him from another for more than a year.

Must Have Control Of Destinies of France In the New War Cabinet

IT may not be altogether easy for the outsider to realize what scientific progress affected in the process of reconstruction which marked the last days of 1916 in the French War Office. They mean something point in the reform; in fact the crux of the whole matter, lies in an alteration of the balance of power between the French Government, represented by the War Office, and the General Quartier General; an alteration which has for its object the creation of a war committee had called to accomplish. It had always been understood that, from August, 1914, that in the eventuality of a war, plenary powers would be vested in the commander-in-chief while the Government and War Office would merely act as his supports in the task of bringing the war to a rapid conclusion. This theory of a prompt ending of hostilities had always been made the basis of the French ideas of government organisation in the event of war. That it should have worked as well as it did during the first period of the present struggle is probably due to the elasticity for adaptation, as well as to the ability of the men in control at the front. The system, however, had great disadvantages; it created two entirely separate authorities in the country, the Government and the

M. ALBERT THOMAS.

Grand Quartier General), which, while entirely friendly to each other, could not, from the very nature of things, cooperate to the extent which it proved to be absolutely necessary in a great war.

Economically and diplomatically there was the centre of direction, while military affairs were confined to the heads of the Grand Quartier General. The War Office, in Paris, was no longer the point of contact of Government and the military chief, and the result was a division in the Executive which daily proved more unsatisfactory.

The task, therefore, which lay before M. Briand, as the chief of the secret committee of the Chamber and the Senate, was the practical reunion of power between Cabinet, War Office, and the commander-in-chief. The starting point of the reform was the appointment of General Lyautey as Minister of War. This meant that the direction of the War reverted to the seat of the Government, while at the same time remaining in the hands of a brilliantly successful soldier. The War Committee, formed of five members of the Cabinet, continues its functions, but whatever decisions arrive at in the military order it is General Lyautey's task and responsibility to carry them out. He is the link, the only channel through which Government decisions will reach the commander-in-chief on the various fronts, and it will also be through him that M. Albert Thomas, who from Undersecretary has become Minister of Armaments, will receive communications from the Grand Quartier General.

This centralization of power has not been effected with regard to the Ministry of War alone, it relates to every department. M. Albert Thomas, for instance, now stands above the control of guns and shells which he formerly Undersecretary, will now have the entire producing power of the country at his disposal, and will be responsible for providing the army and the Aviation Service with all the material required. In the initiation of schemes for the production of material M. Albert Thomas is taking on powers which were, before the reorganization, entirely in the hands of the commander-in-chief. He will use them subject to the final sanction of the Minister of War. Though, of course, the new balance of power between the commander-in-chief of some of his privileges, he yet remains the entire master of the strategy on his particular front. In that respect General Nivelle will have exactly the same opportunities as General Joffre, and the record of General Lyautey in Morocco proves him to be perfectly capable of exercising undisputed authority as responsible head, while allowing perfect independence in tactical matters to the men whose part it is to lead the armies in the field.

The War Lord of Laughter

AMONG all the war-lords one would not look for Mr. Bairnsfather, whose war-cartoons have made England laugh. To these he has lately added a book called "Bullets and Billets," and his "Fragments from France" are humorous, but they are serious, also, in their revelation of the character of the author. "He makes you laugh at the most desolating things, not because they are laughing matters, but because of their curious juxtaposition of incongruities in khaki and mud, they become friends for life. Old Bill is the type of the target vacuum who has been 'out since Mons,' and Bert is the new recruit who has yet to learn the trivial ways of war. They are both unforgettable. The former, with his walrus moustache, cutty-pipe, and Balaklava helmet, and the latter, with his smooth upper lip, falling jaw, and dangling cigaret, finding his surprise and relief in the ways up against the superbly cynical philosophy of Bill. What, for instance, could be more typical of the regular cracking humor of so many of our fighting men than the picture of Bert, arriving in the trenches and finding a hole looks like a magnified fashioned doorway in the earth, and asking Bill, 'Is this right, 'eadquarters?' to be told—'Yes, change at Oxford Circus!' Or the laughter-provoking picture of Bert discovering an against some sandbags beside a shattered cottage, and saying, 'Ow long are you up for, Bill?' Seven years. 'Ev lucky—I'm duration.' There seems to be a subtle hint here as to the probable length of the war! And I always like the recent picture illuminated by star-shell, with the brave lads all lined up against the parapet with a piece of steel on the point of his bayonet in the process of being coaxed into a perfect shrapnel. The notice-board with 'To the Front' and 'To Wipers' says all that is necessary with commendable brevity.

Not unlike his drawings is the conversation of his first night in the trenches. Most writers would see here an opportunity for pathos; but Second-Lieutenant Bairnsfather has begun his romantic life in the mud of Flanders.

"Here we were, now wetter than ever, and decidedly cold, sitting in this hygroscopic catacomb, and the rain came. We jibbed for a fire; a dire was decided on. But it was a bit of a bucket—it started life as a biscuit-tin few bits of damp wood, but no coke. We had some once, I'm sure!' Why, of course, we built it into the dam!' Down came the dam, out came the coke, and in came the water. However, we preferred the water to the cold; so, finally, after many exasperating efforts, we got a fire going in the bucket. Five minutes' blaze followed by disaster. The fire-bucket proceeded to emit such large volumes of sulfurous smoke that in a few moments we couldn't see a lighted match. We stuck it a short time longer, then we dowsed it and into the water and out into the air, shooting out of our mud bowl to the surface like snakes when you pour water down their holes. Time now, 9 a.m. No sleep; rain, water plus smoke. A board meeting held immediately decides to give up sleep and dugout for that night. A motion to try and construct a shrapnel with an overreaching fuel is defeated by five votes to four. Dawn is breaking—my first night in the trenches comes to an end."

Men of twenty-eight have not accumulated a great store of memories and deal for their admirers, but Mr. Bairnsfather has many.

"He was one of that numerous galaxy of British men who, without any external persuasion, linked up at the beginning. He was 'in it' from the early days of Armageddon, and before the expiry of three months from the fatal 4th of August, he found himself a second lieutenant, singing about in the mud of Flanders." He is now twenty-eight years old and a captain of his regiment. The fact which tells you that people most is that his name is a real name, and not a pseudonym, for he is the son of Major Thomas Bairnsfather, of the Cheshires, who is acting as District Recruiting Officer at Strafford-on-Avon, where the family has lived for many years. The Bairnsfathers are military folk, and Bruce was born in India, but a boy he was brought to England, and, like the Australs, of Jemmy Atkins and the army, Rudyard Kipling, he was sent to the famous school at Westward Ho, which everybody knows is the scene of Kipling's schooldays and the sanctuary of Stalky & Co. He inherited the artistic sense from his father, who is a keen lover of considerable ability, and his earliest sketches are memories of his Indian experiences."

German Writer Admits Defeat

THE intimate censor, like Monsieur Prudhomme, finds that their articles slip into the press which make us gasp when we read them. Such a brilliant essay in the Frankfurter Zeitung from the pen of no less a personage than Celestine Hof-Rat Professor Friedrich Meinecke, of Freiburg University, one of the German historians of the first rank. The professor tells us that the present European war-plan collapsed at the Marne, Paris in the Battle of, the Marne." This idea has long been current in the Allied press, but not in the Teutonic publicist, of any standing has endorsed the view that the "strategic retreat" at the Marne and the failure to take Verdun must be counted as German defeats. Professor Meinecke has a new theory as regards the commencement of the conflict, for he tells us that "from a political sense did Germany begin the war as a defensive war." The while "in a military sense" it has been diverted a "knock-out war." The professor writes:

"Our first object was to overthrow France rapidly, and to compel her to make peace. As it was our interest rapidly to reduce the strength of our enemies, this peace would probably have been a moderate one. But, even if we succeeded, we could then turn quickly, carrying on the small military idea against Russia also, with the best prospect of success and then, under favorable conditions, conclude the final peace with England, who would have been left alone on the continent. This peace, also, like the first peace concluded with France, would have had to assume a high degree the character of a compromise, since we could not hope to overthrow England's naval supremacy.

"This whole program, brilliantly begun, collapsed at the gates of Paris in the Battle of the Marne. This battle was not a tactical victory, but it was a great strategical success for the French. Perhaps our progress would not have collapsed if we had carried through our original strategical idea with perfect strictness, keeping our main forces firmly together, and, for the time, abandoning East Prussia."

Dr. Meinecke goes on to sketch subsequent developments, and says unhesitatingly: We took to trench-warfare, the enemy did likewise; we lifted, and failed, to break through both on the Yser and on the Bzura and Rawaka; the French tried, and failed, to break through in Champagne. The professor then passes to Verdun and the Somme, and his comments run:

"The argument used among us a year ago was that the decision must be sought not in the intangible affairs East, but in the concentrated West, the nerve-center of the enemy force. The decision, however, must be a decision in the field—old soldiering at a break-through and rolling up of the enemy battle-lines. Such a decision was regarded as no longer possible in the West. But a decision better adapted to the inexperienced will of the war of position and to psychological conditions, it should, in fact, break in at a particularly critical position, and at one of the most important French fortresses, and so prove to the French that they could no longer win, and that they would do better to end a war which had lost all prospect for them. That was the origin of our undertaking against Verdun. In this idea the new politico-military idea led only a heroic speech.

"If our original successes could have been pursued at the time, and to their goal, our political purpose would perhaps have been attained. But meanwhile our enemies pulled themselves together for still more gigantic achievements. We learned from us universal military service and the conversion of industry for the production of a mighty supply of guns and ammunition. At the same time she leaned upon the industrial strength of America and so, while Japan helped also, she was able to equip the new Russian formations with the appearance of which she smashed the year before. Thus in June and July, 1916, it came to the great double offensive of, our enemies in East and West. The result was that we had to interrupt our operations against Verdun, and the enemy offensive also achieved partial successes, especially in the East, although the rest failed to break through and roll up our lines from the north. Of these, in spite of an intensity of attack and superiority in technical resources far greater than in our break-through in Galicia. This was due to the fact that, in the interval, had still further developed the possibilities of trench-warfare."

Professor Meinecke says that the Battle of the Somme has led to the conviction in Germany that it is no longer possible for either side to arrive at a "military decision" in the near future, and concludes by saying that Germany's offer of peace arises from

"the idea that the sacrifices demanded by the continuation of the war no longer bear any relation to the military results which can still be expected, and that a peace-offer like, intelligent, and wise to abandon the intention of conquest, which after all does not lead to destruction, and to seek a reasonable compromise."

FOR YOUNG FOLKS

Every Time Story About a Greek Girl.

MYSTERY OF A QUEER VASE.

What Happened When a Curious Little Person Lifted the Lid—Many Woes Came Out to Bedevil the People of the World—A Good Deal Harder to Cram.

Tonight said Uncle Ben, to little Ned and Polly Ann, I am going to tell you a story that has come down from antiquity. It is about

A PEEPING GIRL.

Curiosity is wanting to know about things that don't concern you; it nearly always gets folks into trouble.

There was Pandora. I think I shall have to tell you about her.

Pandora was a lovely young Grecian girl. She had everything that heart could wish for when she was born. The gods who lived in their beautiful place on Mount Olympus had each given her a special, lovely present. She received beauty from one, health from another, talent from another, and so on.

There was one old god, though, who thought he would play a joke on the others. So he waited until the other gods had all given their gifts, and then he gave Pandora the gift of curiosity.

Though Pandora as she grew up was found to be given to poking her pretty little nose into things that didn't concern her and asking as many questions that her guardian, old Epimetheus, was often greatly put out. She was such a charming girl and so clever that he overlooked this little fault.

But little faults sometimes make as great trouble as great big naughtinesses; and so Pandora's case this turned out to be especially true.

Old Epimetheus had stored away in safe place in his house a very costly vase. The vase was always covered and in a place where no one was allowed to go.

Pandora often wondered about the vase and one day asked Epimetheus so many questions about it that he thought it wise to lecture her every day and then about staying out of the room in which the vase was kept.

But he was warned in vain, for next to get more curious she became about the vase.

"I don't see how one little peep could hurt it or me," she said to herself.

So one day when Epimetheus was away from home Pandora crept into the room.

She was so frightened that she did not know what to do. Epimetheus rushed into the room, but the vase was nearly empty. Only one little spot remained in the bottom of the vase. His name was Hope. Now, Hope is a very pretty and all sorts of evil spirits had flown away to wander about the world and do harm. So, still, since Hope is somethous, have Hope with us to comfort us when the evil spirites are tormenting us too much.

An Interesting Garden.

One of the most interesting gardens in the world, to children at least, is that in Berlin. The owner of the place has adorned it with statuary that every child would be glad to see, because there he has placed groups of fairies and pixies and all sorts of the queer little people that children love. A marble piece of sculpture in the garden is that depicting Little Red Riding Hood and the wolf. Every child has read that fearsome story and rejoiced that the little girl was saved from the fangs of the cruel beast.

Ohio Legislature.

The Ohio legislature has proclaimed the quill a song bird. A piece of food, however, will continue to be its fascinating prince.

AUDITORS' CERTIFICATE.

We have audited the books of the Standard Reliance Mortgage Corporation for the year ending 31st December, 1916, and have verified the Cash and Balance Sheet with the Books and Vouchers of the Corporation. In our opinion the Balance Sheet is properly drawn up so as to exhibit a true view of the affairs of the Corporation as shown by its books as at that date. Our report to the Auditors is appended hereto.

F. LAWSON, F.C.A. Chartered Accountants.

The Annual General Meeting of the shareholders was held at the Head Office of the Corporation, 52-55 King Street East, Toronto, on Monday the fifth day of March, 1917, including the adverse weather conditions, a fair number of shareholders were in attendance.

The Directors' and auditors' reports were read, and a complete statement of the affairs of the Company presented. At a meeting of the Board held after the annual meeting Sir Mortimer Clark, K.C.M.G., Lieut.-Col. A. E. Gooderham, C.B., Lieut.-Col. A. T. Fleming, C.M.G., M.D., Vice-Presidents, and T. P. Loftus Lee, K.C., Chairman of the Board, and H. Waddington, Managing Director.

On Active Service Abroad

PASSED by the censor, and approved for circulation abroad, these photographs have been forwarded to this country by Mr. George McLaren Brown, European manager of the Canadian Pacific Railway. The first illustrates life-boat drill on a troopship, the second a naval quick-firing gun and one of its operators, and the third the remains of a German flowitzer gun that had been struck by a British shell.

The three pictures are a suggestion for reduction on three different phases of the war. The transportation of troops from the armies of the colonies to the motherland and from the motherland to the different spheres of military activity with which the motherland is concerned has been a huge problem that has been solved with very little loss of life, despite the fact that the enemy submarines have kept out for them. They have also found drill on the troopship shows that troops crossing the seas are well prepared for emergencies. Several of the Canadian Pacific liners have been engaged in conveying troops from Canada to England. They have also been occupied on other missions in the same transportation task, and so far there have been no disasters. The view of the quick-firing gun and its manipulator gives an some conception of the equipment of the navy. These guns are wonderful weapons of destruction when fights are being fought at a close range. The 75's Tars in charges of them are skilled marksmen, and should the German fleet ever take the open sea they will certainly combat, they are sure to display the same grit and courage for their ancestors who stuck the British navy in the days of Nelson. Even at the fiercest of destroyers may be destroyed in illustration for the third picture. German ingenuity is not proof against the ingenuity of Great Britain and her allies, and the greatest of German guns are no proof against the force of a little British shell.

The Canadians who have gone overseas play no small part in the big gun fighting that is done on the Western battle-fronts. Heavy and light artillery batteries have been raised and put through a course of training in many parts of the Dominion and sent to the front to help the British infantry, and they have covered many a weary corpse of the gallant soldiers some their good marksmanship often ——ierced German trenches, smashed the advance of barbed wire entanglements, shattered means that strewed the way very kindly

FICTION MADE TO ORDER.

Weird Stories With Small Beginnings Rounded Out by Gossips.

Most people in London are hearing, in one form or another, the legend of Lord Kitchener being alive and a prisoner in Germany, says the Manchester Guardian. It is now as popular, and of course as baseless, as the legend of the Russian soldiers in England was in 1914, and takes quite as many forms. I have taken the trouble to follow out the course of these fables, but each time its origin eludes discovery. What impresses one most is the extraordinary ingenuity of the stories, the wealth of circumstances surrounding them, and how they always begin with a lie. The most extraordinary form is the charwoman's story.

This charwoman told her employer that at another house where she worked the lady was always in mourning for a son who went down in the Hampshire. One day the charwoman found the lady dressed in white, and the lady told her that she had just received a letter from her son to say that he was a prisoner in Germany, having been saved from the wreck, and "you would be very much surprised to hear who is with me here."

Inquiries were made, and the charwoman admitted that there was no such lady, but that the story came from some third party who could not be traced. She had added some of the circumstances herself. Another form is this:

"A business man was told by the manageress of a factory connected with his business that one of the girls of the factory had had a letter from her brother, who had been on the Hampshire, to say that he was a prisoner in Germany, and Lord Kitchener was with him. The girl, she said, had taken the letter to the War Office." Again, it was found that the origin was that one girl had heard some such story from the untraceable relative of a married sister.

The explanation of these personal legends is probably the same—the ancient human belief that a great hero cannot be overcome even by death, and the human desire to attain importance among strangers by claiming a personal connection with a great event.

Service in Argentina.

Wherever you find a citizen of Argentina outside of his native land, in a cafe in Paris, on railroads in Chile, in New York hotels, the chances are he can produce a little fellow leather-covered book. The data inside this little book goes away beyond census statistics, because it is intended at the same time to serve both as census information and military registration. On page 1 you will find the owner's name and the particular military region and subdivisional district to which he belongs. He has a given designating number and is assigned to the class corresponding to the year of his birth. Then follows his parentage, permanent and temporary address, and details of physical identification similar to those which are asked for in issuing passports. In a boxed-in space for that purpose is his thumbprint. On the page opposite appears his photograph such as riding a horse, driving a motor car, speaking foreign languages, etc. The little yellow book also contains blanks for the record of compulsory medical examinations which occur at stated intervals. Thus the Republic may know just how fit each man is to perform his specified job when the need comes for him to perform it.—The World's Work for February.

"I Am a Cat."

The Japanese literary world is mourning the death of Kinnosuke Natsume, better known by his pen name of "Soseki," who was the leading exponent of Anglo-Saxon thought in Japanese literature.

Natsume went to England as Government student in 1900 and soon began to write. A study of how English poets conceived nature established for him a definite place in current Japanese thought. Returning to Japan as a lecturer, Natsume published his first novel under the unusual title, "I Am a Cat." It created a sensation in the conventional world.

Natsume's death mask was taken by the sculptor Taketaro Shinkai. The post-mortem examination by medical experts, which was made at the author's explicit desire, showed that the convolutions of his brain were unusually deep and that the brain weighed 75 grams more than the average Japanese man's, which weighs 1,350 grams.

Preacher Monkeys.

The author of the "History of Brazil" tells of a species of monkey called "preachers." Every morning and evening these monkeys assemble in the woods. One takes a higher position than the rest and makes a signal with his forepaw. At this signal the others sit round him and listen. When they are all seated he begins to utter a series of sounds. When he stops these cries he makes another signal with his paw, and the others cry out until he makes a third signal, on which they become silent again. This author, Mr. Margrove, asserts that he was a witness to these preachings.

TORTURE OF PRISONERS.

Terrible Cruelty Inflicted on Captives by Germans.

Hideous in the extreme, and only equal in awfulness to the frightful horrors of the Inquisition of the dark ages, is the story told in a semi-official French communique of the tortures inflicted upon French, Russian, and English prisoners in German prison camps.

Examples are given, as follows:

In reprisal camps of occupied districts of Russia this treatment has been applied with terrible refinements of cruelty. Thus, a mattress was at times placed between the stake and the head of the sufferer to render his position more exhausting. Sometimes the victim was tied bareheaded at midday with his face toward the sun, and with the points of barbed wire arranged so that they penetrated his chin.

At Landshut seventeen Frenchmen were [illegible] four metres long by three metres wide, exposed to all weathers. As a result, several of them went mad.

Punishment of the pit. The victim was forced into a hole in the earth, of an average length of one metre and eighty centimetres deep. The floor was strewn with sharp stones and the walls covered with barbed wire.

In Courland the lashing was administered on the loins of prisoners. At Stargard on Sunday mornings the wives of officers and other persons were invited to witness the bastinado.

Using Artificial Limbs.

Some of the wonders of physical reconstruction that are being achieved in the treatment of disabled soldiers in France are described by Captain Sir Henry Norman, M.P., in a special report to the Secretary for War for Great Britain. Particularly successful is the work of Professor Jules Amar, to whom, as he goes down the street near his hospital in Paris, the women smile, and say: "That's the man that gave my husband his arm back."

On the day of Sir Henry Norman's visit there were in the laboratory three one-armed men, who are earning 6s. 8d. a day as fitters. One of them while waiting amused himself by turning on a lathe little brass shells, as souvenirs, as well as any turner could have done.

Professor Amar offered a cigarette to one man whose arm had been amputated below the shoulder. Sir Henry Norman was about to take a cigarette from his own case in order to hand it to the man, who, saying: "Pardon me, I can help myself," proceeded to take one with his steel hand. Placing the cigarette in his mouth, he selected a match from a box, struck it on the box in his sound hand, and lighted the cigarette, holding the lighted match in his steel hand.

A second man, using his artificial hand, grasped the hand of Sir Henry Norman, and shook it warmly. The third, whose arm was amputated above the elbow, picked up a needle from the table with a small pair of dissecting forceps. Afterwards the men gave an exhibition of turning and filing metal and wood-drilling with a sensitive bit.

The motions of these wonderful artificial limbs are controlled, through straps and cords, by movements of the muscles of the chest and back.

Plough Up Grass Lands.

The Scottish Department Committee on Food Supplies report that there are about 1,500,000 acres of permanent pasture in Scotland, and 1,500,000 acres in temporary pasture. Much of the permanent pasture is only suited for grazing stock and certain areas also of grazing land are unsuitable to break up, but, it is added, in the hands of both farmers and occupying owners there are many acres which, in present circumstances, should be brought under the plough. The report considers that steps should be taken to find out what land now in grass is suitable for growing grain and other crops, and to secure that it be cultivated. Also that steps should be taken to cultivate lands now let as grass parks and home policies, where the ordinary organization of a farm does not exist, it also recommends that when deemed advisable, the Board of Agriculture for Scotland, by themselves or their nominees, should enter, occupy, and cultivate such lands.

Honors for Three Sons.

A record of three sons out of four on service having won distinctions is furnished by the family of Mr. and Mrs. Nasmith, of Weybridge, Surrey, England. Lieut.-Commander (now Captain) Martin Nasmith, the second son, won the V. C. for his exploits in a submarine in the Sea of Marmora, where he destroyed seven Turkish ships in addition to driving another ashore, and then returned to torpedo a Turkish transport. Captain Arthur P. Nasmith, the eldest son, gained the D. S. O. for displaying great courage and initiative in organizing and leading a successful attack; and Major Reginald Nasmith, the youngest son, has been awarded the Military Cross. The fourth brother is Lieut. Sydney Nasmith, who joined his old territorial unit at the outbreak of war and is at present in India.

A Good Sleeper.

The tortoise is a great sleeper. London Spectator has a story of one which was a domestic pet in an English house. As his time for hibernating drew nigh, he selected a quiet corner in the dimly lit coal-cellar, and composed himself to sleep. A new cook knew not tortoises. In a few months the tortoise woke up and sallied forth. Screams soon broke the kitchen's calm. On entering that department, the lady of the house found the cook gazing in awe-struck wonder, as she pointed to the tortoise: "My conscience! Look at the stone which I've broken the coal wi' a' winter!"

BACK TO THE LAND.

Government Has Plan Which Will Aid Farmers.

Another phase of the labor problem in Ontario is being developed to secure co-operation between the labour bureaus in cities and towns, established by the Department of Labor, and the district representatives of the Department of Agriculture as a means of meeting to some extent the scarcity of farm help.

For years it has been recognized that among the numbers of unskilled laborers in the cities there are men who have drifted in from the farms. In many cases these could be induced to go back to farm work if the opportunity was presented to them. While in the past the labor bureaus have not been particularly concerned or sufficiently well posted to deal with this problem under the system now being established the officer in charge of one of these branches will be in close touch with the district representatives of the Department of Agriculture. With detailed data available he will be in a position to offer an applicant who has had farm experience a choice of positions in the country [illegible] of the great demand for labor in all industrial centres it is not expected that a great deal can be done in this direction at the present time, but it will be the policy of the Government in the future to continue this co-operation between rural and urban officials as well as with a larger plan for settling Northern Ontario.

Records for Heat.

Greenland ranch in Death Valley in California holds the palm for registered heat, according to an official announcement. On July 10, 1913, the thermometer at this ranch capped the climax in possibilities by climbing to 134 deg. Fahrenheit. No figure approaching it has ever been known, according to Meteorologist Carpenter of the United States Weather Bureau. The next highest registration was that of Ouargla, Algeria, which is situated on the edge of the Sahara Desert. This station registered 127 deg. August 27, 1884. During this same hot spell the thermometer at the Greenland ranch in Death Valley was unofficially reported to have registered the following points: August 8, 128; August 9, 129; August 10, 134; August 11, 129; August 12, 130; August 13, 131, and August 14, 129, which records, if official, would have surpassed anything ever recorded on the known globe. The highest previous record in California was at Mammoth Tank, August 17, 1885, when the temperature climbed to 127 in the shade. The 134 record was also a shade record. It was taken from a thermometer installed on a standard screen, placed above an alfalfa sod, four feet above the ground. This shelter was not exposed to the reflected heat of the desert. This point is 178 feet below sea level. Any attempt to give the actual heat of the open desert places of Death Valley has so far as known not been made. There was a record, entirely unofficial, made at a point about sixteen miles north of the Greenland ranch in August of 1907, and this thermometer showed 136 as near as could be determined.

War on Bethmann-Hollweg.

When the Berliner Neueste Nachrichten, which is commonly known as the organ of the Krupps, describes the Imperial Chancellor as a weakling and demands his resignation, it gives expression to a sentiment common to the military party and to all Junkerdom.

The Chancellor has never been forgiven for his blunt admission that the invasion of Belgium was a wrong which could be justified only on the grounds of military necessity. His determination to keep the peace with the United States aroused the bitter resentment of all the Tirpitz party, which was committed to ruthless submarine warfare, and the Tirpitz party was supported by most of the General Staff. The retirement of the Grand Admiral was due to his opposition of the Chancellor's policy in yielding to the American demands, and only the present intervention of the Kaiser saved the situation. Now that the German peace proposal has been rejected by the Allies, it is inevitable that the campaign against Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg should be renewed with greater fury and bitterness than ever. The Neueste Nachrichten has merely fired the first gun, and it will have the active support of all the blood-and-iron extremists who still believe that Germany is a law unto itself and prepared to fight the world. Thus far there is no hint of a crisis; yet nothing has been more certain for the last year than the precariousness of the Chancellor's position.

Unshorn Father Thames.

The Thames, on which pleasure traffic decreased last year, had a rather unusual summer season. The uppermost reaches of the river had many visitors, but above Lechlade, where the stream is only navigable for very small craft, boating was a wild kind of adventure owing to the growth of water-weeds. Stretches of clear water alternate with patches of weed so thick that the debchicks can run across the river, but are unable to dive. As a rule the weeds are cut every year, but it is a task requiring six or more strong men, and in places where the river is used only by little pleasure boats the cutting has not been done since the war.—London Chronicle.

Hoping for the Best.

That building activities at Frankfort-on-Main, Germany, will probably be recommended on a large scale as soon as the war should have ended is shown by the various projects now under consideration, both as public and private enterprises. Among others is a plan that calls for the erection of a number of apartment buildings for the use of unmarried women engaged in business or professions and without home connections.

RAIDING GERMAN LINES.

Canadian Lieutenant Tells of Experienced in Trenches.

Canadians are again busy trench raiding. A lieutenant from the west reached London ten days ago, and gave graphic details of recent enterprises of this sort. These raids, he said, are carried out with clockwork precision, and are often rehearsed several times beforehand. A certain part of the line is selected, and wire entanglements are mapped out beforehand by working parties; in a great many cases the raiders possess a snapshot of the trench, taken by airmen.

Before crawling across to the enemy trench care is taken to cast off all shiny accoutrements, and faces and hands of the raiders are blackened with burnt cork. If the sentries are half asleep they are bumped off before they can say "Jack Robinson," bombs are thrown in the dugouts and a prompt exit is made with a couple of prisoners. The latter are a very important factor, because the raids are made with a view to obtaining information from the enemy.

At other times both sides have working parties at night time in No Man's Land. Very often it happens that the parties see each other.

"You would, perhaps, think there would be something doing right there and then," said the lieutenant, "but no chance. [illegible] on its nocturnal work [illegible] during the other. The working parties are in a hurry to get through and get back behind the sandbags. Our machine gunners do a lot of firing at night, working in twos. One man looking over the parapet fires a gun. As he fires, the other keeps refilling the empty magazines. I fired as many as fifteen hundred shots in a night.

"Last week an enterprising German patrol surrounded one of the bombing posts in an isolated part of the line. There were only two bombers holding it; one was taken prisoner, the other had eight or nine bayonet wounds in his body when found. The enemy leaves us great encouragement and inspiration by these actions that are not to be despised.

"Our idea is not to start any great push. They will retire to their own boundaries in due time. What we must do is to keep them where they are, holding all the line they have now and the long lines of communication. If the line became shortened, as it would if they were pushed back, that would be a great help to them. Gradually we will discover what parts of the line they are holding thinly. We can then make a swoop on that and get booty, and by making raids and constantly harassing them and giving them no rest we will be doing the best service."

A Fighting Violinist.

It is probable that the musical life of Canada will be enriched during the next few years by the arrival of musicians from the warring countries who desire to take up their abode here. The accomplished Russian violinist Gregor Cherniavsky recently arrived from Russia, bringing with him honors and scars to show for his service on the battlefields with the Czar's army. Three other Russian artists of the same name have recently been touring the Dominion. It is said that Gregor Cherniavsky intends to make his home in a city in one of our Western Provinces. He is loath to talk of his experiences at the front. His studies with Leopold Auer, his assistant's work with that master, and other features of his musical career are more important to him than the months spent as a soldier on the Galician front.

The moment war was declared, Gregor dropped his music rolls, laid away his beloved Amati violin, donned his uniform, his sword and side arms, and joined his regiment. He was a lieutenant of infantry. Rushed to the front, Lieutenant Cherniavsky commanded his men in many a bitter fight. Once his regiment captured many Austrians. The trenches of the latter, before Lemberg fell to the Czar's armies, were only 100 to 200 yards away from the Russians. Among the Austrians taken by Lieutenant Cherniavsky's men were several players from the royal opera orchestra of Vienna. They told [illegible] the trenches not far from them, and that when the company in which Kreisler was an officer was sent at times to the rear to rest and recoup, Kreisler would get out his fiddle and play for the soldiers at their base station.

Lieutenant Cherniavsky heard this with the greatest interest and hoped that his men might capture the Kreisler company, also hoping that the violinist would not be injured. But a troop of Cossacks did for Kreislers' chances of being captured and he was sent home badly injured, as has been told so often.

"If you had charged the Austrian trenches with Kreisler and his men, would you have killed your fellow violinist?" was asked of Lieutenant Cherniavsky.

The young veteran—he has been honorably discharged by order of the Czar—smiled. "I thought of that many times," he said, "and all I ever wanted to do was to see Kreisler and shake him by the hand. I never felt like fighting with him."

A Noble Family.

A Scottish-Canadian family's tragic sacrifice in the war became known on the departure from Granville Canadian Hospital at Ramsgate of Nurse Murray and her brother, Corporal Murray, who wore three gold stripes on his sleeve. They are the only surviving children of Colonel Murray, of Toronto, formerly of the Black Watch. Two of Colonel Murray's sons were killed at Ypres, two fell on the Somme, and the younger daughter was killed by a shell while a nurse at a Belgian clearing station.

[illegible]

William Wilberforce, the slave-liberator, had a sister who was a hustler. She hustled for William at the hustings and succeeded in getting him elected to Parliament. On one occasion, when she had concluded her stump speech, some enthusiasts in the crowd shouted:

"Miss Wilberforce forever!"

The lady stepped forward.

"Gentlemen, I thank you," she said, "but, believe me, I do not wish to be Miss Wilberforce forever."

No Allurement.

"Some day you'll be rich enough to retire from business."

"Give up my nice pleasant office and stay home?" rejoined Mr. Growcher. "I should say not!"—Washington Star.

Weak, Anaemic, Nervous Run-down

WHEN your system is undermined by worry or overwork — when your vitality is lowered—when you feel "anyhow"—when your nerves are "on edge"—when the least exertion tires you—you are in a run-down condition.

Your system is like a plant that is drooping for the want of water. And just as water revives a drooping plant—so Wincarnis gives new life and new vitality to a "run-down" constitution. Because Wincarnis possesses a four-fold power. It is a tonic, a restorative, a blood-builder and a nerve food—all in one. Therefore Wincarnis promotes new strength, new blood, new nerve force and new vitality.

The benefit begins from the first small dose. You can feel it doing you good. You can feel your whole system being surcharged with new vitality and new life.

That is why over 10,000 doctors recommend Wincarnis.

Wincarnis quickly brings back your old-time vigor—gives a sparkle to your eyes—and coaxes the roses back to your cheeks. You look well—feel well—eat well—sleep well—and can revel in the new health and new life Wincarnis creates. But, remember, that only Wincarnis can give you this new and vigorous health. Imitations only waste your money and disappoint you.

Teachers Endorse Cabinet's Action

Strong Deputation Approves of Introduction of Pensions Bill Will See It Through

TORONTO March 10—Six hundred school teachers most of them from Toronto schools, but with many hailing from widely separated parts of the province, descended upon Sir William Hearst and his colleagues at the Parliament Building yesterday. A week ago, when the deputation was organized, it was intended to be a demonstration in force to convince the Government that the Superannuation bill should be adopted. Two nights ago, however, Hon. Dr. Pyne, Minister of Education, forestalled the demand by bringing down the legislation and foreshadowing its final adoption this session. It was said that yesterday's deputation used up its surplus energy in endorsing the action of the Government and in cheering the Prime Minister and his colleagues.

Sir William—after listening to a number of speakers endorse the Government's course, spoke to the deputation, assuring them that not only had the Government brought in the bill, but that it was going to see it through. He admitted that there were some who opposed the scheme, particularly some of the younger teachers, who looked forward to giving up a class and devoting themselves to teaching one person, but the Government was so satisfied that the legislation was in the interest of the teaching profession that they were prepared to disregard this opposition and to make the act compulsory. Hon. Dr. Pyne also spoke, remarking that now that the moment for which they had been striving had come, both teachers and the Government were entitled to congratulations.

The deputation was introduced by Sir Adam Beck. One distinguished spokesman was Archdeacon Cody, who endorsed the bill thoroughly, although the payments might be something of a burden. The Public schools in the Separate Schools, who were drawing small salaries. In this connection, he stated that the Government might consider the revision of the assessment law, to give Separate Schools their generous share of taxes for corporations.

Mr. G. A. Jordison, of Monteagle, represented North Hasting teachers in the Provincial Association of Public School teachers and Inspectors to wait upon Sir William Hearst and urge the claims of the Superannuation Bill.

More than one thousand were present. Miss Abraham, of Chatham, introduced by Sir Adam Beck, led in addressing the Premier and Cabinet.

The Premier in reply assured the deputation of a Bill being passed if the Government lived through the session.

Dr. Pyne also was gratified with the result of his efforts to aid the teachers who gave their life to education.

Mr. Jordison has more than a quarter of a century to his credit as a successful P. S. Teacher and will find himself among those benefited by the Superannuation Bill.

TWO POLICEMEN TENDER RESIGNATIONS

BROCKVILLE, March 11—Brockville's police force is now short of two of its members. Constables John Botham and Charles Simpson handed their resignations on Saturday to Chief Davis, requesting to be relieved of their duties on March 15, owing to dissatisfaction at a change in conditions in connection with the force, whereupon the officers of the law had to attend to the weighing of the hay, which is brought to the scales, in addition to their other duties.

GENERAL HAIG NOW HAS THE KEY TO BAPAUME

Strong German Trenchworks are Wrested From Foe—Hilaire Belloc Says Monchy(or Bapaume)Ridge is Key to Cambral

War Correspondent Headquarters, Sunday, March 12—Special—Iries was captured yesterday morning by a brilliant attack; 286 men, with three officers and sixteen machine guns, fell into our hands, to the deep annoyance of those prisoners. Before the attack our howitzers swept the place with fire, so that nothing could live above ground. Close to this hurricane of shells our men came on, one force working up from the south and another swinging round from the left and north in order to cut off the enemy's retreat. There also were some Fusiliers who dealt with a sunken road ravine by which war held by a garrison of old men with machine guns. Of these, thirty were taken prisoners and the rest killed.

The attack swept on across the German trenches, two of which had bypasts, consisting of one non-commissioned officer and eight men with a machine gun. Most of the Germans, to the number of nearly 150, were gathered up alive, and about the same number were taken by troops working west and north. There was but little fighting. When the enemy saw our men streaming behind them they knew resistance was futile, and surrendered quickly, cursing the ill-luck, because a few hours later might have found them behind a strong wire belt of the Loupart line, only a few hundred yards away from our position on the other side of Iries village.

SAY PEOPLE ARE STARVING

Arrivals at Havana Bring News of Terrible Conditions in Germany

Special to The Intelligencer.

NEW YORK, March 12—A Herald despatch from Havana says several men and women who left Berlin with Ambassador Gerard and arrived here with him via Spain say the German people are starving, and do not care whether victory or defeat comes. What they want is food. Their weakened courage is bolstered up by false reports of victories. Before another year harvests must fall for lack of men and fertilizers and even those may not have sufficient food. These passengers confirm the reports or the Kaiser's ill health and says he is always in the hands of physicians.

BAGDAD HAS FALLEN TO GALLANT GEN. MAUDE

British Troops Entered City Early Sunday Morning—Victory After Severe Fighting

LONDON, March 12—Special—Major-General Frederick Stanley Maude, in command of the British forces in Mesopotamia, telegraphed yesterday the welcome news for the British of the occupation of the city of Bagdad, the chief Turkish city in Mesopotamia, and formerly the Capital of the Empire of the Caliphs.

No details of the capture have yet been received, however, but today's story of the operations carrying events only up to Saturday morning, when the British, after effecting a surprise crossing of the Diala and bridging the Tigris, had driven the Turks back to within three miles of Bagdad. It is believed, however, that the Turks have been unable to offer any serious resistance since the fall of Kut-el-Amara. They were said to be hastily summoning reinforcements from other theatres of the war where Turks were engaged, but the distances to be covered were so great that additional forces were unable to arrive in time to save the ancient city, which, after Mecca, occupies first place in the Mohammedan imagination.

The fall of Bagdad, besides ending German hopes of Near Eastern dominion, based on a Berlin-Bagdad railway, will reverberate throughout the Mohammedan Empire, and, it is believed, will more than rehabilitate British prestige in the Far East, damaged by the earlier loss of Kut-el-Amara.

Perhaps no more welcome news could come at a time when the British public for the first time, owing to the submarine warfare, is beginning to feel the effects of the war in a greatly reduced food supply, besides being thrown into a fit of depression by the revelations of the Dardanelles inquiry.

THE NEW WAR LOAN

Parliament has authorized the Finance Minister to borrow $350,000,000 on this continent during the coming year. He explained that a portion of this sum may be acedfed in the United States should money conditions be favorable there and exchange conditions warrant such recourse. On March 12th (today) he will offer $150,000,000 to the Canadian public on very favourable terms. We state of the issue is justified by the success which attended the floatation of the two previous war loans.

Here is the opportunity for our people to stand by the Government, and at the same time make a safe investment.

Great Russian Armies Ready

PETROGRAD, March 10— Lord Milner's statement regarding "Imperial Co-operation in Russia" is received here with satisfaction.

His account of the determination of the United States to go on with the war undeterred by any of the multitudinous disadvantages under which they are working, is also readily endorsed by every Russian.

Whatever the significance of Mr. Asquith's remarks, there can be no doubt she will remain faithful to the Allies to the end.

The second answer to any misapprehension and misgivings which may have been endangered by the failure of the army machine to cope with the enormous difficulties of the war will be forthcoming when the great armies assembled on the eastern front enter the spring campaign.

Sir Sam's Mission in New York Just Now

NEW YORK, March 10—Sir Sam Hughes arrived in New York today for a two days' sojourn, on what he termed private business. Questioned as to the purpose of his visit to New York, Sir Sam said: "I am here purely on personal business, nothing of interest to the public. I am spending some of my time in looking over your tall buildings.

BRITISH GOVERNMENT WILL BUY ALL CANADIAN WHEAT

Negotiations With Western Farmers Under Way, and the Whole Crop May be Taken Over—Shipping Facilities For Canadian Wheat are Better

OTTAWA, March 11—Britain is negotiating for the purchase of the entire Canadian wheat crop of 1917.

The price to be fixed and lesser details of the purchase are now the subject of correspondence between Ottawa and London.

For obvious reasons, no statement in respect to the negotiations can be made by the Government here, but it is understood that the views of the western farmers were obtained last week, when J. A. Maharg, president of the Saskatchewan Grain Growers' Association; President Wood, of the United Farmers of Alberta, and R. MacKenzie, secretary of the Grain Growers, met Sir George Foster.

The total wheat crop of the Dominion in 1915, was 350,000,000 bushels. Last year, owing to rust and drought, it was considerably less.

FATALITY AT BRIGHTON

Subpoenas were today sent to the clip to be served upon two G.T.R. employees to attend an inquest to be held at Brighton Village today over the remains of Florence M. Holmes of that village. On Saturday night the deceased was struck by a train and killed. The engineer and fireman in charge of the train were from Belleville.

VERDICT OF ACCIDENTAL DEATH

At Ivanhoe, on Friday afternoon an inquest was held upon the remains of Mr. David Calvert, a C.P.R. section man, whose body was on Tuesday of last week found along the railway track, midway between Crookston, in Huntingdon Township and the village of Tweed. The result of the investigation was, the Coroner's jury found that death was accidental, and that he had evidently been struck by a C.P.R. freight train, at a point where the body was found. No blame was attached to any C.P.R. employees, as the crew of the train which struck him were not aware that an accident had occurred. At the time of the accident there was a blinding snow storm.

OBSEQUIES.

JOHN BREMNER

On Saturday the funeral of the late Mr. John Bremner, of Thurlow Township took place. Rev. Mr. Huffman conducted the services at the house and funeral services and at Yonker's burying ground, the interment took place. The pallbearers were: Messrs G. and E. Hills, J. Phillips, D. Robeson, N. Sears, and H. Ketcheson.

MRS. SAMANTHA SCOTT

From the residence of Capt. Pagan, South George Street, on Saturday afternoon the funeral of the late Mrs. Samantha Scott, relict of the late Mr. Charles Scott, took place. A number of relatives and friends were present at the obsequies, which were conducted, by the Rev. Dr. Scott, Pastor of Bridge Street Methodist Church. He also officiated at the interment at the Belleville cemetery. Upon the casket were placed a number of floral tributes. The bearers were: P. Cote, C. Bell, F. Cousins, J. H. Smith, W. and S. Laflur.

Ex-Mayor Nelson Lingham Joins Great Majority

After an illness of some months duration ex-Mayor Nelson Lingham passed away on Sunday morning at the family residence, 212 Dundas Street, Belleville. In his death, the city has lost an aged and most respected citizen. His demise was by no means unexpected. Deceased was in the seventy of age, was born in the year 1832 at Brighton, Sussex County, England. He was brought out to Canada when an infant and virtually all his life was spent in the home where he died. Mr. Lingham was, during his many years of life, very active and most conscientious in his dealings with his fellow man. For many years he conducted successfully a brick manufactory business which was situated just east of the city limits, and this building material, made by him, was widely recognized for its worth. Deceased always manifested much interest in municipal matters and his wise counsel in this direction was recognized by the public. He was, many years ago a member of the Thurlow Township Council, and later in years identified himself with Civic Government in Belleville. In the years 1876 and 1877 Belleville was a town he represented Seaman Ward as a member of the Town Council. In 1878 Belleville was incorporated as a city, and during that year, and three succeeding years namely: 1878 to 1882, he was an Alderman still representing Seaman Ward. In 1882 and 1883 he was elected by the Chief Magistrate of the city, and in 1892 and 1893 he again sat in the Council as an Aldermen. During his municipal career, deceased was ever alert for the best interests of the city which interest he had at heart. Mr. Lingham was identified with two fraternal societies, namely: The Belleville Lodge No. 123 A. F. and A. M. and the Independent Order of Foresters. In religion, deceased was a Methodist, being a member of Bridge Street Church and took an active interest in church work. Politically he was a Conservative. Mr. Lingham was a man noted for his unselfish, public spirit and unswerving loyalty to the country of his birth and his demise will be sincerely regretted by a large circle of relatives and friends throughout the city. He is survived to the bereaved. An aged widow, two sons and three daughters survive. The sons are Nelson, Jr., of Belleville, and George N. of Detroit, Mich. The daughters are: Mrs. F. B. Smith, Mrs. Thomas G. Lewis and Miss Ethel B. all of Belleville. Sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Lingham, of London, Ont., is living and is at present in Belleville. Mrs. Lingham, who died in 1906 was Miss Fannie Vivian, of Thurlow Township, and five years ago commemorated the anniversary of their golden wedding.

Settlement In Liquor Case

Before Police Magistrate Masson this morning the case against S. H. Wright, of this city, charged with the theft of a quantity of booze was disposed of. Wright it will be remembered received a letter which contained the information that a keg containing liquor had been sent to Belleville for S. H. Wright. He procured the liquor from an express office here and shortly after it was ascertained the intoxicant was for another S. H. Wright living in the country. The accused, through his counsel, Mr. W. D. M. Shorey, pleaded guilty to the charge, but alleged that a mistake had been made, As Mr. Wright who procured the liquor was of the opinion that some one had sent it to him. Mr. Case now, County Attorney was disposed to have a settlement effected if possible as it was not a case of direct theft. The Magistrate acquiesced and the accused paid all costs in the matter amounting to $13.50. The liquor was given to the party at to whom it was consigned.

HAVE THOROUGHLY PROBED THE HIGH COST OF LIVING INCREASE

Reports Will Soon be Made Public, States Hon. Mr. Crothers, and Will be Complete in Their Handling of Question

TORONTO, March 10.—The question of what has been done to combat the constant increase in living cost since the matter was taken up by the Department of Labor, will be fully answered within a short time, according to the Minister of Labor, who last night stated that reports covering the whole situation were being prepared and will be made public shortly.

These reports, which should be ready within a couple of weeks, will cover the ground thoroughly, stated the Minister. Crothers, for data has been secured from all fields in Canada and from the whole question carefully covered by Mr. O'Connor, the Commissioner, and his staff.

The coal situation, especially as regards anthracite coal, has been fully covered, and the information to be given will include cost of handling, shipping and also statements as to the methods adopted by the shippers across the line and in Canada.

Other departments have been covered equally well. Flour, potatoes, bread and other necessities of life have been thoroughly studied and investigation, some of the data having been secured from even statements

Was The Mother of Christ Born in Sin?

Evangelist F. W. Johnston, of Advent Chapel, Answers Interesting Question

An interesting question was answered last night in Advent Hall, Campbell St., by Evangelist F. W. Johnston—Was the Mother of Christ born in Sin? He asserted that there were those who held to the idea that Mary was by special interposition of divine grace delivered from all taint of original sin from the very moment of her conception and that therefore Christ who was born of her was also born without sinful flesh. But this position Mr. Johnston declared was a positive denial of the plain word of God for in Heb. 2:14 we read that Christ took upon him the same kind of flesh as other human beings, not the nature of angels, but of sinful human flesh. Nor did he take human nature as it was when man first sinned but rather as it existed for 4,000 years until man had fallen to his lowest level. For if Christ had taken perfect human nature or even sinful nature as it was when Adam sinned he could never with such a nature be tempted as we are. But he was tempted as in Heb. 4:15. He had the same inherent tendencies, but he never committed sin. Instead we are informed that he overcame the sinful flesh, conquered its appetites and passions, and though it meant suffering, hardship and privation yet he became perfect through suffering; Heb. 5:8, 9. Having overcome sin, he abandoned sin in the flesh. Rom. 8:3 and having thereby become perfect then and not till then could Christ be made an offering for sin. He was qualified then to become our redeemer. He suffered and died, rose to victory over death and ascended into heaven as an advocate for man and now he is our intercessor. And there is no other mediator; 1 Tim. 2:5. So that Mary is not a mediator at all. She was only a human being, a good woman to be sure, not immaculate in her conception, but having the same sinful flesh as all. And Mary is dead and sleeping in the tomb and is wholly unconscious as all the dead are. Read, Ps. 5, 10. She is not therefore in heaven and is therefore not a mediator, but the time is coming when Christ appears that the saints of the ages will be raised; 1 Thess. 4:16 and changed to immortality 1 Cor. 15:51-54 and taken to heaven to be with Christ. Read 1 Thess. 4:13-18 and not before. A splendid gathering were present.

The Khaki Club

On Saturday, March 3rd, the men of the 235th Battalion were given a farewell evening, at the Khaki Club. The musical programme was in charge of the Misses Grant assisted by Miss Aileen Jenkins. Bright songs and choruses were sung and the boys thoroughly enjoyed themselves. The officials of the Club provided and served the refreshments. A splendid spirit of comradeship existed even though many a heart was sad; sincere regrets were expressed on all sides at having to say good-bye. The 235th Battalion will not be forgotten in Belleville, a finer, bettered behaved lot of men have never been in town. The singing of "Auld Lang Syne" and "God Save The King" brought the evening to a close with three cheers. The Executive wishes to express sincere appreciation for the plendid services of Sergeant E. Bellas, who has been in charge for four months and who has been untiring in his efforts to make the men comfortable and happy.

KHAKI CLUB NOTES

By the word of Lt.-Col. Cowan of the 254th Battalion, the Khaki Club will not be kept open, for the men of the 254th. Col. Allen explained to the committee that most of the men had gone to billet, and many away recruiting. The Club is therefore closed until such time as the 254th go to Barracks or another Battalion comes to Belleville.

FIREMEN HAD RUN

At a few minutes before 9 o'clock last night the fire brigade were called out, but fortunately the blaze was not a serious one. At the residence of Mrs. James Freeman, Coleman Street, a curtain became ignited from a lamp being placed too close to it. An extinguisher was used and the damage sustained was slight.

CRAZED WITH LIQUOR

Yesterday afternoon the police answered a call to a residence in the vicinity of the G. T. R. Station, and arrested a man, who was charged with acting in a disorderly manner. The party was somewhat under the influence of liquor, and during the trouble created he was able to such an extent that after the arrest he was taken to the hospital for treatment.

E. Tennyson Smith Opens Local Campaign

Spoke in Several Churches Sunday Uses Much Common Sense in Methods of Work

Mr. E. Tennyson Smith of Birmingham, England, the distinguished Temperance Advocate now on a tour in Canada, commenced a campaign in Belleville on Sunday. The campaign was inaugurated by a reception to the Lecturer and his wife in the Y.M.C.A. on Saturday evening when addresses of welcome to them were delivered by several ministers and leading representatives of the Temperance Movement in this city.

Capt. Thomas D. Ruston, officiated as chairman. The mayor, H. F. Ketcheson gave an address of welcome, also Rev. Charles G. Smith, B. D., Rev. C. T. Scott, Rev. A. S. Kerr, Secretary Brockel, of the Y.M.C.A.; P. C. MacLaren, Principal of the High School; Mr. D. W. Sinclair, representing the business men, and Mrs. Dr. Yeomans, representing the women's societies, Mr. S. Herrity spoke on behalf of the press.

Mr. Tennyson Smith responded in a brief address in which the Committee for the cordiality of their welcome and outlining the lines of work and urging the importance of individual effort to reach those who were still unconvinced either of the necessity for total abstinence or the wisdom of prohibition and they must be won over to our side so as to strengthen public sentiment behind the Prohibition Law.

On Sunday morning, Mr. Tennyson Smith conducted services in the John Street Presbyterian Church, in the afternoon he addressed a united meeting of Bible Classes in Bridge St. Methodist Church, and also preached there in the evening.

We can only say that his addresses yesterday fully justified all the eulogies which have appeared in the press respecting his powers as a speaker. His arguments are forceful and his illustrations telling, but to merely report his utterances however convincing would do no justice to the speaker for his power lies quite as much in his manner of saying a thing as in the words uttered; and he must be heard in order to understand the remarkable force he has been, for so many years in the ranks of Temperance Reformers.

Tonight in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Mr. Tennyson Smith is to lecture on "The Drink Demon" and he is announced to give his realistic impersonation entitled "An interview with the Drink Fiend." The admission is free to all meetings except the last night of the campaign.

We call the following particular respecting Mr. Tennyson Smith's career from an official circular issued by the Dominion Alliance of Quebec Province, the organization which invited him to Canada a year ago:

"Mr. Tennyson Smith is especially fitted for this work, owing to his wide and varied experience. He has also visited Australia; had a two and a half years' campaign in New Zealand; a comprehensive tour in South Africa; an extensive tour in the United States in 1906-08, and has nearly completed a series of campaigns in that country. He has a most successful tour in Canada in 1907, when the applications for his services in New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island were so numerous that he was unable to go further West.

It is impossible to give any adequate idea of Mr. Tennyson Smith's power as a speaker. He is intensely dramatic and this partly accounts for his popularity. He has been styled "the second John B. Gough," and it is generally held that he more nearly approaches in his style that of the famous orator than any other since his day.

As to the success which attends his work, we may say that for many years in almost every city in his native land and abroad in which a series of meetings has been held the audiences have increased night by night, until the buildings have been crowded, and generally numbers turned away by the door. Hundreds of pledges are taken, the temperance workers encouraged and aroused to great enthusiasm, and the existing organizations greatly strengthened. In almost every place visited the whole community has been stirred to an extent hitherto unknown and the prohibition question brought to the front.

The value of Mr. Tennyson Smith's services in No-License and Prohibition campaigns can scarcely be over-estimated. In almost every instance where he has been engaged the Temperance party has achieved a victory, and the movement for Prohibition in other countries has been strengthened."

"THE LITTLE CAFE"
TUNEFUL MUSICAL COMEDY
AT GRIFFIN'S WEDNESDAY

The mammoth production of the musical comedy success "The Little Cafe" will be the attraction at Griffin's Opera House next Wednesday night, March 14th. The piece had a happy engagement in New York for nearly a year, where its charms gave it wide popularity. Although its music has been proclaimed perfect, from the standpoint of light musical comedy and its humor called fetching, a great deal of stress is laid upon the natural beauty of the chorus, the ranks of which, it is said, are filled with the cream of the Broadway stock.

Of course, fine clothes make fine women, as you will see when "The Little Cafe" unfolds its gorgeous costuming in this city, but if you can see the young man who boosts for the show, not even the brilliant plumage of the girls in the company can add to their seductive charms. With such an endorsement, the piece should have no difficulty in attracting all of the theatre regulars as well as a host of the volunteers. The original production of the New York season are promised for here intact. Price, 25c, 50c, 75c, $1., Boxes $1.50. Seats now selling at Doyle's.

NEW VIGOR AND STRENGTH FOR THE RUN-DOWN SYSTEM

More Proof That Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is Accomplishing Great Good in This City—Many More Cures Reported

Belleville, Ont. Mar. 12—In the most simple and natural way imaginable this food cure is restoring to health and vigor people who have been ailing for years and apparently getting no lasting benefits from the medicines used. Here is the reason:

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is composed of the elements from which Nature forms new, rich blood and thereby reinforces the cells and tissues of the body. By supplying tissue elements in condensed and easy assimilated form so that the most delicate digestive system can make use of them, the Nerve Food brings health and strength to the weak and suffering.

It works in a different method to most medicines, and as a result the benefits obtained are both thorough and lasting.

Mrs. A. Lott, 49 Greer street, Belleville, Ont., writes: "About nine years ago I was a nervous wreck—so bad that my arms and shoulders had to be bandaged, and sometimes my friends had difficulty keeping me in bed. One night I went to the hospital to see my sister, and while there became so nervous that my arms and feet had to be bandaged and I had to be brought home. Through reading of it in the Ontario Farmer, I was induced to use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and after taking several boxes I began to recover and gained strength until now I feel perfectly well. I am very pleased to recommend Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to all my friends."

Mrs. C. Barnhardt, 20 Wharf street, Belleville, Ont., writes: "Some years ago I was taken ill, and, although conscientious, was unable to work. Through reading in the newspapers of the benefit other people had derived from taking Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I gave it a trial. After taking it for a time I found excellent results—could sleep well and get around and do my own work. I always keep a box of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food in the house and recommend them to anyone suffering as I did."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, full treatment of 6 boxes for $2.50, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations only disappoint.

ABOUT SAUSAGE

A Discourse on This Appetizer of Cold Weather Menus.

IS A FLAVORER OF SOUPS.

How to Pick Your Meats and Season Them So You May Have the Real Homemade Article—A Diet For Adults Only.

In our many discussions of meat and meat prices we hear little mention of the large group of meats, either fresh or cured, which come under the head of sausage. Yet the consumption of these products runs up into the millions of pounds annually and is affected quite directly by the prices of other meats.

All sausage stuffed into casings when examined is found to be a chopped mixture of beef or pork, or both, salted or pickled under various processes, combined with spices and later smoked, with the exception of the so called "fresh sausage," which is unsmoked. Many housekeepers have a reasonable fear of sausage meat, and it is true that formerly it was not rare to the have or grades a good deal of adulteration is practiced by adding flour, rice, cornmeal or inferior trimmings to increase bulk. But sausage made by a reputable firm or bought of a reliable dealer offers in condensed form a flavorful and quite nutritious food for occasional use.

The common varieties when analyzed are found to contain about 14 to 16 per cent of protein fats and 20 per cent or more of fat. In using them, therefore, we should combine them in a meal with a quantity of starch, like potatoes, beans, rice, etc. Although meat sausage is cured or smoked and some kinds eaten without further cooking it is best to err on the side of safety and long cooking, as ptomaine poisoning frequently infect pork and pork products.

Sausage is a meat which should be carefully cooked to adult use. No kind should ever be given to children, and while the poorer classes have "sausage a before" frequently, the babies just as frequently never grow up. The casing, which is really a cleansed intestine, into which the meat is stuffed, should never be eaten, as it is too indigestible.

After the sausage meat or the sausage preparation sold in links, if fresh and of high quality, makes a good luncheon or supper dish. Sausages and fried cakes, no matter how apparently alluring, are the bill of fare, are a dietetic sin of which no breakfaster should be guilty. The wise housewife can pick out her own piece of pork and other meat and have it chopped before her very eyes and season it herself with sage, thyme and freshly ground pepper. Several firms have made national reputations by supplying consumers with an absolutely pure, tasty sausage product, which shows that more consumers would use it if they were unvarying customers of its integrity.

One of the best methods of using sausage is as a flavorer. It thus occupies rather a desirable position of honor, but little actual bulk need be consumed. Those who like a mixed bean soup with frankfurters, boiled hominy and fried beef sausage or a pork pie with wienerwurst will find the appetizing flavor or wisdom of the link. The housewife who is seeking meat at an economical price can learn to use sausage to give the meat flavor without the meat cost.

A sister of Rodman Law, famed aviator, Miss Law, whose full name is Ruth Bancroft Law, was born on March 21, 1887, in Lima, Ohio. She received her pilot's certificate on Nov. 20, 1912, four years after taking her tests with a Wright biplane. Since then she has made thousands of exhibition and passenger carrying flights.

She broke the altitude record for women on May 27 of this year. In company with Lieut. Thomas Milling she appeared at the military tournament at Sheepshead Bay. They all competed in the altitude contest, and Miss Law set the high mark for women by flying 11,200 feet.

CHILDREN'S TOYS.

Lessons Learned In Play Leave an Everlasting Impression Upon Character.

A child's play is really its most important business, for in it the exercise necessary for the growing body is obtained, and at the same time lessons are learned which leave an everlasting impress on the character. For this reason it seems almost incomprehensible that any mother should not be satisfied to provide her children with toys that vitiate its good taste or by it too complete mechanism destroy their owner of the joy of achievement, the necessity of using his or her quick wittedness or imagination.

There is no need to give a baby one of those repulsively ugly rag dolls with staring eyes and distorted features when there are lovely, cuddly bunny rabbits with soft, colored coats and dear, soft little doggies which can be had for a little more money and are not goes off to the by-by land, and these pretty toys will be cultivating his sense of beauty and artistic growth and at the same time giving him a soft corner in his heart for his four footed neighbors.

From Japan comes a very complete set of doll's furniture which would delight any small homemaker. It is cut out of a solid block of wood and can be reassembled into a block again by the use of a little patience and ingenuity, a fact that makes it a most instructive toy, carrying out the Montessori game of solids in a more advanced and interesting manner form.

Another fascinating toy which would bring joy to any little boy and to a good many girls is a carpenter's blue apron with a wide pocket, in which there is a very complete set of diminutive tools, and for the more domesticated wee lady there is a doll's dressing-table outfit put up in an attractive box.

With toys such as these, not to mention the better grade of blocks in which many can take part, a child can at a very small cost be taught to educate itself unconsciously to the point where that are of far greater value for after life than many of those given in the classroom.

To Clean Feather Pillows.

Feathers that have lain for any length of time in pillows should—be washed. To do the work in the best possible manner open one corner of the pillow and pour boiling water in upon the feathers. They will make them a wet mass, and they are much more easily handled. Remove them and then wash them thoroughly with soap and water, being careful to rinse them in several waters. When rinsed put them into the wanted corer and hang in the sun where they will dry and be light and fluffy. In this way none of the feathers are lost.

KNITTED TAMS.

Tips About Making This Most Popular Headgear.

Knitters are directing all their attention to the making of tam-o'-shanters just now. While the tams will be worn to skating parties by grownups, they are intended largely for schoolgirls.

One attractive model of old rose wool is knitted on to a black velvet band, which fits closely around the head. The top of the cap is finished with a fluffy ball of fur.

Crocheted flowers are used extensively to decorate some tams. They are very effective affairs, the flowers adding a festive touch to the cape. No matter whether the flowers match the color of the tam or not, the result is just as smart in one case as in the other.

If one is making a tam for a girl who owns a fractious disposition the colors of the necktpiece should be interesting and bright. The entire hat might follow this suggestion, or a few rows of varicolored wool might be worked around the top of the model. Another method would be to finish the tam with a tassel made of various colored pieces of wool or silk.

It is really interesting to see the many shapes used for the cap. Some are round, others are square, many are hexagonal, while a few are made with diamond shaped pieces which give the tam eight sides.

A cheerful tam of yellow is crocheted in the alternate stitch. This stitch is done so that every two rows form a rib. A single crochet stitch is taken throughout, except that it is made through only back of the next stitch, alternating straight stitches the entire strip. A military touch is gained by the introduction of a black velvet chin strap.

Apple Dumplings.

Pare and chop one apple for each dumpling. Prepare a crumb consisting of one and one-half cupfuls of flour, one large teaspoonful of baking powder, one heaping tablespoonful of butter and moisten with enough milk to roll out. Cut in squares for each dumpling and fill with the apples. Sprinkle with sugar and cinnamon, wet the edges, pinch together, place in a baking pan, fill with boiling water seasoned with one cupful of sugar and a half cupful of butter. This makes the sauce. Bake until the apples are done.

Silence Cloth.

Those of us who still cling to tablecloths instead of polished wood have often wondered at the exasperating qualities of the canton flannel silence cloth. Almost every hot dish placed over it causes it to stick closer than a brother to the polished table and to have white, filmy rings on the wood.

Instead, make a silence cloth out of cheesecloth or other washable material, with one layer of paper between the two folds. Overcast the edges and knot here and there, as in a quilt.

FOR YOUNG FOLKS

Sleepy Time Story About a Land Where Skating is the Custom.

OLD AND YOUNG GO ON STEEL.

Little People of Holland Glide to School in Winter Over the Frozen Canals—Ice Carnivals—Then Comes Summer and Everyone Goes to Bathing.

Well, said Uncle Ned to little Ned and Polly Ann, I suppose you had fine sport on your vacation, for I know you're going to tell you about a country where EVERYBODY SKATES.

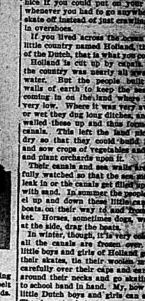
Doubtless you think it would be very nice if you could go to school on skates whenever you had to go anywhere and skate off instead of just crawling along in everyday shoes.

If you lived across the ocean in the little country named Holland, the land of the Dutch, that's what you would do.

Holland is cut up by canals. One of the country's chief industries is getting water. But the people built great walls of earth to keep the sea from coming in at the land, which is very low. Where it was very swampy or wet they dug long ditches and so walled those up and thus formed the canals. The left the land also very dry so that they could plant flowers and sow crops of vegetables and grain and plant orchards upon it.

Their canals are sea, while not entirely watched so that the sea may not leak in or the dikes or walls give way with sand. In summer the people travel up and down these little canals in boats, on their way to and from market. Horses, sometimes dogs, walking at the side, draw the boats.



In winter, though, it's very cold, and all the canals are frozen over. The little boys and girls of Holland get out their skates, tie their woolen mufflers around their necks, put their mittens around their necks and go skating off to school hand in hand. My, how those little Dutch boys and girls can skate! They learn to skate as soon as they can toddle.

But skates are still more useful in Holland. When in the winter the little Dutch children's fathers and mothers wish to go to market with a basket of eggs or butter they get on their skates and away they glide, with the cart behind, go skimming off to town as lightly as birds.

Every one skates in Holland. In winter it is the best way to get about. Horses and wagons are dear, and the people are too thrifty to spend a penny that they can help.

Their outdoor life makes them strong and rosy. They wear queer old fashioned clothes, with short skirts and pictures of long ago. They have wooden shoes on their feet, and the women wear quaint white caps.

All over Holland you will see windmills. These are used also to help harness the wind to do their work. Some of these windmills pump the water out of the marshes. There they are still busy in making into dry land the land that was once under water, back the sea with their high walls, which are called dikes.

"Tattle Tackle Beastalk."

One of the old games, called "Tackle Beastalk," is played as follows: One company goes out of the room while the rest choose some simple question of some small object, such as a pin, a button, a penny, or a thimble. Well, the rule is that the coin shall not be hidden, but shall be placed within view of the room that they left. A dime is a small object, of course, and there are plenty of ways of hiding it hard to see. Now, the person who first sees the dime tries to remain silent and quietly takes a seat. Next, likewise. Next, ditto. And so it goes until each one has remained up and hunting. Naturally the person who cannot see what every one else sees is very much laughed at.

An Ever Popular Game.

Everybody has played leapfrog, and doubtless folks, young and old, will continue the simple sport. Then people are especially fond of leaping, and the nimblest jumper is somewhat of a

THE BEST BOND.

Apart from the patriotic phase, says The Monetary Times, the Canadian war bond is an excellent investment. Dominion Government bonds are point of merit, rank ahead of all other Canadian issues. Our credit in the United States is better even than that of Great Britain. No one in Canada or, for that matter, anywhere else, doubts the stability of the borrower. Canada will be able to meet the interest on its war loans for the present and future without any difficulty. Our shores are free from the invader and, thanks to the British navy, are likely to be. While the Dominion is prosecuting its share of the war vigorously, those who are staying at home are seeing that greater production is achieved from the soil and from natural resources.

However pessimistic the passing phases of the Great War may be indined occasionally to make us, no one who analyses the available facts, can doubt ultimate victory or fail to have well-seasoned optimism in the future of this Dominion, of the British Empire and of their associates.

CANADA'S LIBERAL GIVING

Figures of all the voluntary subscriptions in Canada for purposes in connection with the war," would show a creditable and generous giving. The total would be between sixty and seventy million dollars, probably nearer the latter. It is doubtful, however, if anybody could give approximately complete details. The subscriptions to the Patriotic Fund so far aggregate $33,000,000. The Canadian Red Cross, in money or material, has had or is promised something near $11,000,000. This is outside of what has been raised in two appeals for the British Red Cross, to which the people of Ontario alone have given $3,000,000. The British Seamen's Fund and other sailors' funds total nearly a million. For Belgian Relief there has been given, we think about $8,000,000 in money or goods. Then there has been Serbian Relief, and Polish Relief, and Jewish Relief, there has been prisoners' relief, there have been all sorts of hospital subscriptions, there have been regimental funds and soldiers' clubs, endlessly. In addition to all this, there has been, on the part of the women of canada, constant labour and work of all kinds in furnishing necessary comforts for the men in the trenches. Go where you will, and knitting and sewing will be witnessed by the old and young. Hundreds of thousands of dollars would not cover the value of what has been done.

FOR TRAVELERS.

How to Journey the Easiest, Pleasantest Way.

A common purse for traveling companions does away with much confusion and wearisome settling up after a day of sightseeing. Every morning let each member of the party put a specified amount into a common purse, from which equal expenses, such as car fares, fees, luncheons, etc., are to be paid. Personal expenditures or extras should be taken from individual purses.

A nice way to keep neckwear, ribbons and such things smooth when packing in a suitcase is to put them between the different leaves of a magazine. This takes up less room than a box in a suit case and is very convenient when removed to the dresser drawer, as it keeps these small articles smooth and nice.

A stiff hatbox cut to equal the depth of the hat and placed over the hat will be found to be a most effectual way of preserving its freshness during travel. Underwear and other little accessories can be packed neatly on either side to prevent the box and hat from swaying.

There is a nightgown designed especially for travelers who must spend the night on the cars. It has a pocket in which toilet articles may be tucked and a bag hood which may be slipped over disheveled hair for the trip from the berth to the dressing room.

A bag of little oilcloth such as is used for shelves, with a drawstring at the top, is a highly prized possession when one travels. The soiled clothing is snugly and securely packed in it, thus preventing the contents of the trunk from being affected by it.

Sometimes when traveling or visiting there is pressing need of a laundry bag and none at hand. It one can spare any sort of common towel, a bag may easily be made. Fold the towel in halves and sew up the sides to within six inches of the top. Fold the tops over outside and stitch across, leaving an inch space for the drawstrings, which may be of tape, ribbon or anything that happens to be at hand. Such a bag will serve its purpose and can readily be counted back as a towel when the need is over.

Your New Veil.

The veil has now assumed an almost decorative place. To be sure, it is occasionally worn in the guise of a small bonnet veil, to keep the hair neat in the wind or, in the guise of a stitch fastened, to keep one comfortable motoring in the cold weather, but for the most part the veil is purely ornamental. In such a position it is altogether charming, and on many of the new hats it appears to very good advantage in this way.

Just Color.

A pretty finish for a white nightgown is a binding of colored bias folds of muslin. These folded bias finish can be bought both in plain colors and in stripes and plaids. Sleeves and neck can both be bound in this way, and a band of the colored fold can be placed at the line of an empire waistline to have ribbon run under it. In the same manner chiffon or georgette crepe underwear can be finished with ribbon used as binding.

PUTTING IT PLAINLY.

A speaker at a Toronto temperance convention, discussing vice in Great Britain, said Canada was outraged at the temptations her soldiers were subjected to there. Mr. Tennyson Smith, the widely-travelled lecturer, objected, saying: "You can't find a worse place in the world than Montreal." [illegible] The idea that Canada's soldiers, good Great Britain as youngsters coming into contact for the first time with the temptations of life, is absurd. It is not necessary even to agree with Mr. Tennyson Smith's estimate of Montreal to realize that the average man who is unable to resist temptation does not have to leave Canada to fall a victim to vice. Sheer hypocrisy alone justifies raising a loud outcry in Canada against conditions in Great Britain which, except in form, are to be found in every centre of population in this country. Neither in Great Britain nor in Canada is vice tolerated, encouraged, or protected by the authorities.

The fact is, says The Ottawa Journal, that the Canadian soldier in Great Britain may feel a freedom of action that he does not experience at home. That is not the fault of the British authorities, but more than the civic authorities are responsible for the traditional liberty of action which enables the Canadian whose wife "goes to the country." If the young Canadian is not sufficiently capable of resisting temptation when he leaves Canada, nothing the British authorities [illegible] can do will [illegible] the fact that he goes to a country where public and private ideals are just as high as in Canada. He can be master of himself overseas just as well as at home, or he can make slave himself overseas as easily as at home.

Those Canadians who are concerned over the welfare of our soldiers can be much more usefully employed considering and improving character and conditions at home than in exploiting rumors about conditions in Great Britain, which nine per cent. of the loudest talkers do not understand. The responsibilities of parents at home cannot be shifted to the shoulders of the British authorities, and the Canadian soldiers are old enough and wise enough to take care of themselves in London, Montreal, Ottawa, or anywhere else. Trust them.

Important Plans Made By Province of Ontario To Aid the Returned Men

In a recent address before the Social Service Congress at Toronto the Honorable G. Howard Ferguson, Minister of Lands, Forests and Mines in Ontario, spoke of the problems of providing for returned soldiers. Without any contestation Mr. Ferguson declared that no class of citizens of the Empire deserved more generous, kindly, or sympathetic treatment than the men who had been fighting in the interests of the Allied cause; and no men indeed had done as much for the Dominion of Canada.

There now lies before us the scope of Ontario's plan to deal with these men on their return. The moral and social side is really of more importance than the material side. It is easier to furnish land and means for settling on it, but the returned soldiers will be decisive factors of our future citizenship.

The Honorable Mr. Ferguson pointed out that Ontario would have a tremendously amount of responsibility to bear. Half of the men who went overseas were from Ontario. Moreover, just in addition to these would be the great number of immigrants who would seek homes in this country when the war was over.

A new means of earning their livelihood would have to be provided for many of these men. Fortunately, in Ontario, great facilities existed for agriculture, and training than could be found anywhere else on the continent. The scheme therefore proposed was embodied in the opening up of Northern Ontario. There was a dual advantage in putting the soldier on the land. In the first place it would assist in his moral, mental, and material betterment and in the second it would increase increased agricultural production.

With this end in view we thought it necessary to establish training schools on our demonstration farms. A selection system would be instituted so that each man might fit into his own particular niche.

The land would be divided into eighty-acre farms. Ten acres would be cleared for the immediate erection of buildings. The farms would be absolutely free, and the man would be paid for his services while he was on the land; money would be given him to buy stock, implements, seed, and due provision would also be made to carry him over the period between seed time and harvest.

There was also the problem of the wife and family. The idea of a "soldiers' village" in Northern Ontario would be quite a feature, but there are one of these efforts by the Government already started largely on the social environment provided. It was proposed to introduce moving picture, travel talks, and phonographs, contributed to and the public of the community through the church and school, and develop forces that would bind the community together and create a spirit that would add to the contentment and prosperity of these people.

In addition to the foregoing announcement reference was made to the work of the Soldiers' Aid Commission appointed by the Ontario Government, of which the Honorable W. D. McPherson is chairman. It is expected that twelve thousand soldiers will be returned to Canada within the next few months. An average of seven hundred and fifty men have been coming back each month for some time. Forty-two branch offices have been established in the principal cities of the different centres, and these will be increased as the time demands. Twenty-five hundred if the demand warrants it. During the past year work has been provided in the province for over two thousand men.

Vanity of the Paquans.

The natives of most primitive countries are vain, but the Paquans are particularly so, and though they wear next to nothing in the way of clothing they love to spend hours dressing themselves like birds, painting their hair with long-toothed wooden combs and adorning the great mops with bright flowers, giving it a most artistic effect. They also paint their faces with red and yellow pigments, in designs that are weirdly funny. In the remote mountains both men and women carry small grass bags containing their toilet requisites. Women, adds the writer in the Wide World Magazine, who are recent widows or who are mourning for lost husbands blacken their already dark faces with a subtle pigment so that they appear as if they were a very strange appearance.

Munition Workers' Diseases.

The high pressure under which the production of munitions has had to be performed has brought with it certain diseases. Anaemia has been particularly noticeable in connection with the manufacture of high explosives. Thus, in handling trinitrotoluol, a prolonged period of exposure to the drowsy, suffers from anaemia, headache, loss of appetite, and they even become blue with a characteristic eczema. Unless the operative takes the necessary precautions, he may develop, with decided danger to life, in a few instances sleuth has been directly traced to the handling of the explosive.

Tetryl (nitro-amine) is a slight dust, which, unless timely precautions are taken, leads to dermatitis eczema. Another medium inimical to health is the various "fillers" with which shells and bodies of aeroplanes are treated. This process of filling is carried out by the preparation of the varnish, and this throws off a noxious vapor which produces drowsiness and loss of appetite, and if work is persisted in jaundice. Lead is a very common poison; and come in in the case an alloy who are mourning for lost husbands discovered which is free from the evil consequences. Yet it has not come into general use for the simple reason that the cost of production is greater, especially in the case of widows—it absolutely free, and the man would be paid for his services while he was on the land; money would be given him to buy stock, implements, seed, and due provision would also be made to carry him over the period between seed time and harvest.

There was also the problem of the wife and family. The idea of a "soldiers' village" in Northern Ontario would be quite a feature, but there are one of these efforts by the Government already started largely on the social environment provided. It was proposed to introduce moving pictures, travel talks, and phonographs contributed to and the public of the community through the church and school, and develop forces that would bind the community together and create a spirit that would add to the contentment and prosperity of these people.

Forty-two branch offices have been established in the principal cities of the different centres, and these will be increased as the time demands. Twenty-five hundred if the demand warrants it. Memorable Air Raid.

The anniversary of one of the most brilliant feats in Mannerling and Bottcher's record in the air fell on the original partners. It is another case in which it is applicable, to all people who may pretend their faith in the Kaiser's word. Those people who were parties to the original pact of friendship say, and with reason, to stand aloof from all public affairs, and renounced all privileges of citizenship and voting and holding office. The younger generation have not been parties to this pact, and some electors. This impression was confirmed by the fact that the two men had many friends in the city, and were regarded as men of high character. They had been educated in the public school and the collegiate institute, and had grown up here, but they were not naturalized. [illegible]

STORY OF A RANCH

By BARBARA PHEPS

Jane was a little Mexican girl in southern California. There are many Mexicans there living peacefully under the United States government. They have been in California ever since Mexico gave that State to the United States.

Jane's father was a young New Yorker who went west to engage in ranching. He had been in the south-west a number of months without seeing a white woman except for her sister Clara, who was visiting with him temporarily. Then he saw Jane. She was staying over in her mother's village with a lot of gay colors and much fun. Jane was very very black and her hair, instead of being straight, was curly and her cheeks red.

The trouble occurred when she was strolling over the plains. Jane rode like a native, sitting her pony sideways, under a man's saddle.

"Good morning, señorita," said Bob. "Good morning," answered Jane in reply.

"Where are you going, señorita?" asked Bob. "I have been out looking for those stray sheep. Have you any to-bacco?"

Jane produced tobacco. Bob produced a corncob pipe. They chatted pleasantly for a while and then Bob said, "Say, you go home yourself, asked Jane.

"No, señor, not I."

That was the beginning of it. The next step was Bob and Jane sitting on a log on the bank of a stream. Bob took her hand in his. He failed to notice that it was not as white as his and the skin was rough. He failed also to notice that the cabin at her back was composed of one room only. Jane knew was nothing soft or shiny about it. Pur-posely one arm around her waist, he kissed her. Perhaps the really most attractive thing about her was the delightful turning of her head and drop-ping of her eyes.

Then, miles distant from Atherton's ranch was Chambers' ranch. Chambers was the easy-going gentleman of wealth who had invested in a ranch, the management of which he delegated to others. About the time that Atherton had become spoons with Jane Chambers visited his property, bring-ing with him his wife and their daugh-ter, Clara. Like Clara had been long-ing for a bit of ranch life and was de-lighted with it. The morning after her arrival she rode out on horseback with her father, inspecting his fields. On the way they met Atherton and Jane. Bob, who had seen many people in his region as in New York, and when they met they don't hurry up—they salute and ride along for a chat. Mr. Cham-bers reined in and asked Atherton the usual questions as to locations and other matters. Then there was some general conversation, in which Clara joined.

She was the first lady Bob had seen in months. From her he turned his eyes upon Jane. Great heavens! Could this be the same girl? The difference was simply coarse little creature he had left to attend to business had been turn-ing Jane? Jane was conscious of the change in Bob's attitude. The difference in their skin colorings and hair-dress-ing struck upon her lover. Blushing she quiet down on her horse's haunches, she urged him onward.

Atherton was annoyed. He regretted that he had been caught by the eastern girl in company with the Mexican. He was mortified that Jane should have left him in this abrupt manner, evi-dently jealous. He must either ride after her or let her go her way. He chose the latter course. Not only this, but when the others moved on he moved with them.

That was the end of Atherton's ro-mance. From the time he laid his eyes on Clara Chambers, he saw Jane as she was. He had not the assurance to drop the latter at once. He went to see her and tried to reassure her. He failed and that made matters worse. When a man is peeving from one wo-man to another the surest way to snap their relations is for her to show jealousy. Jane did not improve mat-ters. Bob gradually dropped her.

Naturally he sought the Chambers, who were of his own class, and for the same reason he was welcomed by them. Of course Clara was not igno-rant of this.

One day when Bob was out looking after his sheep he saw Clara riding alone. He was about to join her when he saw Jane riding in the oppo-site direction from Clara. The two girls met, and Bob saw that something was being said between them. Then Jane pointed with her finger. Clara had evidently asked the way some-where.

"Heavens!" exclaimed Bob in an agonized tone, and, digging his spurs into his horse's flanks, he shot off to-ward Clara. She was going directly toward a quicksand. She was nearly two miles from Bob and a quarter of a mile from the quicksand. Bob was going like the wind, but before he could reach her her horse began to flounder. By the time he reached the margin of hard ground the animal was half immersed. Clara, who rode sidewise, was still untouched by the sand. Bob reined his horse, which he always carried, and, whirling it, dropped the noose over her shoulders.

The horse was lost, but the woman was saved.

Neither Atherton nor Miss Chambers said a word to any one about how sending her rival over the quicksand. Clara went east within a few days. Bob left his ranch for parts unknown and never saw the Mexican girl again.

The War of 1914.

In its annual trade review The Monetary Times says: Prior to Au-gust, 1914, settlements at Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Vancouver, Que-bec, Hamilton, St. John, and Victoria were made in legals (Dominion notes), but the following month, when money began to get tight, the banks wished to concentrate and con-tralize cash reserves at convenient points, and accordingly arranged for settlement of daily balances by means of cash only at Montreal, To-ronto, Winnipeg, and Vancouver. It was decided that henceforth Quebec, Halifax, St. John, and Victoria should settle by draft on Montreal. But in the beginning of October, 1914, the British Admiralty advised the Canadian authorities that it was likely Victoria and Vancouver would be bombarded as a result of the op-erations of the German squadron (commanded by Von Spee) in the Pacific Ocean. The banks repre-sented at the Pacific coast ports made rush shipments of legals, gold, and a large portion of their own notes to Winnipeg for safety, and it was agreed that Vancouver should settle by draft on Winnipeg. When all danger of bombardment had passed, it was decided that on and after 1st May, 1915, the Van-couver clearing house should settle daily balances by means of legal ten-ders and the Canadian Bankers' As-sociation ruled that after the same date all settlements between banks in British Columbia (i.e., Victoria and Vancouver) would vary to settle by draft on Vancouver.

DOMINION OF CANADA

Issue of $150,000,000 5% Bonds Maturing 1st March, 1937

Payable at par at Ottawa, Halifax, St. John, Charlottetown, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary, Victoria, and at the Agency of the Bank of Montreal, New York City.

INTEREST PAYABLE HALF-YEARLY, 1st MARCH, 1st SEPTEMBER.

PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST PAYABLE IN GOLD.

ISSUE PRICE 96.

A FULL HALF-YEAR'S INTEREST WILL BE PAID ON 1st SEPTEMBER, 1917.

THE PROCEEDS OF THE LOAN WILL BE USED FOR WAR PURPOSES ONLY.

THE MINISTER OF FINANCE offers herewith, on behalf of the Government, the above-named Bonds for Subscrip-tion at 96, payable as follows:—

10 per cent on application;
30 " 16th April, 1917;
30 " 15th May, 1917;
26 " 15th June, 1917.

The total allotment of bonds of this issue will be limited to one hundred and fifty million dollars, exclusive of the amount (if any) paid for by the surrender of bonds as the equivalent of cash under the terms of the War Loan prospectus of 22nd November, 1915.

The instalments may be paid in full on the 16th day of April, 1917; or on any instalment due date thereafter, under discount at the rate of four per cent per annum. All payments are to be made to a chartered bank for the credit of the Minister of Finance. Failure to pay any instalment when due will render previous payments liable to forfeiture and the allotment to cancellation.

Subscriptions, accompanied by a deposit of ten per cent of the amount subscribed, must be forwarded through the medium of a chartered bank. Any branch in Canada of any chartered bank will receive subscriptions and issue provisional receipts.

This loan is authorized under Act of the Parliament of Canada, and both principal and interest will be a charge upon the Consolidated Revenue Fund.

Forms of application may be obtained from any branch in Canada of any chartered bank and at the office of any Assistant Receiver General in Canada.

Subscriptions must be for even hundreds of dollars.

In case of partial allotments the surplus deposit will be applied towards payment of the amount due on the April instalment.

Scrip certificates, non-negotiable or payable to bearer in accordance with the choice of the applicant for registered or bearer bonds, will be issued, after allotment, in exchange for the provisional receipts.

When the scrip certificates have been paid in full and payment endorsed thereon by the bank receiving the money, they may be exchanged for bonds, when prepared, with coupons attached, payable to bearer or registered as to principal, or for fully registered bonds, when prepared, without coupons, in accordance with the application.

Delivery of scrip certificates and of bonds will be made through the chartered banks.

The issue will be exempt from taxes—including any income tax—imposed in pursuance of legislation enacted by the Parliament of Canada.

The bonds with coupons will be issued in denominations of $100, $500, $1,000. Fully registered bonds without coupons will be issued in denominations of $1,000, $5,000 or any authorized multiple of $5,000.

The bonds will be paid at maturity at par at the office of the Minister of Finance and Receiver General at Ottawa, or at the office of the Assistant Receiver General at Halifax, St. John, Charlottetown, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary or Victoria, or at the Agency of the Bank of Montreal, New York City.

The interest on the fully registered bonds will be paid by cheque, which will be remitted by post. Interest on bonds with coupons will be paid on surrender of coupons. Both cheques and coupons, at the option of the holder, will be payable free of exchange at any branch in Canada of any chartered bank, or at the Agency of the Bank of Montreal, New York City.

Subject to the payment of twenty-five cents for each new bond issued in exchange for fully registered bonds without coupons will have the right to convert into bonds of the denomination of $1,000 with coupons, and holders of bonds with coupons will have the right to convert into fully registered bonds of authorised denominations without coupons at any time on application to the Minister of Finance.

The books of the loan will be kept at the Department of Finance, Ottawa.

Application will be made in due course for the listing of the issue on the Montreal and Toronto Stock Exchanges.

Recognized bond and stock brokers having offices and carrying on business in Canada will be allowed a commis-sion of three-eighths of one per cent on allotments made in respect of applications bearing their stamp, provided, however, that no commission will be allowed in respect of the amount of any allotment paid for by the surrender of bonds issued under the War Loan prospectus of 22nd November, 1915, or in respect of the amount of any allotment paid for by surrender of five per cent debenture stock maturing 1st October, 1919. No commission will be allowed in respect of applications on forms which have not been printed by the King's Printer.

SUBSCRIPTION LISTS WILL CLOSE ON OR BEFORE THE 23rd OF MARCH, 1917.

DEPARTMENT OF FINANCE, OTTAWA, March 12th, 1917.

THE THEATRE IN JAPAN.

How Playgoers Are Entertained in Far East.

The revolving stage, hardly more than an experiment in Europe and America, has been in use by the Ja-panese for centuries, while the run-way, which is rarely seen here except in a musical play, is a necessary adjunct of almost every drama in Japan. Such are among the observa-tions of Percy Burton, an English theatrical manager, who has been traveling in the Far East.

"A leading actor in Japan is well off if he receives $1,500 a year," de-clares Mr. Burton, "and those play-ers are proud to be attached to a star's company quite apart from the matter of salary, as long as they receive their daily rice.

The Japanese audience expects full value for its money and usually four, five, or six plays of varying length and style are performed in a single afternoon and night, dinner being interspersed with farce and musical comedy and dancing.

"The spectators seek on their benches or recline at their comfort, but are enthusiastic enough when their attention is aroused by the dis-comforts of the village. The fre-quent murders which take place, none being too bloody for the san-guinary loving Japanese plebeian, who will certainly appreciate greater facility than he can find in the Occi-dental hippodrome as an Italian opera enthusiast.

"Nor does the scenery leave much of anything to be desired, both in-terior and exterior scenes being on realistic lines and wonderfully well designed and executed. One, in fact, of a bamboo grove, with rushes wav-ing and whistling in the wind, and shadowing water, I have not seen excelled. Moreover, if a tree, a carpenter coming on with a hammer, will destroy the illusion at once, if it is not quite finished when the circular stage revolves."

For Winter Sports.

In sport suits homespuns have a big share in the very smart tailored suits. Wool velours are seen in very gay tints, but wool velours in a gay tint does not look mirish or bizarre. These suits are made for the Canadian and the northern United States resorts. With their big rolling capelike collar and deep cuffs of fur they have a jaunty style.

THE CANADIAN ARMY IN ACTION AND THE ADVANCE OF THE TANKS

The Behemoth of Modern Battles, The British Tank, Has Revolutionized Man's Conception of War on Land.

TO-DAY AND TO-MORROW

Matinee and Night. Two Matinee Performances To-morrow, 2.30. School Children's Matinee 4.30. Admission for Children 10c. Two Performances Nightly--7.45 and 9.00.

Will be presented the official film of the Canadian War Record Office, showing the Canadian Army in Action in France, and the Advance of the Tanks as photographed for motion pictures September 15 and 16, 1916, at the Battle of Courcelette, and issued by authority to the people of Canada as a record of the bravery of her soldiers and a tribute to their glory.

These pictures have been seen and endorsed by the King and the imperial, civil and military authorities, and are endorsed also as official by the Canadian Government. Pte. Harry Johnston, 21 Pryor Avenue, a returned wounded soldier, who fought in the battle of Courcelette with the 20th Battalion, Second Contingent sustaining the loss of an arm and a leg when a shell glanced of a tank said: "I recognize the place where my battalion turned off the road on the night of September 14, and also the place where we entered the trenches. I recognized, too, the first dressing station through which I passed and the building where the German prisoners were having a wash. The picture was certainly interesting to me and recalls much of that battle."

THE KING'S MESSAGE

"These pictures will help to bring home vividly to all in Canada the nature of the great sacrifice which their fellow-citizens in the empire are making in its cause and in that honor and justice. I hope that the greatest success will attend the efforts of those who have organized this means of spreading throughout Canada news of the progress of the great war."

These pictures show the Canadian troops marching to their positions for the attack; show the bombardment which preceded the attack; show our soldiers "going over the top"; the charge across "No Man's Land"; the struggle and the victory. They show the huge Tanks come wallowing up and into the storm of bullets; show the terror-stricken flight of the Germans and their shel smashed and deserted trenches, and the victorious Canadians cheering and triumphant that day at Courcelette last September.

LETTERS FROM OVERSEAS

FROM BILLIE RIGGS

Bournemouth, Feb. 11 1917.

Dear Mother:—

Well I have at last got my pass and I arrived at Bournemouth yesterday afternoon. I have been all over Boscombe today and have seen all the sights, the store and the house, have visited John and Jim's fish stores, although I missed seeing Jim. He was on pass and went back on Sunday, while I did not arrive till Monday. It is too dead here for me though, so I am going to London tomorrow afternoon.

I left France the morning of the 7th and arrived in London that night so you can see I have had half my pass now as I have to go back on Saturday, but I wouldn't mind so much staying here longer in the summer time, but not now, it is so slow and dead for me after being in France so long, away from all civilization. I have had four good days already in London and had a real good time. Seen all the sights that city has to offer. Saw the Lord Mayor, visited Mde. Toussard's Chamber of Horrors and Petticoat Lane on Sunday morning and have seen the best shows London has to offer and also went to he rbest cafes, so I don't know what I shall do when I have to go back to France and live on bully beef and hard tack, it will be awful.

London 1haaw Yhims-nspokeETAO

Auntie has a nice house and has it fixed up fine. I was out in the car this morning with uncle but I guess the blooming thing didn't like strangers for it broke down when we were on our way back and we had to leave it at a garage and walk back to Pokesdown.

I had my picture taken in London and they are some pictures too. I had them taken cabinet size, just showing my face and body. They cost me a little over two guineas for the dozen so expect something good when you receive them. I have had the proofs and will send the pictures on Thursday, so expect them soon after the letter. I am a lot fatter as you will see and you will say after you have saw the pictures that France has agreed with me all right.

I am going to bed early tonight. It is not 9.30 yet. It will do me good having these few days down here but that is all I can stay.

I was al through the Bournemouth Garden along the cliffs with uncle this afternoon, and they are quite a sight now. I would certainly like to see them in the summer time when all the flowers are in bloom. I cannot remember a thing myself about the places around Bournemouth and Boscombe, uncle says it has changed an awful lot and I guess it has changed too much for me to recognize any lardmarks.

I am going to send a few of my pictures to friends, but it won't be very many. You might receive half a dozen yourself. I will send you all I have over for you to give to whoever you want to. I am having three postcard ones made for myself.

The weather is keeping good for me, although awful cold, but as long as it don't rain I won't mind that.

Well mother I guess I will have to close for this time, with the best love to all.

Your loving son,

BILLIE

London, Feb. 20, 1917

Dear Mother:—

Dear Mother:—

I am still in England, although my pass expired four days ago. I have not been able to get back to France as there is no boats running across the channel, probably on account of the submarine menace. I have been down to the Victoria station three mornings running at 6.15 a.m. and have always been turned back, so I am certainly having a good long pass, as I have had fourteen clear days already.

I have seen mostly all the sights of London. Westminster Abbey, St. Paul's Cathedral; gone through the Law Courts and seen just about everything, and was also present at the big meeting at Trafalgar Square on the day before the War Loan closed.

I have also saw a few shows. Saw Harry Lauder, and he was well worth seeing.

I have had fine weather all the time I have been on pass, except today and it is a nasty drizzle now, so I am writing this in the Maple Leaf Club.

I hope you receive my pictures O.K. I am getting three small ones for myself, but I want you to save me one of the larger ones, that will leave you to give four away to whoever you want to. I sent one to Larmer Mason, Pearl Ruttan, Jack Cookson and Lillie, and Gladys and you got the rest.

Well mother, I must close this time, hoping you are all well and with best love to all.

Your loving son,

BILLIE

BOTH MOTHER AND DAUGHTER

Relieved From Pain and Suffering by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Brooklyn, N.Y.—"For three or four years I suffered a great deal of pain periodically, so I would have to lie down. My back would ache and I would feel very weak and miserable. I remembered how my mother had found relief from pain by using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I decided to try it, and thanks to the Compound it helped me just as it did my mother, and I am free from pain, backache and that general weakness that was so hard to bear. I am able to do my work during such times and am recommending Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to my friends who suffer as I did."—Miss META TIEDEMANN, 1622 Jefferson Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

To know whether Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, just try it. For advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

New Films Show Warfare At Close Range

Canadian War Pictures at Griffin's Opera House To-day and To-morrow

Fully Endorsed by the King—They Vividly Depict Canadians' Part in Conflict

Do you want to see the war at close range?

Do you want to see for yourself what part Canada is playing in the war?

Do you want to know how Tommy from Canada lives, and fights and dies overseas?

Do you want to see the wonderful "tanks" in action?

In a word do you want to go to the front, whilst remaining behind— ensconced within the comfortable cushions of a theatre seat?

Then, do not fail to see the battle pictures which are to be shown at Griffin's Opera House today and tomorrow, matinee and evening.

EVERYTHING BUT THE NOISE

As one who has been at the front and has seen the "show" first-hand, put it: "Why, it's the front—all but the terrible din of the booming artillery. Everything's there but the noise."

Principal and foremost in the pictures, are the tanks. One, seeing them for the first time, has a sort of repulsion for them, they are so ungainly, so horrible looking. They look like—they look like nothing one has ever seen before.

When one sees them, caterpillar-like, start on their lumbering, grotesque way, on the road to Fritz, one has a sort of feeling as if one would like to laugh at their ungainly efforts. They are something like elephants trying to do pyramid stunts at a circus. Then as one sees them go along slowly, yet surely, and with bull-dog tenacity writ large in their faces—of course, a tank has none, but one imagines some part of it to be the face—one has a friendly feeling for them. And, as they intermittently appear and reappear, one looks upon them more and more as friends.

Then comes the aftermath of war. One sees the wounded coming in, that is, some. Others cannot "come;" they are carried. Some, on the shoulders of their comrades; some with the help of now friendly Germans, others in stretchers. There are Canadians, there are Germans. And the human interest part of it is that, Canadian and Hun, both receive equally considerate attention at the hands of the Medical Corps. One recalls, involuntarily Poe's words about men disagreeing in faith and hope, yet being united when it is a question of sweet charity.

And then comes a burial scene. It is that of a Canadian who has made the supreme sacrifice, and who is being reverently laid in a coffinless grave. He is buried as he died, and goes to the last bourne, honored, even though unsung.

GREAT GUNS AT WORK

The film opens and one sees the Army Service Corps at work provisioning the vast army. Trainload after trainload and transport after transport wagon roll into view and disgorge their contents with the assistance of thousands of members of the corps. One notes the systematic orderliness of it all: the expedition with which the work is done; the thoroughness of the organization. Then in a flicker of the film, the spectator is introduced to the mighty howitzers very much in action, then the heavier guns—the immense shells being rolled up to the gun pits. One sees the Hun shells exploding in dangerously close proximity to the light railway on which Canadian Tommies are running up the seemingly interminable supply of ammunition.

The bombardment of the third German lines ensues, and one is introduced to the Canadian gunners trying to get Fritz's number.

IN FRONT LINE TRENCHES

Then comes the long line of battalions on their way to the front trenches. They are lighthearted, they laugh, they sing, they wave their helmets. So realistic is it all, that one fancies one can actually hear the singing and the cheering as the boys "carry on," to get at grips with the Hun. As they near the front line trenches one sees them getting long rubber boots—thigh-high, if the term may be used, in the absence of any other properly to describe the trench footgear.

Then one sees the Canadians jumping into the communication trenches—their last stage on the way to the fringe of No Man's Land. "Good Luck Boys" is the message flashed on the screen, as the Canucks take their final jump. And the spectator cannot but re-echo the greeting.

Cherub Devine

By SEWELL FORD

Copyright, 1909, by Mitchell Kennerley.

"Aren't you sure, dear?"

"Oh, no; no! I did not mean to say that. I couldn't say it. I—I do not know you well enough. I nearly asked you to decide for yourself."

The countess bit her lip from vexation. She was cornered and knew it. But was she beaten? Did she ever see a woman defeated by mere logic?

"That's unkind," she replied reproachfully. "You know I haven't said anything of the kind. All I did say was that I ought to go back, and I must."

"Then I suppose I'll just have to keep right on going to the dogs," observed the Cherub dolefully. "I didn't know I was quite such a hopeless case, though."

"Oh, it isn't that; it isn't that!" protested the countess.

"Just so," declared the Cherub. "If it wasn't you wouldn't run away like this. Why, I'm so bad that you won't talk to me. I don't suppose that you'd even shake hands with any one so wicked."

It may have been merely impulse, perhaps it was the pathetic spectacle of the Cherub's injured feelings—she showed suddenly in the brown eyes of the countess.

"Oh, you mustn't feel that way—you must not," she pleaded. "Of course I don't mean it. Impulsively she extended both hands to him. Rather irresolutely Mr. De Vinne took them in his. They he did not know what to do next, whether to let go or to hold on.

He had not fully decided when a full grip from the man of stern face and dignified bearing spurred behind them. He seemed very much astonished at the scene.

"Adele, who is that?" he demanded.

"That, father, is Mr. Devine." It was fiercely done—no hesitancy, no trembling of voice, no wavering of the eyes.

"Not the—the"—

"Yes, the Cherub. Isn't it, Mr. Devine?"

Mr. Devine nodded a good natured assent.

But Adele, this is entirely unexpected. I had no idea that you were acquainted with this—Mr. Devine."

"I have only been telling him that I should not see him again during his stay."

"Ah! Quite proper. I am sure that Mr. Devine does not expect it. Good-day, sir. Come, Adele."

Duffishly the countess followed her father out of the garden.

The ash on Mr. Devine's cigar, however, was not an eighth of an inch longer before he was surprised to see Mr. Hewington reappear before him. The Hewington I seemed, was addicted to posterprops.

"Wonder if he's come back with a stick," reflected the Cherub.

But Mr. Hewington's manner was not openly hostile.

"It has just occurred to me, Mr. Devine," he began, "that you might fancy our attitude somewhat discourteous. If so, you are in error. We are merely considering 'under' rather awkward conditions our customary reserve. Do you follow me, sir?"

"I get a glimmer now and then," complacently rejoined the Cherub. "You mean that you're not mixers."

Mr. Hewington smiled coldly at the colloquialism. "It is apt to have distinctions," he continued. "Perhaps you do not know that our family has long maintained some colonial interests. My great-aunt married a son of the Marquis de LaFayette."

"Never met the gentleman," commented the Cherub.

"Probably not. He came to America in 1815."

"Then he's got here before I did," Mr. Hewington ignored this remark. "His estate, Mr. Devine, was part of the original grant to my family. Some time it extended for fifteen miles along the sound. The old mansion, which stood for nearly a century, was destroyed by the presence of such men as Daniel Webster, President Tyler and others. Charles Dickens was a guest here during his tour of this country. In the present house the late Mrs. Hewington and myself have welcomed many distinguished personages. Some of as you know, my daughter is the Countess Vecchi, allied by marriage to one of the noblest families of Lombardy."

"Seems to be I heard something about that."

"Possibly, possibly." Mr. Hewington waved his eyeglasses impatiently. "I am telling you these things, Mr. Devine, that you may have a better understanding of our attitude. Since the death of the count she has lived in seclusion. She has almost entirely withdrawn from society."

Mr. Devine sat keenly at the old gentleman. "I see," he observed. "Sulking, you mean, by request. Well, I've no objection. I didn't come up here especially to get acquainted with you folks, you know. In fact, you and the countess were rather sprung on me as a surprise."

Mr. Hewington might have been seen to shudder. "My dear Mr. Devine," he protested, "I fear that you still fail to realize our position. Circumstances compel us to remain here during your stay. There is my letter."

"Oh, I know all about that, and I sympathize for the world disturbed, sick pity. I'm just trying to be decent. Now, if you're to stay until you're ready to leave"—

"You see, Mr. Devine, my plans for the immediate future are very uncertain."

"Yes; that seems to be the word. What does the countess have to say?"

"I never discuss matters of business with my daughter. She does not understand such matters. Of course it is necessary to have her sign papers for sale, lease, etc., but I attend to all the details connected therewith. Possibly you have also some of the property having been left to her by the count. I have not yet met Count Ezzelino, being a voyager on the sea, but I presume that he will be here shortly."

"Perhaps so, but I presume that your—countess—knows where to find him. Anyway, arrangements have been soon be adjusted, I suppose, when my attorneys finally get around to it. My daughter was not aware you desired it?"

"Then she cheered up, did she?" Mr. Devine appeared to find the conversation entertaining.

"She was relieved, of course, But I must say I found no appeal in the words of a pamphlet, as well, on a scientific subject which would not be of interest to you. I have intended to take the proper steps. However, now that you have suggested the matter to the situation, I expect that you will not act hastily."

"Don't you worry about that. Anything like that, Mr. Hewington. Maybe I'll remind you of that second."

"It is very considerate of you, sir. Of course until the affair is settled we shall not countenance any violation of right of possession more than is absolutely necessary. If the present arrangement is satisfactory I would suggest that it be continued."

Mr. Cherub frowned. Mr. Hewington with a whimsical smile. "Well, we'll let the thing drift for awhile anyway. Only don't have it be set as though you were prisoners. Why don't you have the countess bring down your meals just as though I wasn't here?"

"My dear sir"— Here Mr. Hewington paused, evidently considering the situation. When he was through Mr. Devine chuckled gleefully. It was an amusingly simple solution, and the Hewingtons were the Hewingtons, and the Cherub was the Cherub. "Done," he told the story.

It was all done very courteously and decidedly. Mr. Hewington's manner was quite manner, yet nothing but the most unlikely hobgoblin of the imaginative could accuse him from being utterly crushed.

"Well, Adele, have dreams, like that," soliloquized the Cherub when he had been left alone.

The possibilities incident upon acquiring a quiet country house were beginning to fill Cherub Devine's mind.

"Let's see," he reflected; "I'm not exactly what you'd call an unwelcome guest, am I? I mean I will be an unwelcome host, then, and hanged if that isn't a new one to me. But there's worse ones than that. I'm no stranger, for one thing. Then, if I'm to be host I'll have to order myself. I'm a deep dyed villain and an unappreciative sinner who has butted into his own home. Like it at once, and then be pretty badly jarred. Wonder what progress I ought to foster?

Now or less thought did Mr. Devine bestow upon the Countess Vecchi during the next day or two. But it was a well defined idea, had the Cherub, that his knowledge of women was vast and deep. A kind and tactful host he'd be then! They had been of all-kinds too. He knew quite a lot about them, in a vague sort of way, but when it came to their ways that they generally meant mischief and that when they were most pleasant they were dangerous.

"No, thank you." This was the Cherub's attitude toward the sex. One experience was quite enough for him. He had been once married, and his one affair with Kittie O'Neill—whom he mentioned indifferently—was a fiasco. It was hardly out of his tooth then, to be sure, and Kittie, having achieved the height of every one's ambition in second row of the chorus, had viewed with scorn the notion that she should scorn until one eventful day when she had fully revealed her attitude by a sudden flight with a prosperous broker. Cherub Devine's faith in womankind had been shattered.

But in the presence of the Countess Vecchi he forgot all his suspicions. He was quite sure that on one point at least her had ever existed before. There was a certain haughty unbend that she should look upon him as an outcast or as a burning brand of sin. He couldn't blame her. A good thing for him, too, and she had no chance of finding it out for herself so long as the old gentleman's letter kept things, Mr. Devine felt, "on ice." Quite a quandary was Mr. Devine in. Well, there good!

CHAPTER IV.

HAVING decided upon his course of action, Mr. Devine forthwith proceeded to put the determination into effect. Cherubine got his office in the stables.

"Been here some time, haven't you, Timmins?" he suggested.

"Came here as underground fifteen years ago, sir."

"You knew the old gentleman fairly well, then?"

"Lor', yes, sir! And he's a very fine old gentleman, sir, in his way."

"Sure," dissented the Cherub. He had settled back in an office chair and was studying intently the varnished ceiling. "But what's his way?"

Mr. Timmins looked perplexed. "Where are his shortcomings, sir?" was Mr. Devine. "What's his strong suit?"

Timmins had translated Mr. Devine's figures of speech. "Well, sir, he's all wrapped up in the Countess Vecchi, sir, him being a widower for so long. Nearly knocked him out when the count turned out to be so bad. He was regular wicked, sir, before the coming of the count. Why, they hadn't been married a month, sir, before he asks the countess for money and clothes for when she wouldn't get it for him."

"Who made that match, Timmins?"

"Mr. Hewington, sir. He was carried away with the idea of his daughter being a countess."

"Thanks nary an society, does he? Do the Hewingtons cut much of a splurge in the fashionable world?"

"Lor', no, sir. Since they lost their money they've kind of dropped out of it all. It goes hard with the poor woman, too, sir."

Mr. Devine smoked thoughtfully for several moments before asking, "any of the real neighbors around here?"

"Lots of 'em, sir. It's a very select neighborhood, sir, as you'll find. Why, the Astors have a place within a couple of stonecherry, sir. Above them are the Miller-Tremaynes, a countess daughter married into the Earl of Dingbat's family and was received at court. Then next below we have the Wallaways, folks that has their own coat of arms, sir."

"Not Nick Wallaway?"

"He's the head of the family now, sir, Nicholas La."

"So Nick is a neighbor of mine, is he?"

"But they're very exclusive, the Wallaways are, sir. They entertain lots of titled folks. They used to be very friendly here, sir, but none of them's been here now for nearly two years."

"Nick's a mighty canny chap," observed Mr. Devine. "How about the other folks, the Withers and the Trenways?"

"Haven't been here for a long time, either, sir."

"Very thoughtless of them, isn't it? But we'll fix that. Hitch up two or three horses for the finest, fleetest horses and take me over to the Wallaways."

"Today, sir?" Timmins stared his astonishment.

"No; right away."

"But it's Sunday, sir. Begging your pardon—but they cannot be home, the Wallaways don't receive on Sunday, sir, and they've got a bishop there."

"Good! I'm right at home when there's a bishop around. Don't you see about the receiving business. You just attend to the hooking up, Timmins."

So Timmins did, but it was with misgivings for the conventional dignity that he drove up to the imposing carriage entrance of the Wallaway residence. The reception was as bad as he feared. In fact, the Wallaways, Mr. Nicholas Wallaway in so much as Eppings and was haughter in suppose, was coldly doubtful as to whether or not Mr. Nicholas Wallaway could be seen. He surveyed the Timmins from his window hurriedly and glanced with disapproving eye at Mr. Devine's tobacco brown waistcoat.

"I don't think Mr. Walloway is receiving today," he observed.

"Oh, that'll be all right, fatty," cheerfully remarked Mr. Devine. "Toot along in and tell him that Cherub Devine is out here."

The footman's hauteur gasped. Timmins trembled in his seat. Two minutes later Mr. Nicholas Wallaway, accompanied by his wife and daughter, passed, was escorting Mr. Devine past the awful presence of the stout butler and into the house.

A clean cut young man of sedate, but not severe appearance, with a pair of keen gray eyes was Mr. Nicholas Wallaway. No one but the Cherub, not even Mr. Wallaway, the most intimate friend, ever dreamed of calling him Nick.

Mr. Devine had not encountered young Mr.-Wallaway with a social call before, but he had dropped in on one or two at the new offices of Wallaway & Co., and his reception had been somewhat mixed. Now, Mr. Nicholas Walloway had felt himself singularly favored, and he said so, when Mr. Devine, in due time, had been ushered into the enterprising presence.

"Delighted to meet you, I'm sure," Mr. Wallaway was glad to see him in the office he would feel the same about introducing him to his home. "But this was hardly a safe line of, research-ing any one, who knew Mr. Devine as all of us do," he added. Just a glance at the slight wrinkle between the gray eyes and Mr. Wallaway guessed that Mr. Walloway was somewhat perplexed and not a little ill at ease. But if the Cherub was there his business he gave no hint. Mr. Wallaway summoned something about a stock deal.

"Deal!" responded the Cherub lightly. "No; I'm not anxious about any deal, at least not today. But by the way, I expect your firm will get some orders along about Tuesday for something! Yes? it is something about Y. Z. and N. Heard about that, did you? Well, I'll need you Tuesday. I've had my eye on you for some time, and now that I'm a neighbor of yours"—"Yes, that's right. Got the next place above, Hewington Hold, or Acres, or something."

"Do you mean to say that you own Hewington Acres? When did you get possession?"

To be continued.

GERMAN SPIES TRAIL GERARD

American Ambassador Has Papers Which World Prove Unfavorable to Berlin Government

Special to The Intelligencer

NEW YORK, March 13.—A Herald despatch from Havana says German spies have been trailing Ambassador Gerard all the way to America, and are close to him yet. A Herald correspondent says Gerard has papers containing information which will place Germany in a more unfavorable position than she has yet occupied.

Indian Troops In Bagdad Gain

Many Veterans From Flanders—Effect of Victory to be Felt in Europe

LONDON, March 12.—The Times, in editorially discussing the capture of Bagdad, pays a handsome tribute to the Indian troops. It says:

"Nor are we apt to speak as though the troops of Gen. Maude's command were exclusively British. It must always be remembered that a very large proportion of the forces, so guided to victory are Indian regiments, and cavalry, which hung on the flanks of the demoralized Turkish army and chased it to the confines of Bagdad.

"It must have been almost exclusively Indian cavalry and infantry which, many months of pursuit, and included Indian units which had already fought heroically in France, on Gallipoli and in Egypt."

LONG TERMS FOR THE PRISON PLOTTERS

Ten Sentenced Five Years For Mrs. Wheeldon and Mrs. Mason

LONDON, March 12.—Mrs. Alfred Wheeldon and her daughter, Mrs. Winifred Mason, and the latter's husband, Alfred George Mason, were found guilty on Saturday of conspiracy to murder Premier Lloyd George and Sir. Hon. Arthur Henderson, member of the War Council. Miss Harriet Ann Wheeldon, who also was tried on the same charge, was acquitted. Mrs. Wheeldon was sentenced to ten years penal servitude, sentence of seven years was imposed upon Alfred Mason, while his wife was given five years' penal servitude.

Judge Low, in summing up the case, said that if the poison that figured in the case had been required for dogs, as had been claimed, it was unlikely that such particular poisons as the ones named would have been selected in such large quantity and with such secrecy and mystery. There was very slight evidence against Harries Wheeldon, who appeared to know nothing of poisons, he said.

The jury was out for consideration of its verdict only twenty minutes, Harriet Wheeldon was discharged from custody at 4.30 p.m.

IRISH QUESTION RE-OPENED

Further Debate on Home Rule Next Week

LONDON, March 12.—The Irish Nationalists made their re-appearance in the House of Commons this afternoon and assured themselves of another early debate on the subject of Home Rule for Ireland, when from the Government a promise that the Irish estimates would be introduced some day next week. The estimates will provide an occasion for a debate on the whole Irish administration.

EAST AFRICAN CAMPAIGN PRACTICALLY AT AN END

General Smuts Says That After Rainy Season in March and April Germans Will be Forced Either to Surrender or Cross Portuguese Territory, Where Portuguese Troops are Ready to Deal With Them

LONDON, March. 13—Specials—Lieutenant-General Jan Christian Smuts, former Commander of the expedition against the German forces in East Africa, and who recently was made a Privy Councillor, has arrived in England. Speaking of the situation on the Eastern Africa battle front, Lieutenant-General Smuts says:

"The campaign in East Africa is virtually ended. After the rainy season in March and April the Germans will be obliged either to surrender or enter Portuguese territory, where the Portuguese are ready to deal with them.

"The operations against the mere remnant of Germans will be undertaken by native troops I have trained. because I found the white troops were unable for any length of time to stand the climate. The natives made splendid fighting infantry, and at the close of these operations will be available elsewhere.

"East Africa is enormously valuable and productive. The German spent millions in developing it. The mere suggestion that any part of it should be returned to Germany is preposterous. The native population has stood magnificently by us, and I shudder to think what would happen if any part of the territory were given back to Germany. All the African colonies would be aghast at the mere idea, and, moreover, our prestige would suffer materially."

A despatch from London said the Imperial Government has acceded to the South African Government's request that Gen. Smuts represent South Africa at the Imperial War Conference in London instead of General Louis Botha, the South African Premier, whose presence was urgently required at the approaching session of the South African Parliament.

Gen. Smuts was therefore replaced in the military command in East Africa by Lieut.-Gen. A. R. Hoskins.

Asserts Husband Murdered Twenty

St. Pierre Killed Score of Own Children His Widow Declares

MONTREAL, March 12.—A description of how her husband, William St. Pierre, whose body was found in the cellar of his home near Aultsville, Ont., with deep wounds in the throat last Friday, had killed twenty of her twenty-seven children, was given to the police by Mrs. St. Pierre to-day.

As the crime to which Nettie Richming, seventeen-year-old wife of Emerson St. Pierre, son of the dead man, has confessed, is investigated the details grow more revolting.

It is stated by his wife that William St. Pierre subjected his little girls to periodical attacks, and that he murdered most of the male children born to him. The police will dig up the land around the St. Pierre home and try and verify Mrs. St. Pierre's story.

Detective Miller of the Ontario Provincial Police Force, is making a searching inquiry into the girl's story, while Sir. St. Pierre Jr.'s actions previous to and after the death of his father.

PROMINENT OTTAWA MAN PASSED AWAY

OTTAWA, March 12.—Mr. Denis Murphy, for years one of Ottawa's leading business and public men, died on Saturday after a lengthy illness, at his home on Metcalfe street. The late Mr. Murphy was a director and shareholder in many large companies, and took an active part in public life i the Capital. He was seventy-five years of age.

PULLED GUN'S TRIGGER WITH STRING ON FOOT

BEAVERTON, March 12—Special—William McDonald, a farmer living near Brechin, was found dead in his house yesterday. When discovered there was a shot gun in his hand with a string tied to the trigger and attached to his foot. It was a clear case of suicide. McDonald was unmarried, lived alone, and was forty years old.

BRITISH CARRY OUT EFFECTIVE TRENCH RAID SOUTH OF ARRAS

LONDON, March 13.—Special—The official report from British Headquarters in France to-night reads:

"We improved our position slightly during the night northeast of Boucheavesnes. Enemy trenches in the same neighborhood were entered by our patrols at other places and a few prisoners secured. This morning we raided German trenches south of Arras, in spite of strong opposition by the garrison, bombed dugouts and inflicted many casualties.

"The artillery activity on both sides was most marked in the Ancre area the neighborhood of Arras, Neuville St. Vaast and the Ypres sector.

"There was considerable aerial activity yesterday. Much successful bombing and reconnaissance work was carried out by our aeroplanes. Air fighting is continuous. Nine enemy machines were brought down or driven down damaged, four of which are known to have been destroyed. Five of our machines are missing."

PERFECTING AIR SERVICE

Britain Replacing Inferior Airplanes With the Best Obtainable

Special to The Intelligencer.

LONDON, March 13—"We are satisfied with the best type of our flying machines at the front. Some machines which are not up to the standard are being replaced as rapidly as possible," said James Macpherson in the Commons today, replying to a suggestion of British aerial superiority on the western front not being maintained. The average of casualties for six weeks had been little more than 7 killed, 7 wounded and four missing per week.

POINTS OUT NEED OF MORE RELIGION

OTTAWA, March 12.—With appropriate services, including special music by the choir, the anniversary of the dedication of Emmanuel Reformed Episcopal Church, corner of Glouces ter and Elgin streets, was celebrated on Sunday.

Rev. Willard Brewing, of Toronto, occupied the pulpit in the morning and in the evening the service was conducted by Rev. Robert Ashville, International Director of the Daily Vacation Bible Schools of America.

Rev. Mr. Brewing paid tribute to Emmanuel Church whose Sunday School had was one of the few in Ottawa to be used last summer for vacation Bible school purposes. Rev. Mr. Boville pointed to the greater need of religion in the world if it was to be sane and sound.

Note—Bishop Willard Brewing is a son-in-law of Rev. A. M. Hobby of Emmanuel Church, Belleville.

CRISIS IN ENGLAND

Storm Predicted for Lloyd George in Parliament

NEW YORK, March 12.—Unless events take a sudden turn Lloyd George will face during the coming week the most critical period since he became Premier, cables the London correspondent of the New York Tribune. Political opposition is about to attack him from several angles, says the correspondent, who believes that a severe political storm is about to break, but that the ship of State will safely ride it out.

Among the factors in the disturbance is the publication of the Dardanelles report, which caused heartburnings; then Redmond and his Nationalists return to the Commons Monday to ask an early discussion of the Irish estimates, chiefly as an obstructionist move.

The debate on the India cotton duties is scheduled for Wednesday and is expected to make trouble for the Government.

GAINS FOR THE ALLIES

Attacks By Germans Easily Repulsed—French Troops Successfully Raid Enemy Trenches

Special to The Intelligencer

PARIS, March 13—Several attacks were made by Germans last night, and all were repulsed, the War Office announced today. A strong German detachment which attempted to advance on Coury Hendicourt was checked. Another futile attempt was made at Beaulne et Chivy.

Two German attacks on Hill 181 and on Louvemont work on Verdun front were countered easily. The French took 150 prisoners yesterday. During the night Germans bombarded Soissons.

French troops successfully raided German trenches between the Avre and Aisne.

KAISER STARTED PLOTS

Conspiracy Against U. S. Began 30 Years Ago

NEW YORK, March 12.—Prussian the present Kaiser came to the throne plotting against America began when Cortes the New York Herald in an extensive article quoting various sources of reliable information. The organization of German choral societies, veteran, gymnastic and other social clubs throughout the United States in the Germanic interests, formed part of a plot which covered the world and planned to keep in close touch and devotion to the Fatherland all subjects who had made new homes in other lands.

Insults Flung At Mr. Gerard

Never Did Diplomat Show More Restraint—Backs Out Policy of President

LONDON, March 12.—The staff correspondent of the Times at Havana, who accompanied former United States Ambassador Gerard on the Infanta Isobel, which arrived at Cuba from Spain, cables his paper that in the course of the voyage he had abundant opportunity for conversation with the United States officials, confirming the impression previously gained on the general courage with which Mr. Gerard carried out the instructions given him by the President.

Probably never before in the diplomatic intercourse between two civil powers has any Ambassador exercised a greater restraints than did Mr. Gerard in the face of studied humiliation upon his personal character. The spirit of President Wilson's policy was to ignore as far as possible all slights and provocations, and in the end the inevitable rupture came no section of the variegated American nation, with its divergencies of sympathies, could ascribe even the smallest degree of responsibility to American diplomacy.

The united American nation now confronts Germany as a unit on this policy. This, as all events, is the confident anticipation of Mr. Gerard.

NIVELLE VICTORIOUS OVER THE TEUTONIC FORCES

Large Slice Taken From Enemy Salient in the Champagne—French Troops Attack on Front of Nearly a Mile and Carry All Trenches Occupied by Foe on Hill 185—Heavy Artillery Duel Reported

LONDON, March 13—Special—The French took another large bite out of the German salient in the Champagne this afternoon. Attacking west of Maisons de Champagne, on a front of nearly a mile, the French troops carried all the trenches occupied by the enemy on Hill 185, penetrated a fortified work on the slopes north of Monsenon and gathered in about 100 prisoners.

Successful grenade attacks last night prepared the way for the operation yesterday, which places the French lines beyond the points occupied previous to the German offensive on February 16. The Germans have had no rest from fighting since that day, the French troops being continuously on the alert, and often rushing forward from their trenches without warning of artillery preparation.

French guns now dominate the Champagne positions immediately south of Ripont, and may pave the way for further substantial gains in that sector.

The official communication issued by the French War Office last night read:

"Between the Oise and the Aisne fairly violent artillery fires were directed against the enemy organizations to the northwest of Vingre.

"In Champagne we delivered in the course of the afternoon a new attack against the German positions west of Maisons de Champagne on a front of 1,500 metres. Our troops captured all the trenches the enemy had taken on Ridge 185, and penetrated a fortified work on the slopes north of Momelon. In the course of this action we took about 100 prisoners."

KILLED 15 GERMANS

Record With Bayonet of Pte. Fred Edmunds, Now Wounded

TORONTO, March 12—Mr. Edmunds, boxer and wrestler, has received a telegram from Ottawa stating his brother, Pte. Fred Edmunds, has been wounded, and is now in the hospital.

Pte. Edmunds is only 21 years of age, and he enlisted with the 70th Battalion coming back from the United States, where he was on a tour giving wrestling and boxing matches, being a middleweight champion, to join the ranks after his brother Art had been rejected on account of his eyesight. In a letter received only a few days ago by a Toronto lady friend a comrade of Edmunds had already killed fifteen Germans with the bayonet. Pte. Jack Edmunds C. E. F. is a brother.

HINDU STUDENT MAY BE PLOTTER

Officials Silent After His Arrest in New York

NEW YORK, March 12—Heramba L. Gupta, a Hindu student at Columbia University, was arrested early today, after he had been interrogated by the police and federal authorities for three hours, on a complaint with charges against Dr. Chandra Chakraberty, another Hindu, and Dr. Ernst Schlaeger, a German scholar, for conspiring to violate the neutrality of this country by plotting a revolution in India. A man and woman accompanied Gupta to police headquarters where he was taken in custody, but it was said they had no connection with the case.

Cordova Mine Damaged by Fire

Probable Loss of Three Men—Loss Will Amount to About $100,000

A very serious fire occurred early this morning at Cordova Mines, about seven or eight miles from Marmora, when No. 1 Shaft House, the stamp mill, 6 tank houses, the trestle and machine shop, the property of the Cordova Mines, Ltd., were destroyed, with the probable loss of the lives of 3 men. The fire commenced in the No. 1 shaft in which at the time were five men. Two of the men were rescued, but the remaining three, up to time of going to press, were still in the mine, with little prospect of being rescued.

The loss will amount to about $100,000, which is partly covered by insurance. Mr. P. Kirkgarad is the President and Manager of the Mining Co., under whose management the mine has proved a prosperous establishment.

The power house, compressor mill and the other shaft houses were untouched by the fiery element.

ENTERTAINED CARPET BALL LEAGUERS

An enjoyable function took place last evening at the Sons of England Hall, Robertson Block, Front street, Belleville. Members of 15 rink teams in the city comprising the Carpet ball league were entertained by the members of the Sons of England carpet ball team, after a match had been played with the Alpha Club of the Tabernacle Church. The Tobacconist Club of the Baptist Church and the Bohemian Men's Bible Class of the Bridge Street Methodist Church, which is of the league were present. Mr. Ellis also a representative in the person of Mr. Wm. McIntosh of the Sons of Scotland, which organization is about adopting the game.

A bountiful spread was provided which is needless to say that it was much appreciated by all present. Mr. P. K. Fisher who is captain of the Sons of England team occupied the chair and filled that position in a most acceptable manner. After due justice had been done to the good things provided a number of those present were called upon and gave a brief but appropriate addresses. All characteristic of the game of carpet ball as a gentlemanly pastime and also as having the effect of bringing together in friendly intercourse the members of the various churches and fraternal societies. This season the Business Men's Bible Class from the Bridge Street Church was the winner of the league matches and the various members were called upon to explain how they did it, and they did so to the satisfaction of all present. The addresses were short but witty. A feature of the evening was a popular song rendered by Mr. Don. G. Bleecker. During the evening the chairman was made the recipient of a fine ring, which presentation was made by Mr. Bert Kelly; after Mr. B. Sills made a few well chosen remarks. The closing affair was brought to a close by the singing of the National Anthem and Auld Lang Syne.

Try This If You Have Dandruff

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. This destroys it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.

LIVELY RUNAWAY

At about eight o'clock last night, a lively runaway occurred on Front street, when a horse attached to a cutter made a getaway in the vicinity of the Upper Bridge, making a record run to Bridge street, when it was stopped when it tried to make the corner. The street was clear of traffic at the time, no damage being sustained by the runaway outfit. Several unsuccessful efforts were made by pedestrians to stop the bolting horse on its way down Front street.

254TH BENEFIT AT RINK

One of the largest crowds of the season were present at the Arena last evening, the proceeds of which went to the 254th Battalion Band. An attraction which brought out many of the skaters was the presence of two bands, the 15th Regimental Band and 254th Band, continuous music being discoursed throughout the evening, there being twenty waltz. The former band was seated in the west end of the rink, the 254th Band was placed in the reserved seat portion of the arena. The ice was in fairly good condition considering the lateness of the season, although it became considerably cut up by the tenth band, when it was necessary to clean off the heavy slush.

A MASONIC FUNERAL

From Messrs Thompson Company's undertaking parlors yesterday afternoon the funeral of the late ex-Mayor H. McIntosh took place. It was under the auspices of the Masonic fraternity of which deceased was a member. There were many members of the craft and citizens present, to pay the last tribute of respect to one, who in life was esteemed by all who knew him. The remains were taken to St. Thomas Church, where the Rector, Rev. Archdeacon Beamish conducted the burial services of the Anglican Church. He also officiated at the interment in Belleville cemetery. A number of beautiful floral tributes were placed upon the casket. The funeral services of the Masonic fraternity were conducted by V. Wor. Bro. A. R. Walker and Rt. Wor. Bro. F. D. Symonds. The bearers were members of the craft namely: Mayor Ketcheson ex-Mayors C. N. Sulman and H. A. Ackerman, L. R. Terwilliger, Wm. Alford and Chief Newton.

E. Tennyson Smith At St. Andrews Church

Speaks Before Large Audience—Brings Out Strong Points Favorable to Temperance—Mrs. Smith Sings

The splendid audience which greeted Mr. E. Tennyson Smith in St. Andrews Church hall last evening evidenced the interest which had been aroused by his addresses on Sunday and a very fine for the success of the campaign. The Rev. A. S. Kerr presided. Mr. E. Tennyson Smith's subject was "The Drink Demon," and in his opening remarks he said that he wished to make it clear that his work for the temperance movement was based on the gospel. He congratulated the temperance people of Belleville upon their commonsense in having a campaign such as they were now entering upon, as too frequently when a town or a province went "dry" the temperance people sang the doxology and considered their work was practically done, instead of which it was only just begun. He said when we read of the British having won a battle and captured a town from the Germans we invariably also read that the next thing they do is to "consolidate the position" they have won, and it ought to be the same in this prohibition fight—having won prohibition they must consolidate their position by strengthening public sentiment behind the law so as to make it effective; moreover it was important to convince those who did not believe in either total abstinence or prohibition that the former was best for the individual and the latter the only remedy for the evils of the liquor traffic. He said he held that those who were opposed to their views only to realize the evil wrought by the traffic to come over to their side. He related several incidents which thrilled the audience. He also showed the comedy and tragedy of the question by a number of humorous stories which caused much laughter and also touched. The most striking illustration was his realistic impersonation of "an interview with the Devil" in which he depicted the fiend exulting over the ruin and devastation which he was able to bring about to individuals and communities. The moving daughter of the fiend as he gloated over his victims driven to the jail, the poorhouse or the lunatic asylum, or over the wreckage of the railway train, or the steamer going down at sea, was worthy of a Shepherd's Plea presented by an Irving, was also the distress of the man, her whose boy had been killed by drink, and the whole scene, so dramatically given, held the audience spellbound.

Mr. Smith has been styled by the press "The second John B. Gough," and it certainly seems as though the mantle of that remarkable orator has fallen upon this present-day speaker. In England people have been known to often to pay $5 apiece for the privilege of standing room to hear Gough, but the people of Belleville have the privilege of listening without charge, to a speaker who more nearly approaches to Gough in his dramatic power than any man since the great orator's day as the admission to all Mr. Smith's lectures is free, the only night on which a charge is made being the last night which is not a lecture, but an evening of Dramatic Recitals which is to be given on Tuesday next, the 20th.

Mr. Smith's meeting tonight will be in Bridge Street Methodist Church School-room, the subject being "The Great Struggle." Tomorrow night (Wednesday) the meeting will be in the Y.M.C.A. Hall, Thursday in the Salvation Army Citadel, and Friday in the Tabernacle Methodist Church. It was announced that during this week's meeting, Mr. Smith will give his famous dramatic representation of a "tug of war" between the temperance party and the traffic and on another evening will make some startling revelations in reference to shareholders in breweries, distilleries, etc., in which matter he is an expert, having spent an immense amount of time and money in making investigations. There has frequently been an informal collection a charge made for admission when the Lecturer has given his "tug of war" but in Belleville he will give it on one of the free nights. Mr. Tennyson Smith's singing adds much to the enjoyment of the meetings.

Mooselaw Boy Is An Inventor

The National, Progress, a journal published in the west, in the March number has the following item of interest:

Five million dollars was recently paid by the Dominion Government to a Moose Jaw boy inventor, Charles Ross, a nineteen-year-old lad, at present serving in the 128th Battalion. Four years ago, Ross commenced his work on a machine to transmit electric energy by wireless, and this last summer while at Camp Hughes having finished his work successfully, he was granted a patent on it. His machine is described as self-contained and is able to generate its own power, not needing steam or other power to work it. The present model has been shown to be capable of generating a current of 2,500 volts and transmitting it for four thousand miles, and the young inventor is satisfied that he will be able to build a larger machine that will increase this output in proportion.

When he perfected the device he offered it to the Dominion Government for war purposes, but the Government considered the price he asked too high, and made no offer. Shortly after that Thomas Edison offered Ross eight hundred thousand dollars for the invention? This he also refused and after the 128th Battalion arrived in England, Ross received a cable from the Government offering him one million dollars for the idea, and also a substantial royalty agreement. Ross is to leave England in a short time for home to continue work on his invention. The possibilities of it are described as unlimited by those who have seen the thing work.

The Car was built—a CHALMERS

Across the vision of a man came a car.
He built the car
—and with it built a world-famed institution.

The field of motordom choked with weeds. Luxury rode behind a Mogul engine in an upholstered truck. Men were tired of motor extravagance. But, the supreme comfort of motoring came not with economy.

Chalmers success—marvel of a decade—came from low-cost production of the car ideal.

Chalmers saw the sensible car—the sort of car a business man would drive. A car that would appeal to keen minds as a sound buy.

The Chalmers Institution, founded on ideals, took up the task, to bring to men of moderate means, comforts that until then only a Croesus could buy—luxury, beauty, fine furnishings and finish, light weight, speed performance.

Chalmers built the ideal car.

Not—mark you this—a car ideal for the price. Price never creates the ideal. Chalmers has said "Any fool can cut prices, but it takes brains to make a better article."

No, the Chalmers Institution made the car to the Chalmers ideal. Your Business Man's car must be a fine car. Luxurious comfort, his family expects. Appearance he must have, he's grown an esthetic. Power, for speed and heavy going. Life, in crowded traffic. Pep, on the hills.

Security and reliability above all.
Chalmers made a car for every day business: not a toy nor a truck
—but a road-active pleasure car—A MOTOR CAR.
The car was built, a Chalmers. Chalmers efficiency held down costs. Chalmers markets supplied an output enormous. The Chalmers Institution produced the ideal at the cost of mediocrity—$1625.

CHALMERS BRIDGES THE BOUNDARY.

The Canadian Chalmers is made to the Chalmers ideal—in Canada.
Chalmers has created a Factory in Canada. The young giant parallels the old. It is one with the parent Chalmers Institution; one in purpose—one in ideals of making and marketing cars.
Men high up in motordom have linked their fortunes with Canadian Chalmers.
In every city the big motor car distributors are Chalmers men. Local success joins with Chalmers success. Men who achieved by serving, well, are eager to sell the ideal car—the Chalmers.
Chalmers is a symbol of success that attracts successful men.
Your business man drives his Chalmers. He chose it because it was the ideal car, the sensible car for him.
He calls it by name, "his Chalmers."
In Canada, throughout the world, the name rings clear.
Chalmers is a car, a man, an institution.

YOUNG WOMAN GETS FORTUNE FOR SINGLE ACT OF KINDNESS

Heir to $38,000 Because When She Saw Aged Woman Stumble on Beach She Extended a Helping Hand

Miss Rose Shampanier of Paterson, N. J., is a firm believer in the assertion that it does no harm to be kind and polite. Because of a simple act of kindness to an aged and infirmed woman in the summer of 1914 Miss Shampanier is today heiress to a fortune of $38,000.

She will receive her reward when she becomes 25 years old, three years hence, and in the meantime the interest will be paid to her. The only string to the fortune is that Miss Shampanier remain single until she is 25.

By saving Mrs. Catherine Ward of Grand Rapids, Mich., from a fall, Miss Shampanier herself fell—into a fortune. At the time the young woman, who is the daughter of Samuel Shampanier, a real estate broker, of 213 Hamilton avenue, Paterson, was visiting her sister in Dorchester, Mass. She had gone to Revere Beach for a swim when she noticed the aged woman walking along the sands. As the woman neared Miss Shampanier she stumbled and would have fallen were it not for the strong arms of the girl, then 19 years old.

The aged woman was Mrs. Ward. She was so grateful to Miss Shampanier that she asked her to call and see her. They became better acquainted and were daily companions until Mrs. Ward returned to her home in Grand Rapids.

Invited To Mott Benefactor

A few weeks ago Miss Shampanier received a letter from Mrs. Ward's nurse asking her to go out to Grand Rapids. The letter explained that Mrs. Ward was seriously ill. The parents of Miss Shampanier objected to her taking the long journey and even forbade her to go. She got around that by leading the family to believe she was going on a trip to Boston. Instead she went to Grand Rapids.

"There I found Mrs. Ward very low," Miss Shampanier said today. "She said she knew she was dying and that she had no relatives and wanted to leave her money to me. The will was drawn up and she explained that she did not want me to marry until I am 25.

Opposed Early Marriage

"She said she had been married when she was 18 and she was the young she died while I was there. After I returned home I told my parents where I had been.

"Already a number of men have heard of my good fortune and have written to me, but there is no danger of any engagement. I already have a very acceptable young man in mind and he is willing to wait three years. So am I."

WAR SMALL SUBSCRIPTIONS.

Small subscriptions are an important factor in the success of our war financing. The outstanding feature of the recent British "victory" war loan was the great number of small subscriptions, which helped to swell the loan to record proportions. Our banks have much to do in financing war orders placed here and in carrying the increasing volume of agricultural and industrial production. Financial and other corporations will subscribe liberally to the coming war loan, but it is absolutely necessary that many thousands of subscriptions, ranging from $100 to $25,000, should be received in order to make the loan a real success. Dominion war loan bonds are one of the world's best investments and have a patriotic flavor. A subscription to our war-loans is not a sacrifice., It is a duty, and incidentally it renumerates the subscriber handsomely.

A large number of small subscriptions to the war loan will be more appreciated by the Government than a small number of large subscriptions. The allotment of the loan to large subscribers will be cut down by the Government so that all the small subscribers may have their full share of bonds.

There are many thousands of people who have from $100 to $5,000 for investment. Their duty is to lend the money to their country. The security of the war bond is excellent, the income yield is high and the bonds are readily saleable at any time, should the holder desire to sell.

THE DOOM OF CARVELL

It is their comment on the result of the recent New Brunswick provincial elections the Liberal press indulges in a rather peculiar paradox. The claim is made that the Liberal victory is great personal triumph" for Sir Frank B. Carvell, M.P., but no mention is made of the fact that Mr. Carvell's own riding, Carleton, went solidly Conservative. So whom does the "personal triumph" come in?

Whatever the reasons may be for the change in New Brunswick, and there were doubtless several contributing stuffs, look about you now and see if your bread help cause, it cannot be honestly claimed that the result was a vindication of Mr. Carvell for his vicious and lying attacks on the Federal Conservative administration. Mr. Carvell's only just plight to-day lies in the fact that he has seldom made a speech that did not reek with falsehood. The infamous "Shell Charges" were concocted by him and the crime perpetrated by his willing tool, W. G. Kyte, the Liberal member for Richmond, N.S. When a Royal Commission had probed the charges to the bottom, at the specific request of Sir Robert Borden, and the utter falsity of the charges was about to be announced, Mr. Carvell had the audacity to declare that Mr. Kyte did not make any "charges" but merely "statements".

The recent provincial elections do unmistakably indicate one thing and that is that Mr. Carvell's career as a public man is closed. The sooner the better, decency public life in Canada.

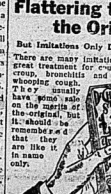
THE WORK OF COUNT ZEPPELIN

Count Zeppelin, who has just died, did much to make war needlessly frightful, but was not himself one of the hateful figures of Germany. Before the war he was popular, with the popularity that comes to men who make conspicuous sacrifice for ideas or principles not connected with their personal advantage. Every one knew of the Count who had ruined himself to build an air chimera: and then, when the chimera became a practical reality and brought its creator recognition in return for his sacrifices every one was gratified.



When the war came every one wondered what vast capacity for destruction lay in the Zeppelin hangars. Soon the world realized that the monsters of three staples were too unwieldly, too tender, too unfitting for the true work of war. As airbattlers they were at the mercy of the armed biplane.

Then came the idea of sending the Zeppelins to blow up homes and kill babies and other harmless human creatures among Germany's enemies. We are not aware that this idea originated with the Count, and there were plenty of others in Germany whose genius had more of this bent than his. If he did originate the idea, it may have been with some notion that bombs could be dropped with fair precision of factories, storehouses, barracks and similar points in the belligerent organization. Unfortunately for him this has not been the outcome. The Zeppelins have been as blind in their viciousness as to others. Their failure to make war, their resort to purposeless cruelty, is their real failure and the true cloud upon the the close of Count Zeppelin's life

But Imitations Only Disappoint

There are many imitations of this great treatment for coughs, colds, croup, bronchitis and whooping cough. They usually have some merit on the merits of the original, but it should be remembered that they are like it in name only.

This is a facsimile of the package bearing portrait and signature of A. W. Chase, M.D.

Current Comment

Don't eat all the potatoes. Keep enough for seed. It may be hard to get them later May.

It is easy to win the war. All you have to do is to call a meeting and pass resolutions.

Wonder if the United States Senator, who was recently sent thirty pieces of silver, will buy a rope with it.

It is usually the man who is not doing his full duty in connection with the war, who is finding fault with those who are doing their best.

Some municipal councils are still passing resolutions recommending the Government to start something like was started last year, viz.: a nickel refinery in Canada.

Consent.

The Grand Duke is on the mend. General Manda is very much so too. It rather looks as if we should have turkey on Thanksgiving Day.—Kingston Standard.

Twenty thousand Nissen huts are housing to-day more than a half million soldiers on the Western front. What is a Nissen hut? It is a half Sunday tabernacle reduced to its lowest terms. It is the invention of a Canadian officer of Engineers. It accommodates two dozen men, and keeps them warmer than they ever expected to be. It can be taken apart, removed on a single truck, and erected somewhere else in a few hours.—Toronto News.

A call has gone out for increased production in 1917, and townspeople are urged to cultivate every acre of waste land. If everybody who can will do his bit in this way it will help keep down the cost of living and the exercise itself will add to the general health of those who employ their spare hours in cultivating a garden or in raising poultry or in any other way that produces foodstuffs. Look about you now and see if you cannot help others by helping yourself. Self-help is more blessed than self-denial.

The Poet's Corner

THE UNION JACK

The Flag has come back in Mesopotamia. The Union Jack always comes back, as R. K. Kernighan prophesied in the poem the Canadian at Rockton wrote in the dark hour that followed defeat at Magersfontein, Stormberg and Colenso:

Once on a time when days were dark,
And Britain's sons were plunged in gloom,
A sage that made the mourners hark
Went tossing upward like a plume.
It banished every gathering cloud
Across the sky and lighted it few.
And I still see repeatabend
And few of its bold lines to you.

Fly Victor Flag of England
Shall of terrific hues,
Till danger's troubled night depart
And the star of peace return.

BEAD BAGS.

Do You Know How to Bead Your Own on Canvas?

You know, there is a "trick in the trade" of beaded bags—in fact, beaded everything—for fashion says "beads," and in chorus the world re-echoes. There is talk in certain manufacturing circles of doing away with the tedious process of a stitch for every bead by the use of gelatin. But the idea has not as yet progressed beyond mere talk, so a "stitch to a bead" remains still the only way of doing beadwork. It would try the patience of a saint, though, to work out a design on velvet or any other material alone. This very exasperation, perhaps, accounts for the happy invention of the "trick"—a bit of canvas. Whether you select coarse or fine canvas depends on the size of the bead that you use. Stretch the canvas taut on the right side of the material and baste it firmly on all sides. The design is then worked out on the canvas, using a stitch for every bead the beading is measured, and the canvas, withdrawn, reveals the beaded surface of your material. The easiest design for the amateur to attempt is the diamond, depending on color combination rather than artistic workmanship for its effect. All steel beads on black, old blue or any of the wine shades are decidedly fetching. Consider black on white and white on black, of course. For the diamond pattern, beginning with one bead, increase the number at each new line until the design meets the required width, then decrease until it is completed.

HUSK DOORMATS.

How to Braid Them For Your Parches Next Spring.

At this season husk doormats should be made for the porch. They are easily and quickly made and quite durable. Select husks next to the ear, because they are white and soft. If they should be a little dry sprinkle them with water.

Braid the husks into a common three strand braid, feeding your braid from the left side, and each time the left strand comes over put in a new husk. Let each husk as added extend about one inch above the braid, and let it be the butt end of the husk that extends above. The length of the braid depends upon how large you want your rug.

Take your darning needle and common cotton rope, and sew the braid into a round or oblong rug by coiling the braid around, sewing each coil as made to the last coil made.

The rug is a smooth braid on the under side and a soft mass of husks, one inch deep, on top.

PORCH DOILY.

Suitable For Your Tea Tray or the Sun Parlor Table.

In the hot after the holidays good housekeepers attend to their linens. This piece pictured is done in dark blue floss, fringed in the same color, with black and white and a tights shade of blue for the embroidery; four cornerstones are done in white floss on end floss, this design is suitable for your tea tray.

Beauty Hints.

Those who fear that the use of cold cream or skin food will induce a growth of surplus hair can substitute olive oil. This should be applied in exactly the same manner as the cream.

If you value complexion never use hard water with which to wash. Hard water contains mineral salts such as lime, which when combined with the fatty acids of the soap form what is known as stearate of lime. This clogs up the pores and makes them lame

The New War Loan

Invest—If You Cannot Enlist!

Your Country Needs Money as Much as Men!

This Government War Loan is the "call to arms" of every dollar that loyal Canadians can enlist in their country's service. If you cannot enlist in person, enlist your money. Your investment will come back, with interest—good, liberal interest. It is not a sacrifice to subscribe to this War Loan, but it is the most timely and important assistance you can give the Cause for which Canada is fighting.

We give unqualified approval to this Third War Loan as an investment. It combines SAFETY, MARKETABILITY and LIBERAL INCOME RETURN. The Bonds of previous War Loans have shown an appreciation in market value which is worth consideration in connection with this one.

FREE OF EXPENSE TO YOU we shall gladly place your subscription with the Government, attending to all details until Definitive Coupon Bonds are delivered into your hands.

The New Sweaters.

Angora wool knitted sweaters, whether coat shape or middy blouse contour, are very ample in the skirt part. They often, too, are held into the figure, at the waist, by screw string straps of the same materials, which are wound about several times. FOR THE SICK CHILD.

Toys That Will Amuse Without Exciting Your Patient.

It is difficult to keep the sick child entertained. Especially when convalescence starts in, the task is a laborious one for nurse or mother, for the child thinks it ill duties to stay in bed unless it is too ill to care about anything.

A supply of toys is, of course, a great aid in making the hours of convalescence pleasant to children. Many gifts of toys are usually showered indiscretely by hospitals for the children where infantile paralysis holds such big inroads in the summer, but the hospital authorities contend that convalescent children have more personality and perhaps more individuality, and that is hardly enough said about it.

HIS HEART BADLY AFFECTED

"Fruit-a-tives" Soon Relieved This Dangerous Condition

Mr. Edmund St. Rose, Quebec, writes:

"For two years I was a victim of Acute Indigestion and Gas. In The Spring of 1915 I absorbed "Fruit-a-tives" and I believe that I owe my life to them.

My heart was badly affected, so that I could hardly move around. I tried all kinds of Medicine but none of them did any good. At last, I decided to try "Fruit-a-tives". I bought the first box last June, and after I had taken a few doses, I noticed a improvement. I recommend "Fruit-a-tives" to anyone suffering from Indigestion".

EDMUND ST. ROSE.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. At all dealers or sent postpaid by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

WALLOWAY WAS ESCORTING MR. DEVINE TO THE FRONT DOOR.

"Huh! Say, Nick, I'm not in the habit of—of—Say, Nick, I just must have heard the constable tell—and she thought of me last night. Why, I've been home with—"

Mr. Stephen Walloway locked a bit confused for a moment. "I said to, why, I'm very well, but I haven't been out. I've been worried, and—and I'm under the—"

"Don't! Sort of a hammer, eh Walloway," suggested the Cherub, as one of your four new summons.

"Why, yes, sir. Well, call it $500 then. So long, Nick."

If the Cherub had used ropes and strings he could not have left young Mr. Walloway more incapable of moving from the chair in which he was sitting. He lay there, his eyes fixed vaguely into space without stirring. Once or twice a limp hand stirred a mane. It sounded something like Nick. Gradually, however, the Walloway mind began to function forward. A look of resignation crept into the gray eyes, then settled, walked to the window, and stared out.

"Perhaps," perhaps he faltered, "my right."

CHAPTER V.

CONSTERNATION fell upon Epplegs when it occurred to Mr. Elmer Bishop about 6 o'clock to inform him that guests were expected at supper.

"Say Cherub, but it is impossible, sir. We are not prepared." There's only a roast of beef, potatoes, sir, and not a duck—not a single duck."

"Have squab, then."

"Still, sir, we haven't—"

"Oh, don't go on telling me what you haven't got. Rustle up anything. Make some sort of a salad if you can't do better. Only don't come to me with your troubles. I'm no chef. But I'm going to have some friends here tonight, and I shall expect you to feed them. That's what you're here for, isn't it?"

"To—to eat, sir. At what hour, sir?"

"Seven-thirty, sharp."

"And how many many plates, sir?"

"I don't know. Ten or fifteen or twenty. Better make it twenty, and then you can discard."

"I'll do my best, sir."

"That's the spirit, Mr. Epplegs."

Hearing made these offhand preparations, Mr. Devine sat himself down on the veranda to enjoy a cigar and looked up for the first time at the eccentric figure of the young Wiggin's father. Mr. Wigginton seemed somewhat agitated.

"I've a most pardon me, sir, for a seeming impertinence," he began, "but have you heard of the accident that you contemplate giving a party here tonight. Is it a fact?"

Mr. Devine nodded. "Just a few friends, a dozen or so."

"Ah! friends of yours?" Mr. Wigginton gave his words a distinct emphasis. "Then would it not be—er—prudent to advise discreet & the better word—for my daughter to go to the city for the night—to the hotel in the village perhaps?"

There was a twinkle in the Cherub's blue eyes that seemed to say, "Afraid of a rough house, are you?"

"My daughter, sir, is not exactly accustomed to—to—the kind of persons who might—"

"Um, I see. Well, suit yourself about it—suit yourself. But it isn't at all necessary. I shall try to keep them quiet. There are to be only a few neighbors—the Walloways and—"

"The Walloways, sir?"

"Yes, and the Wilburs and the Miller-Trenwarys and old Bishop Horton and his daughter, I believe."

"Bishop Horton! Is Bishop Horton coming? Coming here?"

"Why, yes. The bishop's a friend of mine. Know him, do you?"

"Why, sir, he was my college classmate, Mr. Devine," said Mr. Wigginton.

"Indeed! I never went to college with the bishop, but I've crossed the ocean with him twice, and once I had the bad luck to be present at a speech."

"Extraordinary!" said Mr. Wigginton.

"Think so? It may seem a little queer to you, but the bishop doesn't look at it that way. Comes down and meets me and him and the rest of the folks, won't you? We're to have a little supper about half past 8. And, by the way, bring the countess—that is, unless you've already asked the crowd."

This last was a violation of Mr. Wigginton's code, a paragraph which read, "Why, the other fellow's down and out don't rub it in." But the words had escaped before he could check them. Fortunately Mr. Wigginton did not seem to notice the slip. He flushed, regretfully, and stammered: "The Walloways, the Hortons, the Miller-Trenwarys—"

And sure enough, early in the evening the big rooms of the resort began to fill up with the rivals of many guests. There was the Rev. Mrs. Walloway, whose dinner dress was always magnificent affair; then were the haughty Wilburs, the lyrical Miss Trenwarys and a half dozen others, without the names and drew down the princely salary of $3 a week. I was saving to go into business for myself. There was a pile and stood around the counter from our office, and I had my eye on that. I thought it would be a fine thing to sell pie and coffee and be my own boss. So I got the fellow's price for the outfit. He wanted $75, and it seemed to me as though he'd asked enough to pay off the national debt. But I saved the myself-five and a few dollars more for a sinking fund.

"Then I resigned. I rather expected the firm to go under when they got that blow. They didn't, though.

"I went around to the pie and coffee man with my seventy-five be clutched and told me to brush it. His sales had jumped ten pies a day, and he had put his price up to an even hundred. For about five minutes things looked to me as the wash does when they get too much bluing in the tub. Then I braced up and handed 50 cents on the first real feed I'd had for a year.

"After that it was sunrise again. I dotted into a place where they were selling dollar orders on July wheat and the first thing I knew I was plunging like a porpoise. Inside of four hours I had almost $300 in my pocket, and I knew how a Rothschild feels. It went back to the stud, shook my roll at the pie butcher and did a lot of other fool things, all meant to show the folks that I was it.

"Next day I hunted up a regular broker and began to speculate nice and proper, on margins. I hadn't been at that more than a week before I hit the market right, and I've been hitting it ever since, except when it's hit me. Then, it hits back now and then, just to show me"—

He ended his story abruptly.

"What's that, Epplegs? Did you say supper? Good! Come on, folks; here's how what the cook has found in the icebox."

Probably the Wilburs and the Miller-Trenwarys and never have determined to dine in just that fashion before. Perhaps the novelty pleased them; for they were in high good humor. They told each other that Mr.

WAR LOAN

DOMINION OF CANADA

Issue of $150,000,000 5% Bonds Maturing 1st March, 1937.

Payable at par at Ottawa, Halifax, St John, Charlottetown, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary, Victoria, and at the Agency of the Bank of Montreal, New York City.

INTEREST PAYABLE HALF-YEARLY, 1st MARCH, 1st SEPTEMBER.

PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST PAYABLE IN GOLD.

ISSUE PRICE 96.

A FULL HALF-YEAR'S INTEREST WILL BE PAID ON 1st SEPTEMBER, 1917.

THE PROCEEDS OF THE LOAN WILL BE USED FOR WAR PURPOSES ONLY.

10	per cent on application;
30	"	16th April, 1917;
30	"	15th May, 1917;
26	"	15th June, 1917.

The total allotment of bonds of this issue will be limited to one hundred and fifty million dollars, exclusive of the amounts (if any) paid for by the Surrender of bonds as the equivalent of cash under the terms of the War Loan prospectus of 22nd November, 1915.

The instalments may be paid in full on the 16th day of April, 1917, or on any instalment due date thereafter, under discount at the rate of four per cent per annum. All payments are to be made to a chartered bank for the credit of the Minister of Finance. Failure to pay any instalment when due will render previous payments liable to forfeiture and the allotment to cancellation.

Subscriptions, accompanied by a deposit of ten per cent of the amount subscribed, must be forwarded through the medium of a chartered bank. Any branch in Canada of any chartered bank will receive subscriptions and issue provisional receipts.

This loan is authorized under Act of the Parliament of Canada, and both principal and interest will be a charge upon the Consolidated Revenue Fund.

Forms of application may be obtained from any branch in Canada of any chartered bank and at the office of any Assistant Receiver General in Canada.

Subscriptions must be for even hundreds of dollars.

In case of partial allotments the surplus deposit will be applied towards payment of the amount due on the April instalment.

Scrip certificates, non-negotiable or payable to bearer in accordance with the choice of the applicant for registered or bearer bonds, will be issued, after allotment, in exchange for the provisional receipts.

When the scrip certificates have been paid in full and payment endorsed thereon by the bank receiving the money, they may be exchanged for bonds, when prepared; the coupons attached, payable to bearer or registered as to principal, or for fully registered bonds, when prepared, without coupons, in accordance with the application.

Delivery of scrip certificates and of bonds will be made through the chartered banks.

The issue will be exempt from taxes—including any income tax—imposed in pursuance of legislation enacted by the Parliament of Canada.

The bonds with coupons will be issued in denominations of $100, $500, $1,000. Fully registered bonds without coupons will be issued in denominations of $1,000, $5,000 or any authorised multiple of $5,000.

The bonds will be paid at maturity at par at the office of the Minister of Finance and Receiver General at Ottawa, or at the office of the Assistant Receiver General at Halifax, St. John, Charlottetown, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary or Victoria, or at the Agency of the Bank of Montreal, New York City.

The interest on the fully registered bonds will be paid by cheque, which will be remitted by post. Interest on bonds with coupons will be paid on surrender of coupons. Both cheques and coupons, at the option of the holder, will be payable free of exchange at any branch in Canada of any chartered bank, or at the Agency of the Bank of Montreal, New York City.

Subject to the payment of twenty-five cents for each new bond issued, holders of fully registered bonds without coupons will have the right to convert into bonds of the denomination of $1,000 with coupons, and holders of bonds with coupons will have the right to convert into fully registered bonds of authorized denominations without coupons at any time on application to the Minister of Finance.

The books of the loan will be kept at the Department of Finance, Ottawa.

Application will be made in due course for the listing of the issue on the Montreal and Toronto Stock Exchanges.

Recognized bond and stock brokers having offices and carrying on business in Canada will be allowed a commission of three-eighths of one per cent on allotments made in respect of applications bearing their stamp, provided, however, that no commission will be allowed in respect of the amount of any allotment paid for by the surrender of bonds issued under the War Loan prospectus of 22nd November, 1915, or in respect of the amount of any allotment paid for by surrender of five per cent debenture stock maturing 1st October, 1919. No commission will be allowed in respect of applications on forms which have not been printed by the King's Printer.

SUBSCRIPTION LISTS WILL CLOSE ON OR BEFORE THE 23rd OF MARCH, 1917.

DEPARTMENT OF FINANCE, OTTAWA, March 12th, 1917.

In spite of Epplegs' fears it was a very good supper, but Mr. Devine took no note of it. He was thinking about the countess.

It was toward the close of the affair that the bishop took Mr. Devine one side and asked, "Do you know what has become of the Hawtrys?"

"Burst" said the Cherub. "They're all upstairs in retreat."

"In retreat! What do you mean, Devine?"

"It's because of us, you know. They don't approve of us. Mr. Hewington's writing a book about my wicked ways; gets his material from the newspapers. It'll be a thick book, I guess."

"Now, if that isn't just like De Courcey!" exclaimed the bishop. "Splendid fellow, though, in his way."

"So I've heard."

"If you don't mind, Devine, I'll run up and see him for a few minutes before I go."

"Oh, help yourself. They're somewhere on the top floor behind a barricade."

"I'll bring him out of that," said the bishop. "But he had not reckoned on the part of Mr. Hewington Hawtry's prejudice.

"It's not on my account, my dear bishop," said Mr. Hewington, "but I must guard my daughter from such association."

"Nonsense, De Courcey! Devine lacks polish, perhaps; but at heart he is an honest chap. Come down and meet him and bring Adele."

"No, no; I couldn't think of it," firmly responded Mr. Hewington. "We shall remain here until he goes away."

So the bishop went back alone.

When it was over, when the last of them had gone, Mr. Cherub Devine, groping about for some fitting term to express the situation, remarked cogitatively:

"That's what I call playing a four flush against a full house. Guess I'll take another stack, though."

Which meant that the audacious son of Mr. Devine was humbled, but

Dear Father, Mother and all:

Just a few lines to let you know that I am well at present and hope this letter, though short, may find you all the same.

Well Father I received your box last night and I tell you I was glad to get it. I tell you it is a treat to me, to get some good tobacco. Don't forget to send some more.

Well, Father I am glad to hear you are getting lots of work, and getting along all right. I hope Nobbie is well, and has a good steady job.

Well, (I guess I can not think of any more to say to you for this time. So please excuse my short note. I will close by saying good-bye, answer soon, and tell me all the news. Love to all.

CURLING.

DR. DAY'S RINK WIN CUP

At the Curling rinks last night, the final game of the club matches was played for the possession of the club cup, between rinks skipped by Dr. M. A. Day and Mr. J. D. Clarke. The result was a win for Dr. Day's rink with a score of 12 to 10. In the early part of the game, Mr. Clarke's rink had a decided lead but the final victors scored enough in the last two ends to put them in the lead. It was a great game and created much interest among the many spectators present. The rinks and scores were as follows:

H. G. Stafford	F. S. Wallbridge
A. E. Wrightmeyer	Rev. Dr. Scott
F. D. Diamond	Rev. C. G. Smith
Dr. M. A. Day	J. D. Clarke
Skip 13	Skip 10

At the rink this evening a bonspiel for the possession of the Hynnan cup will be commenced when eight rinks will compete. The bonspiel will be rushed to the final, play taking place every evening.

The Canadian Army in Action and the ADVANCE OF THE TANKS

OFFICIAL MOVING PICTURE OF The Battle of Courcelette

Last Time To-night. Prices--Children 15c; Adults 25c.

"At 6.24 a. m., Sept. 15, We All Went Over the Top."

Harry Johnston, 20th Battalion, Tells the Story

LAST night was the first presentation in this city of the official war film of the Canadian army, and the first moving pictures ever taken of the new famous Tanks, which were successfully introduced into modern warfare by the British and Canadians on September 15, 1916. These are the pictures Canadians made—these are the pictures the world awaited.

THIS film is presented by Jule and Jay J. Allen throughout Canada from coast to coast. The Belleville presentation is under the auspices of The Belleville Intelligencer. The authenticity of the pictures is guaranteed by the Canadian War Records Office, under Sir Max Aitken (Lord Beaverbrook). The film is exhibited by authority, and copies will be preserved in the Canadian national archives. Lloyd George, Premier of Great Britain, attended their first private view in London.

ELSEWHERE in this paper is the story of the personal experience of a Toronto soldier who took part in this battle to be depicted on the screen at the Griffin Theatre Monday and Tuesday, March 12, and 13. Read it. Then see the pictures and realize what Canada's soldiers are, and give them the credit that is theirs.

The Moving Pictures Will Show You!

"THEY are very lifelike," said Sir Sam Hughes, when asked for his opinion of the Canadian pictures, "and I recognize some of our guns there, and they have done good work."

"Sir Sam should know, for he has seen actual fighting and conditions at the front," interjected Dr. Norman Allen, who was seated next to the ex-Minister of Militia in a balcony box. "Do you think the pictures will encourage and give stimulus to recruiting." Sir Sam was asked.

"Yes, I think they will," he replied. "They should certainly inspire our Canadian manhood to a sense of their duty and of what we are fighting for."

It was by order of and under the instructions of Sir Sam Hughes that the Canadian war pictures were taken and produced, and he seemed immensely pleased with the result.

Dr. Allen declared the pictures were very fine and incidentally remarked that he followed the opinion of Gen. Hughes in everything relating to the war.

Many View The Canadians On Battlefield

Impressive Scenes of Soldiers is Shown in Action at Griffin's Opera House

SPECTACULAR REALISM

Life at the Front is Seen Just as the Men Experience It.

Impressive beyond words are the views of the Canadian Army in Action, as shown yesterday afternoon and last evening to large audiences at Griffin's Opera House, this city, and never were Belleville citizens moved to higher admiration for the men of Canada and the work they are doing at the front, than when they saw in actual reality the men engaged in the daily heroism and labor of the war zone.

Among the most striking impressions left by the pictures is the wonderful skill that has been attained by the men in doing the things in which they are now engaged. Every boy who left Canada with the freshness and immaturity of youth upon him, is seen as a man, expert in every line of action, and whether the rifle, the shells, unloading the provision trains, scaling the parapet or deftly giving first-aid, the impression is always the same—here are experts and they are not boys, and boys whom the whole world might well be proud.

Another very strong feeling that takes possession of the spectator as the scenes come to one from the canvas, is the paradoxical idea of the humanity of the men and the inhumanity of the things upon which their whole energies are bent. Even in the excitement of the most terrific bombardment there is no trace of the passion which means to kill. Every man is using muscle and sinew to the straining point, but the motive is determination to win and to do it honestly in doing it. The humanity which can be found even in the world's worst war comes out strongly in the treatment given the Hun prisoners, who, after being put in the cage are given the opportunity for a wash and are then treated, every man to a tin of hot stew.

The Tanks Appear

The advance of the "tanks" is watched with the curiosity which attaches to the coming of a thing vitally interesting. The leviathan armored case on wheels is seen in several phases. At rest it is like a great iron cave into which the men stuff all manner of foodstuffs, and then vault in themselves, the door closed, and the machinery started. But the most impressive sight shows no signs of living inhabitants and recalling the ancient horse of Troy in the skill with which it hides its living freight within. In one instance the officer in charge is seen heading the "tank" mascot—a pretty black cat—which on entering he takes with him to give him "luck" and affection. Ourious, weird and ghostlike is the propelling of the great monster as it moves over the great tracts of No Man's Land, and again the fact that this is war in which science is a factor, equally as important as are men themselves, forces itself on the observer.

The scenes embraced in the pictures of the "Last Post" are those of the things that take place after the battle. Carrying the wounded from the field helping them at the stations, preparing them for their last earthly resting place, the procession to "God's acre," the benediction by the army chaplain while the men stand reverently about, are all filled with the sorrow of any "erstwhile pals," for though many a man and woman who saw the pictures yesterday saw them with the sense of personal loss, there was always behind it the exhilaration that the boys had won death in the performance of the great duty of aiding in saving civilization and bringing ultimate peace to the soul of a world, now seething in the mire in which unholy power has involved it.

Finally, one felt that as a recruiting force the pictures now being shown at Griffin's Opera House under the auspices of The Intelligencer should be one of the greatest agencies yet procured. The thought forces itself that if the neutral powers everywhere else would but view such scenes their indignation would rise as one against the man or men who forced such conditions upon the world. Unanimity of indignation with a decision to conspire against the mischievous source which created it, then, should be a positive result and admiration for the brave fellows who are doing their part so nobly should actuate many others with the determination to go quickly to their assistance.

The scenes will be repeated this afternoon and evening. Do not miss the opportunity of seeing these spectacular films. An excellent orchestra furnishes appropriate music.

"THE LITTLE CAFE"

TUNEFUL MUSICAL COMEDY AT GRIFFIN'S TOMORROW NIGHT

An attraction that bids fair to become one of the season's biggest successes is the original Knw and Erlanger new Amsterdam Theatre production of "The Little Cafe," that, modelled of musical comedy from the pens of C. M. S. McLellan and Ivan Caryll, which will enter upon an engagement of one night only at Griffin's tomorrow night.

The cast is said to be one of the best balanced ever presented in a musical play and includes Louise Orth, the ten thousand dollar beauty whom Oliver Morosco selected to create the principal role in "Canary Cottage" on the Pacific Coast; Mlle. de Lara, who created the principal role in the original production of "Le Petit Cafe" in Paris; Florrie Auburn, who left the realms of musical comedy to portray the roles of vampires and vamps on the screen; but who has returned to the first love; Frank Tierney, who is accredited with excellent work in "The Pink Lady" and other successes; Lon Carter, Jesse Willingham, and others. Particular attention has been given to the chorus which has been well trained, the feminine portion being spoken of as a garden of pulchritude.

The plan is now open at Doyle's. Prices 25c, 50c, 75c $1, Boxes $1.50.

This Leaves the Skin Free From Hairy Growths

(Toilet Talks)

A simple method for completely removing every trace of hair or fuzz is here given. This is painless and can be used in private with banish even stubborn growths.

To remove hairs, make a thick paste with some powdered delatone and water, spread on heiry surface and after about 2 minutes rub-off, wash the skin and the hairs come off. The method will not injure the most sensitive skin. To avoid disappointment, be certain you get delatone.

LETTERS FROM OVERSEAS

PTE. F. W. COON

Dear Wife and Children;

I received two letters from you last week when I was in the trenches, but I couldn't answer them then, but I got another last night and am answering them altogether.

Well, I suppose you have read in the papers about the raid the Canadians made. I was in it and we went over into the German lines and fan there an hour or so, so you see we had some time, but our artillery was on the job and we only had a few casualties and we brought back 23 prisoners.

I met Lieut. Graham at 1 o'clock in the morning and had a long chat with him. I received your two boxes you sent me, the pudding was also one from Mrs. Sadler of Belleville, and was sent to the Belleville Soldiers' Aid but owing to it the one that got Mrs. Sadler's and so I thank them very much as everything was very useful and highly appreciated.

We have had very cold weather here and we can see a lot of snow. I have got a very bad cold just now, but hope to get rid of it soon. I am going up to the trenches tonight on a working party and will be back in the morning, when I will write you again. Hoping you and the children are in the best of health, I will bring this letter to a close wishing to be remembered to all with love to you and the children.

So good bye.

FRED

THAT TILT.

A Discourse on the Simple Art of Posing Your Hat.

When it comes to placing a hat correctly, or, better still, smartly and attractively on the head, the wisest milliner and the best mirror have their limitations as foes say.

The milliners say what the doctors say to their patients who have nervous troubles—that the salvation lies in one's self, not in any outside aid. Practice does not make perfect, nor even skilful in all cases, though the women who pick up the art when they are never in the milliners' shop had brought the knowledge with them from another sphere. There are others, equally intelligent, who do not learn it until they die, and possibly not after that.

The woman who boasts that she drops into her clothes at the ring of a bell and is off to her duties always bears strong evidence of her rapid performance. She may be proud of her facility, but she has no reason for pride in the result.

Well, at least there is this to be said in regard to the fashionable modes: It is the simplest thing that the milliners have devised for several seasons. That rakish tilt or the succession of tilts that has governed millinery during the last few years was difficult beyond measure to achieve. The genus which can nail directly for want of a real name could do this tilt to perfection, no matter how often it changed. But any could do the latest and most complicated dance step.

When France sent us word that hats would be pliable and without particular form the news was not received with especial delight, for it was thought that the effect would be negligible, too difficult of graceful adjustment over the irregular features of the average American face.

We did not look far enough forward or backward in taking this view, for the hats which France was copying were from the era of pictureque fads long, long ago. Women's hats were not of big importance then; in truth, there were head coverings that reached from the primitive hood that the early fashionables invented to keep the hair out of the eyes, and later the towering headdress that was built up of everything the wardrobe contained, to judge from the pictures of them that remain.

Snowdrop Cake.

Beat three eggs, using lightest colored yolks; add a little cream or milk and flavoring. Rub four ounces of butter into half a pound of flour, stir in four ounces of sugar, mix by adding the eggs and cream and stirred thoroughly, but lightly; then scatter in a teaspoonful of baking powder. Turn the mixture into a greased cake tin, put into a hot oven; reduce the heat after a little while and let the cake bake gradually. When cold, cover with icing, inserting a few snowdrops at intervals just before serving.

Baked Potatoes au Gratin.

Bake large potatoes until well done, cut lengthwise, scoop out, mash well, add butter, a little milk or cream, salt and pepper and whip until fluffy; refill and sprinkle with grated cheese. Put back in the oven for the cheese to melt and brown slightly. These potatoes served with a roast of veal are a real addition to the meal.

Thorough mixing is what makes cake delicate and tender makes the best cake because it creams quickly and thoroughly with the butter which is the hardest part of the mixing. Its purity and extra "fine" granulation make it dissolve at once.

Lantic Sugar

QUINTE CHAPTER I.O.D.E.

Deep Breathing.

Deep breathing, sensible breathing, every day breathing—long life depends upon it; good looks always. Yet nine-tenths of the world's creatures hate to breathe, and young folks especially are as niggardly in the matter of filling their lungs with clean, wholesome air as if they thought they were dealing with poison. Twenty long breaths night and morning will quickly improve the looks of a girl who has begun to go down with study and carelessness, and surely there is no beautifier cheaper than deep breathing.

Making the Best of It.

There was a worthless old chap whom they tarred and feathered in Graveyard.

"So they tarred and feathered you, eh?" said a curious friend.

"Yep. They tarred and feathered me."

"How did it make you feel?"

"Why, I felt like a fowl."

STOMACH WAS DERANGED BY CHRONIC CONSTIPATION

Got So Bad That Hospital Treatment Was Resorted to—Cure Finally Effected By Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills

EGANVILLE, Ont., Mar. 12—In this letter is well described the important place by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills in many thousands of homes where their value as a regulator of the vital organs is known and appreciated.

Constipation of the bowels is usually accompanied by sluggish liver action, and sooner or later by derangements of the kidneys. The digestive system is entirely upset and pains and aches result from the consequent poisoning of the system. On this account it may be said that constipation is the cause of the great majority of human ills. Keeping the bowels regular by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills these many ailments are avoided.

Mr. D. J. Maney (Eganville Ont. (R. R. No. 1), writes—

"I allow me to tell you what Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills have done for me and mine. For years I was troubled with constipation and stomach trouble—had tried dozens of remedies, and even went to the hospital to get built up at different times. The terrible constipation caused the stomach trouble. One day a friend asked me why I didn't try Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. I immediately purchased a 25c. box, took it home, and it gave me such grand relief that I went back and got six more. I got truthfully say that after I had finished using them I was completely cured. If I ever felt an ache coming on, one or two would always fix me up all right again. My boys never think of going away from home without taking some of them in their pill case, in case of a sudden attack of sickness. If any person wishes to write me I will gladly answer them."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, 25c. pill a box, 25c. a box, or 5 for $1.00, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

NO DANGER OF POLITICAL WAR

Cotton Caused Precipitate an Election in Great Britain

LONDON, March 14—Special—"Thanks to the stand made by Mr. Asquith, the threatened war will not be placed in danger today." The Daily Chronicle's Parliament correspondent writes: "There is therefore the element of danger to the Government in division today on the Indian cotton duty. Mr. Asquith probably will counsel his supporters to abstain from a division, and it was stated last night that he might, in given circumstances even support the Government."

Mustn't Boost Price of Coal

U. S. Federal Trade Commission Warns Anthracite Producers

WASHINGTON, March 13—The Federal Trade Commission today notified the country's leading anthracite coal producers' that, any failure to grant the usual price reductions would be justified by claims of increased cost of production.

In its inquiry into the cost of mining anthracite the commission has obtained detailed information on the costs of companies which mined in 1916 about 76 per cent of the total production of anthracite.

"This information," said the commission, "obtained directly from the companies referred to, indicates no increase in average cost in the last four months of 1916, and further indicates an actual decrease of cost in the case of the companies whose cost of production is high. Judged from the tonnage produced in January, 1917, there is no reason to believe the cost was less in 1917 would materially change the average shown by the figures compiled by the commission, effective against further price increases this spring."

New Taxes On Profits

LONDON, March 13—Many new taxes will be included in the new budget which is soon forthcoming. Chancellor A. Bonar Law's general plan will be to impose heavy duties where they will prove the most effective deterrents to extravagance. The purposes to make utterly impossible any earning of profits in any business or line of business that is not essential to waste. The Government will take the profits, thus ending such enterprises. A big increase in general taxes on excess profits is expected also.

GAVE BLOOD TO SENATOR

To Save Hon. Sir L. H. Jones Rev. T. C. Brown Gave 16 Ounces

TORONTO, March 13—Volunteering to give his blood in hope of saving the life of his father-in-law, Hon. Sir Lyman Melvin Jones, Rev. T. Crawford Brown, yesterday contributed 16 oz. from his veins for transfusion. The operation was performed at ten o'clock last night. While weak after the transfusion, Rev. Mr. Brown will suffer no enduring ill effects.

The transfusion was urgently necessary as a result of a fracture for the worse of the senator following the operation for which Col. H. A. Bruce recently removed from the front. That operation performed in Toronto, stages, was successful, but the condition of the patient, who is in his seventy-fourth year, became suddenly worse yesterday.

This afternoon at Wellesley Hospital the condition of Sir Lyman Melvin Jones was said to be slightly improved, following the transfusion of blood from Rev. T. Crawford Brown last night.

ANOTHER FRENCH LOAN

Issue of $100,000,000 is Expected This Week

NEW YORK, March 14—Special—A new French Government loan amounting to $100,000,000 will be issued before the close of this week, if plans which are being formulated encounter no unexpected delay. Some of the large of the loan are still subject to final settlement, but the basis for this financing is expected to adhere to the terms which have been practically agreed upon.

TURKISH ARMY CAPTURED BY RUSSIANS IN PERSIA

Total of 15,000 Soldiers Reported Trapped After Bagdad's Fall Working in Concert With General Maude, the Russians Are Enabled to Encircle the Foe—British Nearing Jerusalem

WASHINGTON, March 14.—Special—An entire Turkish army, numbering 15,000 troops, has been captured by the Russians in western Persia, according to official advices received at the State Department yesterday.

Although details are lacking, the Turks, the reports indicate, were trapped by the Russians last Sunday, following the capture by the British of Bagdad.

The Turkish forces were located in the mountains to prevent a Russian approach from that quarter. They were "basing" on Bagdad, in the sense of being dependent on that city for supplies.

Apparently the Russians, working in concert with Gen. Maude's column, were able to get in behind the Turks, who, finding their supplies cut off, surrendered.

The loss of the Turkish force is the latest of a long series of reverses which, in the opinion of State Department officials, have gone far toward reducing the Turkish army.

In addition to the tremendous losses in men and munitions in the fighting along the Tigris, the Turks within the past year have sustained a costly retreat from Russian territory and two thrusts backward from Persia. Besides these reverses the Turks have confronted a serious rebellion on the part of the Arabs and a general demoralization within their own ranks.

It is now assumed that the Russians in Persia and the British operating northward from Bagdad will shortly be able to effect a junction, thus insuring a considerabl advance westward before the hot weather sets in.

In connection with the British reposition from Egypt into Palestine some apprehension is felt for the safety of the 1,000 American missionaries who are still reported marooned in the vicinity of Bierut. It is felt that if the British succeed in getting close to Jerusalem the Turks in desperation might massacre all foreigners in the locality.

A British expedition under General Archibald Murray is within sight of Jerusalem. It is reported to be steadily advancing along a line paralleling the old Phoenician coast. It is a line made historic by the marchings and counter-marchings in the Roman civil wars, in the campaign directed by the Greek Emperors against their rebellious subjects in Egypt, and in the wars of the rival caliphates of Bagdad and Alexandria.

SALOONS SOON TO BE CLOSED

Economy to Strike at Even the Drink Habit—Keepers of Saloons Favor Move

LONDON, March 14.—The Daily Mail says thirty thousand saloons in Great Britain will probably be closed in the next few months.

Brewers themselves are said to favor such action by the Government as tending to economical distribution of their product.

Cordova Mines Fire Extinguished

Safety of Three Employees Causes Anxiety—Air Pumped Down to Imprisoned Men

How disastrous fire, which occurred at the Cordova Mines in Harmors Township, yesterday morning, is a mystery. The fire broke out in shaft No. 1 at 2.30 and in a few minutes several buildings were enveloped in flames. The buildings destroyed were the machine shop, blacksmith shop, tank house, pump mill and trestle work. The assay office and carpenter office, adjoining were also threatened but were saved, also the residence of Mr. Kirkgaard, the superintendent. At the outbreak of the fire a strong south wind was prevailing. It has not yet been learned of the fate of three employees, who were entombed in the shaft. As soon as it was possible to do so air was pumped down into the shaft for the benefit of the imprisoned men, for whose safety grave is much anxiety. The loss will amount to several thousands of dollars.

PREDICT LATE OPENING OF RIVER NAVIGATION

Ice in St. Lawrence of Unusual Thickness and Shows No Breaking Signs

OGDENSBURG, March 13—Indications along the St. Lawrence river and Great Lakes point to a belated opening of the season of navigation, due to the ice thickness. Although there were several warm days last week the ice in the St. Lawrence River, as well as in the Ogdensburg, showed no signs of loosening its grip. It is of great thickness. The season usually opens about April 15th and even on normal years it has been found that the ice does not leave the canals until later than this date. Great floes, extending from shore to shore, are reported from Duluth to Montreal, the thickness being from fifteen to twenty feet.

Today February weather conditions prevail here. Last evening the snow commenced to fall and continued until tonight with a wind of varying velocity. An examination of several fields of snow is reporting that the melted by the sun during the week, and plows were in operation in the streets and on the railroad and street railway lines.

Wants Ireland In The Empire

Grand Black Chapter Opposed to Any Measure That Will Not Do This

STRATFORD, Ont., March 13—Delegates to Grand Black Chapter, Ontario West were given an enthusiastic welcome today by the local city and country preceptories.

This afternoon deputy Grand Master William Weir of Windsor will be advanced to the Master's chair.

The Grand Black Chapter unanimously protested against the granting of any measure of Government that does not tend to keep Ireland within the Empire, and called Sir Robert Borden and Lloyd George to that effect.

LOCKOUT AT PETERBORO

The Metal Products Co. of Peterboro locked out their employees Monday morning. The men had decided to go on strike at ten o'clock if their demands for ten and a half after ten hours for the first five days of the week and the same rate if they worked Saturday afternoon and Sunday was not complied with. The Company is willing to agree to a scale providing for sixty hours a week with time and a half for overtime. Other shell workers are still at work, though with the skilled workers idle the plant is somewhat disorganized. Some are in outside points trying to secure the skilled workers.

"MAMA WON'T LET ME"

This Is What Young Fellow Told a Recruiting Officer

KINGSTON, March 13—The recruiting officers are still working in Kingston. On Monday morning a couple of the men marched in a young fellow who was regarded as a likely recruit, as they almost had their breath taken away when the young fellow in reply to their appeal said: "Mamma won't let me."

Recruiting officers during Monday morning also said a visit to four brothers who have only themselves to support, but it is stated that each one absolutely refused to don the Khaki.

WOMAN WANTS FREEDOM

Life With German Husband Intolerable, She Says

TORONTO, March 13—A young woman, who wants to be freed from the German yoke, made a strong appeal in a letter to Mayor Church this morning. She married a German before the war and now she's sorry. She says that there are many others in the same predicament, who would like to be separated from their German husbands who make life unbearable for them.

GENERAL HAIG SWEEPS ONWARD IN FRANCE

Takes Loupart Woods and Grevillers—Gains on a Mile Front East and Northeast of Gommecourt—Hostile Trench Raids Repulsed

LONDON, March 13.—Special—The British yesterday forced the Germans to abandon their powerful defensive system west of Bapaume. Haig's troops their path cleared by an intense artillery bombardments, swept forward during the day along a front of three and a half miles to a depth of a mile, capturing the village of Grevillers, the powerfully fortified Loupart Wood, and driving into the outskirts of Bapaume itself. They also advanced along a front of a mile east and northeast of Gommecourt.

Special despatches from correspondents at the British front intimate that the British have saved the German plans, that important movements are pending, and that the foe will not escape without severe damage.

The text of the British official report reads:

"In consequence of our bombardment of his positions yesterday the enemy abandoned his main defensive system along the forward crest of the ridge west of Bapaume on a front of three and one-half miles.

"During the day our advancing troops have driven back the enemy's rear guard in this area for a depth of a mile, and have occupied the village of Grevillers and Loupart Wood. We have also made further progress east and northeast of Gommecourt on a front of about a mile.

"Hostile raids were repulsed during the night in the neighborhood of Neuville St. Vaast, Souchez and Armentieres. In each case the enemy failed to reach our trenches. Another hostile raiding party succeeded in reaching our trenches southwest of Neuve Chapelle. A few of our men are missing.

"Our artillery carried out an effective bombardment of the enemy's positions in the Somme and east of Neuville St. Vaast."

Hungerford Election Case Being Argued

The case of J. W. Burley, who, as Deputy Returning Officer at Poll No. 3, at the recent municipal elections in Hungerford Township, was charged with allowing irregularities to take place was argued today before Police Magistrate Masson. It was thought that a settlement of the affair could be effected without argument, and for upwards of two hours an effort was made to do so, but the question of $11.50 for witness fees to two parties proved a stumbling block. At 12.30 the hearing of argument was adjourned until 2 o'clock. Mr. Carnew appeared on behalf of the complainants and Mr. E. J. Butler represented Mr. Burley. There were a number of interested spectators.

CASE SETTLED

When the court resumed this afternoon, a satisfactory settlement between the parties was effected. No conviction was registered against Mr. Burley, but he has to pay the costs amounting to $131.50. Counter charges which had been laid were all withdrawn, thus ending the case.

Reception To Returned Hero

The officers and members of Bentinck Lodge, No. 24, No. 274, entertained a returned hero of its own members in the person of Brother Corporal H. A. Carr of the 1st Battery, 1st Brigade, C. F. A. to a supper. Many of the members and visiting brethren were present. After the business of the lodge had been completed the W. M., Bro. C. Johnson in a short address made known the reason of the gathering and in the name of the brethren welcomed Bro. Carr home, telling how proud the lodge was to have among its members a man, who from August, 1914, down to the present had done his duty to King and Country, so nobly and well. Short addresses were made by Bros. Arthur McGinnis, A. R. Walker, W. C. Mikel, F. M. Clarke, C. Reid, John Harris and others and Bro. Carl Ireland, as Secretary replied. A bounteous repast had been provided and the brethren spent a pleasant hour in song and story and the meeting was brought to a close with the singing of the National Anthem.

CONFERENCE NEXT WEEK

Overseas Statesmen and British War Cabinet to Hold Regular Sessions

LONDON, March 14—Special—The Canadian Associated Press is authoritatively informed that the proceedings proper of the Imperial War Conference will begin next week. The meetings between the overseas statesmen already arrived and the members of the British War Cabinet have been in the way of preliminary or sectional conferences to give the overseas statesmen an opportunity at verbulating any views they particularly wish to bring forward. At the conferences beginning next week Walter Long, the Colonial Secretary will preside, when Premier Lloyd George is unable to do so. These gatherings are not on the same plane as the Imperial Conferences of times past, inasmuch as India was not then represented. All the overseas statesmen who have been specially invited will attend these gatherings. British statesmen holding portfolios will attend when subjects affecting their own departments are discussed. Finally, there are meetings of the Imperial War Cabinet, consisting of the five principal members of the British Government, together with the Premiers only of the Dominions. These latter gatherings will all deal with most important matters concerning the war. The Imperial War Conference, that is, the larger deliberative body, will decide for itself how much of its proceedings shall be made public.

Military News

Three recruits presented themselves for enlistment with the 255th Battalion yesterday. All of the men were successful in passing the Medical Board.

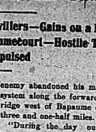
Three members of the 255th Battalion proceeded to Kingston this morning. One of these will attend the School of Signalling and the others will join the School of B. F. & P. T.

The total strength of the 254th Battalion up to date is 403.

Capt. Stock and Lieut. Bergener of the 255th are both on the sick list. The former is suffering from an attack of influenza, and Lieut. Bergener is confined to bed with bronchitis.

Lieut. Coulter of the 254th, Stirling reported at Battalion Headquarters yesterday.

The syllabus of training for the men of the 254th Battalion this week, includes Musketry, Physical Training Squad Drill and Bayonet Fighting instruction.



Members of the 254th Battalion have been busy the last few days, visiting the men in the city who under the National Service are eligible for service, inquiring as to their intentions of enlisting. Most of the answers received have been to the effect that the majority of them are unwilling to leave their King and country.

Bishop Brewing In Fine Lecture

Speaks Forcefully to Large Audience at Emmanuel Church—Interesting Programme

A splendid audience was present at the lecture given on Tuesday by Bishop Willard Brewing of Toronto in the Emmanuel Church last evening. Bishop Brewing spoke under the auspices of the Young People's Society of the Church, and his address was one that was greatly enjoyed by everyone present. Rev. A. H. Foster, rector of the Emmanuel Church acted as chairman, and filled that capacity in his usual able and efficient manner.

The subject on which Bishop Brewing dwelt last evening was "Mistakes, the serious and humorous side of them." For almost an hour and a half the Bishop spoke on this subject, bringing into his address all his splendid faculties of the art of lecturing which endeared him to so many of his audience.

At the close of his lecture, Bishop Brewing emphasized the great and many mistakes Germany had made in her preparation of the great war, and those she had made and was making in carrying out the war.

During the course of the evening, a solo, "Sons of Canada" was rendered by Miss Clarke, and several selections were rendered on a Columbia Graphophone, kindly provided for the evening by the Thompson Furniture Co.

MRS. SENATOR TAYLOR HAS PASSED AWAY

GANANOQUE, March. 14—Special—Hon. Senator Taylor was sorely bereaved Monday afternoon by the death of his estimable wife after a severe illness of several weeks. LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

AN ERROR

Dear Sir:—

In Tuesday's issue of The Intelligencer an error was made in your report of the "Boating Festival" held at the Arena on Monday night, under the auspices of the 254th Battalion Band. The musical numbers were furnished entirely by two sections of the 254th Band, one section playing at each end of the rink, the Band taking no part in the progressive waltzes.

Mention was also made that the entire proceeds went to the 254th band, which was also an error. The receipts were divided equally between the band and the Rink management. Trusting you will make the correction.

Respectfully yours,
MEMBER 254TH BAND

MORE ABOUT DOUCH

Belleville, March 12th, 1917.

Dear Sir:—

Your informant, who furnishes the particulars about Sergeant Douch's 28 years continuous service in East Surrey's, Imperial Yeomanry, and R. C. H. A. must have made a mistake.

As an old soldier myself, I know that the East Surrey's is a distinct force latitation, the Imperial Yeomanry a Volintary Cavalry Regiment and the R.C.H.A. a permanent force in Canada. Now the first two regiments are English Regiments, so how could he serve continuously, when one was a permanent force and the other a volintary force, that only assembled for training once a year.

Now as one who has known Mr. Polstar for a number of years and who read his letter, I think your correspondent, who wrote on behalf of Sergeant Douch, must have wrote a few words in spite. When I read Mr. Pointer's letter I failed to find the words "overlooked" or "illustrated" mentioned.

Mr. Pointer was asked by some friends to write and enquire about Sergeant Douch had not gone overseas, that is the reason why the letter was sent to the Intelligencer by him. As for Mr. Pointer requiring Sergeant Douch's job, I am very sorry to say that the state of Mr. Pointer's health after serving 19 months at the front and 6 months hardship on Salisbury Plains will not permit him to undertake a job which requires the strength and ability which an instructor should have. Although Mr. Polister was a Gunnery Instructor in the Royal Regiment of Artillery. As Mr. Pointer served seven years in the Norfolk Regiment and twelve years in the Royal Field Artillery as a chum of mine, I do not think Sergeant Douch can teach him anything new about the army.

Writing in defence of my late artillery comrade,

I am, sir,

Yours truly
JOHN WILLIAMS.

THE KISS, CRIMSON STAIN AND LIBERTY AT PALACE

TONIGHT

A long and varied program of select photoplays is announced for exhibition at the Palace Theatre tonight, when the final chapter of "The Crimson Stain Mystery" series will be presented. On the same programme with this offering, "The Kiss," a five part comedy romance starring Owen Moore and Marguerite Courtrot, the 4th part of the great "Liberty" series are also announced for presentation along with a new and amusing comedy.

"THE LITTLE CAFE"
TUNEFUL MUSICAL COMEDY
AT GRIFFIN'S TONIGHT

That this is the year for musical attractions may be judged from the fact that there are over 60 big companies booked for this country at the present time, while a number of new attractions are in rehearsal.

Of those now playing there is not one that is more successful than "The Little Cafe," which will be seen at Griffin's Opera House tonight.

It will be presented here with the original Klaw and Erlanger New Amsterdam Theatre production in its entirety, and a cast of metropolitan farce and musical comedy players, among whom may be found Louise Orth, the blonde prize beauty of the Pacific coast, who created that title role in "Canary Cottage" for Oliver Morosco; Mlle. de Lara, who created the principal role in the original production in Paris; Florrie Ashton, who has returned to her first love after having made tremendous strides portraying vampires and sirens on the screen for the past two years; Frank Tierney, who will be remembered for his excellent work in "The Pink Lady" Lon Carter, Jesse Willingham and others. The chorus has been selected with an eye to pulchritude as well as voice, the ensemble numbering forty. The seat sale is now open at Doyle's Price: 25c, 50c, 75c, $1. Boxes $1.50.

CURLING.

LOCAL BONSPIEL COMMENCED

Much interest was manifested in a bonspiel, which commenced at the Belleville Curling Rink last evening, between rinks composed of the members of the club. The bonspiel is for the possession of the Hyman cup, a valuable trophy.

At 7.30 the battle royal commenced upon the four sheets of ice and the second round was not completed until after the midnight hour. The interest was such that many members, who were not compelled to play in the second round, remained as spectators until the last stone had been played. Each member entered with great zest into the game and played for all they were worth. A few of the members were compelled to play on both rounds, owing to some members not being able to be present. This was rather a strenuous task, but was by no means objected to by any of the players. Ten ends were played and upon some of the rinks large scores were made. In the second round the rink skipped by Dr. M. A. Day and Mr. M. Wright were compelled to play an extra end. At the end of the tenth both rinks had a score of 9 to their credit. The dentist evidently had the "pull" for in the eleventh end he was able to secure three shots, thus winning by a score of 12 to 9.

This ending the third round will be played and possibly the fourth round, as it is necessary to rush off the games owing to the advancing season.

The players and scores for last evening were as follows:

NOW FREE FROM PAIN

Woman Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound after Three Years Suffering.

Buffalo, N. Y.—"I am the mother of four children, and for nearly three years I suffered from a female trouble, pains in my back and side and a general weakness. I had professional attendance most of that time but did not seem to get well. As a last resort I decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound which I had seen advertised in the newspapers, and in two weeks noticed a marked improvement. I continued its use and am now free from pain and able to do all my housework."—Mrs. B. B. Zimmerman, 256 Wolfe Ave., Buffalo, N. Y.

Cherub Devine

By SEWELL FORD

Copyright, 1909, by Mitchell Kennerley

He had tried to demonstrate to Mr. Hewington that his estimate of Cherub Devine as one of the socially unfit was a mistaken judgment. But evidently he had demonstrated nothing of the kind. The Hewingtons had given him no chance to show what he could do in that line. Well, should he quit then? Mr. Devine allowed himself to smile grimly. Almost any one in Wall street could have told you what that meant.

CHAPTER VI.

THE big rooms at Hewington Acres were empty and very still long before midnight, but the Cherub continued to sit in the library, smoking and meditating. He had a trick when watching an unsteady market of tearing pieces of paper into small bits and throwing them away. He was doing this now, and the eastern rug under his feet looked as if it had been visited by a stage snowstorm. He was aroused by an odd noise. It sounded as if some one was dragging a heavy object down the stairs.

Looking out through the door hangings, he could see the lower half of the staircase. For a moment he waited, and then there appeared the Countess Vecchi, tugging at a dress suit case which was evidently well filled. She was dressed as if for the street, with a light silk dust coat over her black gown and a jaunty straw hat on her head. When she saw the Cherub she seemed startled and shrank back guiltily.

"Oh," she exclaimed, "I—I did not expect to find you here. I am going away."

"Are you? Do you generally start alone and in the middle of the night?" The Cherub had walked out into the hall.

"I—I don't care to talk to you about it, Mr. Devine. I am going away, I tell you." Her brown eyes looked as if they might fill with tears at any moment.

"All right, all right," he said soothingly. "You needn't talk about it."

The Countess Vecchi allowed the suit case to slide to the floor, and then she faced him resolutely.

"Mr. Devine, I have found out all about you."

"Me?"

"Yes. I know why you are here."

"Good! You know a blamed sight more than I do then."

"It is useless for you to try to keep up the deceit any longer, Mr. Devine. My father has confessed the whole wretched story. He told me at first that you were merely here on some law business, but when I heard that you were entertaining your friends here, just as you would in your own house, I demanded to be told the truth. And now I know. Oh, I know it all! This is your house. You own it. Somehow or other you have tricked my poor father out of it, and now our beau-ti-ful ho-o-ome is yours. Dare you deny it? Come! Isn't it so?"

The Cherub bowed his head in meek submission.

"Then," exclaimed the countess, "you are not only a wicked man, but you are deceitful, cruel! I despise you! You—you are"—

Just what else he was the astonished Cherub was never to know, for at that point the denunciation was interrupted. The threatening flood submerged the brown eyes, and the countess, sinking down on the bottom stair, leaned against the carved newel post and sobbed tempestuously into the ample sleeve of the silk coat.

"Oh, say, now!" he protested. "See here, won't you? I didn't mean it. I take it all back, honest, I do. Come, now; let's talk it over. Oh, stop it! Do stop it!"

To the Cherub's urgent entreaties she paid not the slightest heed.

She grasped the suit case and marched past him with as much dignity as it was possible to assume with a heavy weight dragging down one arm. At the door she made a determined attack on the bolts. Stupidly the Cherub watched her as she tugged away vainly.

"You had better wait until morning, hadn't you?" he suggested.

To this she made no reply, but shoved and pulled at the stubborn bolts until she was forced to give up. Then, just as he had thought her beaten, she went promptly to one of the French windows in a front room, turned the catch and stepped out on the veranda. Mr. Devine followed.

"I do not wish for your company, Mr. Devine."

"I suppose you don't, but I'm going just the same. I'll get my coat and hat."

As he ran back into the hall he heard the countess leave the veranda. Snatching up an opera hat and a raincoat, he hurried out through the window after her. She was easily overtaken, for the suit case acted as a brake.

"You'd better let me carry your bag," he said as he overtook her, but the offer was ignored, and the repulsed Cheub fell back a pace. Thus they started down the narrow graveled path which wound a leisurely course in and out among the shrubbery toward the main road.

"See here," he said sternly as he stepped forward beside her; "you must let me take that bag."

"I shall not! I don't need your"—she began bravely enough, but the Cherub had already lifted it from her [illegible]

"I know you don't," he said, "but I've got the bag."

A low grumble of distant thunder caused the countess to slacken her pace.

"There!" he exclaimed reproachfully. "It's going to rain, you see. Did you hear that?"

"Yes, I heard."

"But where are you going?"

The countess stopped abruptly and turned to say: "I think I told you, Mr. Devine, that I did not care to discuss my plans with you at all. Will you give me my bag?"

"No," said the Cherub. "I shall lug it myself, and I shall follow you until I see you safe somewhere."

With a gesture of impatience the countess resumed her way.

A brisk breeze sprang up somewhere. The treetops began to rock and sway like drunken men. Several sharp crashes of thunder came in quick succession, and the bare highway emerged for an instant from indistinct gloom as the lightning revealed every detail. Then there came a hush. Big drops of rain fell with menacing impact on the crown of the Cherub's opera hat.

"There! I told you it was going to rain," he announced. "Hold on, now; I'm going to put this coat on you."

The countess hesitated. He had dropped the bag and was holding up the coat by the collar. Another and more vivid flash than any which had preceded it revealed him with photographic distinctness. She could not help noting that he looked very well in evening dress. He did not seem so much inclined to stoutness as in a business suit.

"No; you need the coat yourself. You'll be wet through in a moment." The big drops struck through her thin silk sleeves coldly on her arms.

Then she allowed him to help her into the raincoat.

"Come on," he said, picking up the bag and starting ahead. The rain was now drumming a roaring tattoo on the crown of his hat.

"You must take my arm or you'll fall," ordered the Cherub. Meekly she obeyed, and they went plunging and sliding through the storm.

"Oh, you're being drenched!" said the countess. Apparently he did not hear. "You are wet through, aren't you?" she shouted in his ear.

"Not quite," he answered calmly. "Come on."

There ensued a period during which they stumbled and slid along in silence. At last they discovered several houses near the road.

"We're getting into the village," announced the Cherub. "Isn't that where we want to go?"

"Yes," said the countess. "I suppose so."

"But where? Whereabouts in the village?"

"The railroad station."

"The railroad station!" The Cherub echoed this as if he had never heard the words before. "What do you want to go there for?"

"Because I am going away," said the countess wearily. "I'm going away."

Five minutes later, when they reached the station, he saw with joy that it was one of those low, wide roofed affairs, under whose eaves they could at least find shelter from the pelting rain.

The station was dark, and all the doors were locked, of course, but there was a baggage truck. He dropped the suit case with a sigh of relief and gently helped the countess to a seat on the baggage truck.

"Well, this is something like, isn't it? Great, eh?" he demanded. At every step his shoes made a slushing sound.

"Your feet must be terribly wet," suggested the countess.

"Wet! Oh, they're not so very wet. I felt fine after that walk, don't you?"

"I—I'm rather tired."

"Yes, probably you are. But now you can rest. You can rest while we are waiting for the train, you know. What time do we get a train anyway?"

"There's one at half past 7 in the morning!"

"Yes; that's the first one."

The Cherub took out his watch and tried to see the face of it, but there was not light enough.

"Look here," he said, leaning against the truck and peering at the countess earnestly. "You don't mean to stay here until half past 7, do you?"

"I—I don't know," said the countess weakly. "I did when I started, but—but I'm tired now and wet and— Oh, I wish I hadn't come at all; I wish I hadn't."

"There, there!" said the Cherub, patting her shoulder. "Don't you worry. I'll go and rout out some one. I'll get a team to take us back."

"No, no! I don't want to stay here alone. Please don't leave me here alone, Mr. Devine!" She grasped his hand and clung to it tightly.

"All right, all right! I won't leave you. We'll go together and find some one. See; it isn't raining nearly so hard as it was. I think the shower must be almost over. Shall we start now?"

The countess was quite ready. There was a livery stable just across from the station, she said. Fortunnately they found a night hostler dozing in the office. It was with difficulty, however, that he could be induced to harness a pair of horses. His chief desire seemed to be to gaze at the dripping clothes of Mr. Devine.

The drive back to Hewington Acres was silent and uneventful. As they neared the house they saw that it was brightly illuminated. Out through the open front doors streamed a broad pathway of light across which figures were moving. One of these was Mr. Hewington.

"Adele!" he exclaimed, with much dramatic fervor as he saw the countess and stretched out his arms to receive her. She went to him and promptly began to sob on his shoulder.

Next appeared the soggily clothed Cherub with the suit case. "Whew!" he exclaimed, throwing down the bag. Then, turning to the gaping butler, "Eppings, see if you can find me a dry cigar and a match."

"Mr. Devine, what does this mean, sir?" thundered Mr. Hewington. "I demand an explanation."

"Well, what do you want me to explain—that the rain is wet?" returned the Cherub.

"This is no time for levity, sir. Adele, please go upstairs." Mr. Hewington strode toward Mr. Devine threateningly.

"I want you to explain your astounding conduct, sir," repeated Mr. Hewington.

"Father, father!" pleaded the countess. "I'll tell you all about it."

"Silence, Adele! Go to your room. I will deal with this Mr. Devine."

"Now, don't you be in a hurry, Mr. Hewington, and we'll clear this little mystery in no time," said the Cherub.

"Little mystery, sir!" The tall figure of Mr. Hewington stiffened with anger. "What do you mean, sir? I wake up in the middle of the night to discover that my daughter has fled. I arouse Eppings to learn that he left you at 11 o'clock waiting for her in the library. I find the window open. I discover that you are both gone. And now, at this hour in the morning, you come back in a public carriage. You are a wretch, Mr. Devine, a scheming, villainous"—

"Stop, father, stop! This is too absurd." The Countess Vecchi had stepped between the two men. "It was all my fault. I was running away, and Mr. Devine tried to stop me, and when I wouldn't be stopped he went with me and carried the bag. Then it rained, and he got wet. He is splendid, splendid, and he is very wet."

"Sure, he is wet," assented Mrs. Timmins solemnly.

In a dazed manner Mr. Hewington inspected once more the obviously damp condition of Mr. Devine's raiment.

"Yes, yes, Adele. I suppose it is all right, but it is not yet clear in my mind."

The Cherub was not inclined to continue the dialogue. "Oh, we'll straighten that all out in the morning, Mr. Hewington."

A moment later the chimes of a French clock announced the hour of 3.

"Three o'clock!" exclaimed the Cherub. "I don't believe you'll catch that 7:30 train, will you, countess?"

She had started up the stairs, but she turned to smile and shake her head. It was a friendly smile.

CHAPTER VII.

"BUT why should I stay here? Why do you want me to stay?"

The countess was asking Mr. Devine these questions with as much sincerity as if there could be no possible reason why he should object to her leaving Hewington Acres.

"Why—why, because you ought to, because I want you to stay. Don't you see? I want you to stay."

For the better part of the day the Cherub had been waiting for just this opportunity. Now that it had come he stood staring at her with a blank, baffled look in his blue eyes.

The countess glanced curiously at him with a light laugh.

He had found her in her favorite retreat, a rustic summer house perched on a little point of rocks which jutted out into the sound and marked the eastern boundary of the estate.

"It's very kind of you, Mr. Devine," she said, "I'm sure, but I don't feel that I can accept such a favor from—well, from a stranger, you know."

"We'll get acquainted then."

But the countess firmly held to the point. Hewington Acres was no longer her home; therefore she must leave it at once.

"Perhaps it is mine, but I don't want the place," urged the Cherub. "I just bought it for a joke. I'll tell you what I'm going to do—I'm going to sell it back to your father. I'll let it go cheap for the sake of getting rid of it."

To be continued.

"OH, YOU'RE BEING DRENCHED!" SAID THE COUNTESS.

THE NAVAL SERVICE.

In another column will be found an advertisement calling for men for the Naval Service. As is well known, the need of men to defend our coasts is urgent and the loyalty of Canadians not already with the colors should prompt them to heed the great necessity, and act accordingly. Do not consider the matter too long but sign up at once.

THE COUNTRY'S FINANCES.

Near approach of the end of the fiscal year finds Canada's financial position sound. The customs revenue, which may be regarded as a fairly reliable barometer of trade conditions throughout the country, continues to break records. The figures for February showed an increase of more than ten per cent. over the corresponding figures for 1916; and there is reason to expect that equally satisfactory advances will be shown in March.

This is satisfactory in a double sense; it shows that despite the war the country's prosperity continues on the upgrade, and it acts as an incentive to the nation to lift that prosperity to a still higher level.

During the past two and a half years the nation's energies have been chiefly devoted to the war, and rightly so, because the whole future of the Dominion and the Empire depends upon the success of the vast issue in Europe. But it is nevertheless important, if not vital, that the commercial and industrial activities of the country be maintained and extended in every possible way, if only to bring about a condition whereby the Dominion will be in a stronger position to meet the heavy burdens that will necessarily be imposed upon it as a result of the war.

And, in addition to that important aspect, there is the future development of the country to bear in mind. After the war there will be an unloosening of the national energies now concentrated upon a temporary but vital enterprise. The great armies now battling in Europe will be forged into industrial armies and concentrated upon the task of regenerating the devastated industrialism of most of the nations now destroyed by war. There will have to be great reorganizations, and there will necessarily be great upheavals, and it would be folly on the part of Canada if, while expending her energies now upon the supreme issue in Europe, she did not, at the same time, make some preparation to maintain for herself after the coming of peace, the splendid position she has so dearly won in this war, by win in this war.

RESEARCH WORK.

The Hon. Martin Burrell, Minister of Agriculture, has authorized the appointment of assistant Professor of Biology of Macdonald College, W. P. Fraser, M.A., in connection with the special investigations on grain rust to be conducted at the recently erected field laboratories at Brandon, Man., and Indian Head, Sask. This appointment has been made in consideration and anticipation of the claims of our Western farmers, who have suffered serious losses from the uncontrolled ravages of this widespread disease of grain. The average annual loss throughout the world from rust exceeds $100,000,000, but in years when the disease appears epidemically, as in 1904 and 1916, losses for Canada and the U.S.A. alone amounted to nearly $280,000,000 ($180,000,000 actual report from U.S.A. and $100,000,000 estimated for Canada). From these figures it will be seen how very important every effort must appear directed against the losses from this source in the future.

Mr. Fraser, according to the opinion of eminent professional authorities on the subject of plant diseases, is looked upon as the best qualified and experienced person on rust investigations that could be secured for this work, even if we had the choice from the available men in the U.S.A. and Canada.

Mr. Fraser is a Canadian from birth, he is a graduate in Arts (B. A.) of Cornell University, and a Master of Arts of Dalhousie University, Halifax, N.S. For a number of years he has carried on successful researches in plant diseases, the results of which have established the life histories of fourteen species previously unknown to science, besides having confirmed the life history of many more, and having added much to a general knowledge of the rusts. He is the author of numerous contributions on the subject to leading scientific periodicals. In grain rust he has made special researches, which have not yet been published. It would appear from these qualifications that Mr. Fraser is eminently suitable for this difficult research and his appointment must be considered most opportune and one for which producer and consumer alike should be most grateful.

The work of Mr. Fraser will be conducted throughout the important grain growing provinces in the Dominion. For this purpose the country is divided into districts, each of which is under the charge of an expert. At present there are the Experimental Farms at Brandon, Man., and Indian Head, Sask., of two scientific laboratories. These laboratories are a special institution with which the Minister's name will be permanently associated, since, under his administration the first of a series years ago, five years established at St. Catherine's, Ont., the most important fruit producing region of the Dominion and which serves the special needs of the fruit grower. Similar laboratories have been established in New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island, and are in charge of highly trained specialists in plant pathology, who are engaged in investigational and preventive work in connection with plant diseases in the Maritime Provinces and Quebec.

BERNSTORFF THE BETRAYER.

New York Sun: A genial plotter against his friends was this advance agent of kultur. Betraying with a smile, he needed only a few pounds, more of fat to be the Count Fosco of diplomacy. The extent of his legacy to the United States we have yet to learn. When he quit London to bestow his diplomatic light upon Washington he left behind him that sinister organization of German spies which at the opening of the war suddenly revealed itself to the astounded English. Every hotel restaurant and club had been made a telephone to the ear of Wilhelmstrasse. The Briton's tailor, valet, chauffeur and favorite waiter were in the pay of the German secret service. Even that typically British institution, the Gaiety chorus, gave up evidences of being lured from loyalty by German gold. The imagination of Mr. E. Phillips Oppenheim was outdone in the creation of spies by the genius of the Count von Bernstorff.

Current Comment

In the meantime, as we construe it, St. John or Halifax may ship liquor into Maine, if the duty be paid, in spite of the Reed "bone dry" amendment to the Postal Appropriation Bill. —Portland Press.

It would be interesting to know how much of the hundreds of thousands of pounds of foodstuffs condemned and destroyed by the city's health department last year went bad while being held by its owners till the price could be squeezed up.—Toronto Globe.

The new mace for the Dominion House of Commons, replacing that which was destroyed in the Parliament building fire a year ago, is to be formally presented in London to Sir Robert Borden by the Lord Mayor of the Metropolis.

A circular issued by J. C. Fraser Sons & Co., of New York, states that the production of oleomargarine in the United States for January last was 18,817,071 pounds, against 11,502,100 pounds for January 1916, and 23,122,822 pounds for the last month of last year.

The British Food Controller has fixed 102 shillings as the maximum price for Canadian cheese, a reduction of fourteen shillings a hundredweight. The recent quotation of new prices will prevail for a fortnight, then again be revised.

It is apparent that the freedom of life which these Germans enjoyed in America did not impress them as being something desirable which they ought to help maintain in the world. They prized American freedom only because of the opportunities it afforded them for conspiring against it.

"The Irish Nationalists resent every method of settling the Home Rule question but their own," says the Mail and Empire. And, it may be added, the Irish Unionists likewise resent every method but their own. Except for the Irish, you see, the Irish question could be amicably settled overnight.—Toronto Star.

Under the consolidated censorship regulations, four more publications in foreign languages containing objectionable matter have been excluded from circulation in Canada. They are the World, and War Chronicle, Philadelphia; the New York Undines, the North Star, Fitchburg, Mass., and Werwicks American Weekly, New York.

Magistrate Ball, of Woodstock, uncertain whether Alex. Green could properly be convicted on a charge of having liquor in a place other than his private residence, the accused having partaken of whisker supplied by another man, referred the point to the Commissioners. Their reply was to the effect that the question of whether "drinking" was the same thing for the purpose of the act as "having" was a moot point and in their judgment the court to be on the safe side should acquit.

Chemically Self-Extinguishing!

What do these words mean to you?
They mean greater safety in the Home. Surely something that interests you keenly!
Perhaps you have noticed these words and the notation "No fire-lefts when blown off" on our new "Silent Parlor" match boxes. The Splints or Sticks of all Matches contained in these boxes have been impregnated or soaked in a chemical solution which renders them dead wood, once they have been lighted and blown out and the danger of FIRE from glowing Matches is hereby reduced to the greatest minimum.

THINGS YOU FORGET

The Studebaker Series "18" car is an evolution and perfected piece of mechanism. That is why you can FORGET many little things about Studebaker that you have to REMEMBER about car of other make.

For instance: the cooling system of the Studebaker car will work in any climate, at any temperature, preventing you keep water in the radiator.

The ignition system of a Studebaker car will work unfailingly in absolutely all conditions, if you will remember to put in the right kind of spark plug.

The electric lights, and the electric starter will never fail you if a little distilled water is put in the battery from time to time.

You will not have to paint your body frequently to keep it looking nice, because Studebaker's finishing work is the same of years of experience.

You won't have to renew the leather on your cushions, because experience has taught Studebaker how to select and buy the highest quality of leather.

You won't need to worry about making a grade with a Studebaker car, because the Studebaker motor has been perfected into the most powerful motor in the world in ratio to gasoline consumption.

You won't have to continually worry about lubrication, about oil and greasing parts of your car, because every part is equipped with ample capacity grease cups.

These are the things that make it a delight to own and run a Studebaker car, and cause you to say, "I never have any trouble with it."

"Made in Canada."

THE WAR LOAN

Three years are the limitation of the bank and will yield only 4% on the amount invested. It is interesting to know now the loan floated at 96 would work out when the loan would still have fifteen years to run.

Five Years From Now

It would sell at	100	to yield 5%
"	100½	" 4½ "
"	101¼	" 4%

The investor on this basis would have had 6.66% on his money for five years, and would have received $1.25 profit at 100, or $10.75, or $102.50 per $1,000, at the same yield 4%.

We shall be glad to forward your application and look after all your interests free of charge to you.

Payable at par at Ottawa, Halifax, St. John, Charlottetown, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary, Victoria, and at the Agency of the Bank of Montreal, New York City.

INTEREST PAYABLE HALF-YEARLY, 1st MARCH, 1st SEPTEMBER.

PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST PAYABLE IN GOLD.

ISSUE PRICE 96.

A FULL HALF-YEAR'S INTEREST WILL BE PAID ON 1st SEPTEMBER, 1917.

THE PROCEEDS OF THE LOAN WILL BE USED FOR WAR PURPOSES ONLY.

10	per cent on application;
30	"	16th April, 1917;
30	"	15th May, 1917;
26	"	15th June, 1917.

The total allotment of bonds of this issue will be limited to one hundred and fifty million dollars, exclusive of the amount (if any) paid for by the surrender of bonds as the equivalent of cash under the terms of the War Loan prospectus of 22nd November, 1915.

The instalments may be paid in full on the 16th day of April, 1917, or on any instalment due date thereafter, under discount at the rate of four per cent per annum. All payments are to be made to a chartered bank for the credit of the Minister of Finance. Failure to pay any instalment when due will render previous payments liable to forfeiture and the allotment to cancellation.

Subscriptions, accompanied by a deposit of ten per cent of the amount subscribed, must be forwarded through the medium of a chartered bank. Any branch in Canada of any chartered bank will receive subscriptions and issue provisional receipts.

This loan is authorized under Act of the Parliament of Canada, and both principal and interest will be a charge upon the Consolidated Revenue Fund.

Forms of application may be obtained from any branch in Canada of any chartered bank and at the office of any Assistant Receiver General in Canada.

Subscriptions must be for even hundreds of dollars.

In case of partial allotments the surplus deposit will be applied towards payment of the amount due on the April instalment.

Scrip certificates, non-negotiable or payable to bearer in accordance with the choice of the applicant for registered or bearer bonds, will be issued, after allotment, in exchange for the provisional receipts.

When the scrip certificates have been paid in full and payment endorsed thereon by the bank receiving the money, they may be exchanged for bonds, when prepared, with coupons attached, payable to bearer or registered as to principal, or for fully registered bonds, when prepared, without coupons, in accordance with the application.

Delivery of scrip certificates and of bonds will be made through the chartered banks.

The issue will be exempt from taxes—including any income tax—imposed in pursuance of legislation enacted by the Parliament of Canada.

The bonds with coupons will be issued in denominations of $100, $500, $1,000. Fully registered bonds without coupons will be issued in denominations of $1,000, $5,000 or any authorized multiple of $5,000.

The bonds will be paid at maturity at par at the office of the Minister of Finance and Receiver General at Ottawa, or at the office of the Assistant Receiver General at Halifax, St. John, Charlottetown, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary or Victoria, or at the Agency of the Bank of Montreal, New York City.

The interest on the fully registered bonds will be paid by cheque, which will be remitted by post. Interest on bonds with coupons will be paid on surrender of coupons. Both cheques and coupons, at the option of the holder, will be payable free of exchange at any branch in Canada of any chartered bank, or at the Agency of the Bank of Montreal, New York City.

Subject to the payment of twenty-five cents for each new bond issued, holders of fully registered bonds without coupons will have the right to convert into bonds of the denomination of $1,000 with coupons, and holders of bonds with coupons will have the right to convert into fully registered bonds of authorized denominations without coupons at any time on application to the Minister of Finance.

The books of the loan will be kept at the Department of Finance, Ottawa.

Application will be made in due course for the listing of the issue on the Montreal and Toronto Stock Exchanges.

Recognized bond and stock brokers having offices and carrying on business in Canada will be allowed a commission of three-eighths of one per cent on allotments made in respect of applications bearing their stamp, provided, however, that no commission will be allowed in respect of the amount of any allotment paid for by the surrender of bonds issued under the War Loan prospectus of 22nd November, 1915, nor in respect of the amount of any allotment paid for by surrender of five per cent debenture stock maturing 1st October, 1919. No commission will be allowed in respect of applications on forms which have not been printed by the King's Printer.

SUBSCRIPTION LISTS WILL CLOSE ON OR BEFORE THE 23rd OF MARCH, 1917.

Doctor Advised Operation As Only Cure for Piles

Wife Objected to use of Knife and Cure Was Effected by use of Dr. Chase's Ointment

Grimsby, Ont., Feb. 28—Here is the affadavit of a well-known fruit grower, who was cured of bleeding Piles some years ago by using Dr. Chase's Ointment.

His doctor could do nothing for him and recommended a surgical operation as the only means of cure. Luckily his wife had heard about Dr. Chase's Ointment and complete cure resulted from this treatment.

It is by the cure of extreme cases like this that Dr. Chase's Ointment has won the reputation of being about the only actual cure for Piles—itching, bleeding and protruding piles.

Mr. Samuel Parker, fruit grower, Grimsby, Ont., has made the following declaration before Mr. W. W. Kidd, Notary Public, in the same place: "I do solemnly declare that I was troubled with bleeding Piles and was advised to go to the hospital to have an operation performed. My wife said, 'No, get a box of Dr. Chase's Ointment.' I did so and have used it according to directions while living in Manitoba, and always got complete cure, for I have never been troubled with Piles since. I am now 70 years of age and want to recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment to any sufferers from Piles. My wife has used it for itching skin and obtained complete cure."

Mrs. A. J. Stewart, 17 Turnbull St., Belleville, writes: "About ten years ago my husband was troubled with itching Piles. He tried different remedies, but without getting relief. He was advised by friends to try Dr. Chase's Ointment, and found that it was just what was required, and obtained permanent relief. We cheerfully recommend it to all sufferers from Piles."

Put Dr. Chase's Ointment to the test and it will not disappoint you. Sixty cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto.

The Campaign Moves Forward.

Mr. E. Tennyson Smith Holds Large Audience in Bridge Street Church—Some of His Methods

The interest in Mr. E. Tennyson Smith's campaign is rapidly increasing with every meeting, as people are beginning to realize that he is one of the most entertaining platform speakers of the day and that his lectures are not only instructive and inspiring, but also most entertaining. He may be said to present "moving pictures" at every meeting, for the dramatic power with which he relates the incidents which he has taken to the scene and the people live before his hearers.

The meeting last night was in Bridge Street Methodist Church School-room and was a great success. Mr. Smith's story of a student, who, after taking great honors at college, gradually went down physically and mentally, until he reached a low class drinking den of vile for description, and of his death in a cellar on a heap of straw, was so graphically spoken on the platform was forgotten and one could see each the tragic scene which he was depicting, and the audience was held breathless until the climax, and story. Mr Smith also has the gift of humour, and so the tension of listening to the tra

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

Montreal, March 13.—At the Montreal Grain Exchange wheat was dull, owing to limited supplies, the tone of the market was steady, however, with no material change in prices. A few choice steers were sold at $11 to $11.25 per cwt., but there was a good demand from packers, and prices for choice steers and heifers are firm. The prices stood this day much the same as for a number of days past, or from 9c to 9½c per lb.

There was an active demand for all the offerings, and, although a large trade was done in selected lots at $18.35 to $18.50, and $18.75 to $19.50, the bulk of the sales at $18.10 to $18.25 per cwt., weighed off cars, Toronto, and $18.25 to $18.50, and $18.75 to $19.25, Montreal. Lambs sold at $19.50 to $20, common, $18.25 to $19; sheep, choice, $16.50 to $17, heavy, $15, bucks, $13 to $14, calves, medium, $7.75 to $8.25; do., bulls, $6.50 to $7.50; milkers, choice, each, $85 to $100; common and medium, each, $60 to $90; springers, $70 to $90.

Hogs, fed and watered, $10 to $10; bucks and culls, $8.25 to $8.50.

Hogs, f.o.b. farms, $14.25 to $14.50.

Hogs, off cars, $14.25 to $14.50.

Calves, per cwt., $5 to $11.

UNION STOCK YARDS.

TORONTO, March 13.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Stock Yards yesterday consisted of 94 cars, 1,645 cattle, 104 calves, 1,418 hogs, and 45 sheep and lambs.

Choice butchers' steers sold before and at $10.75 to $11, and good at $10 to $10.50, medium, at $9.75 to $10.25, and good cows at $9 to $9.50.

One extra choice cow, 1200 lbs. sold at $10.25, and one of 1100 lbs. also sold at $9.75, the balance selling at prices to suit weight and quality.

Milkers and springers were steady, with selected and choice cows strong and slightly higher in price.

Veal calves were firm at yesterday's high prices, with the supply steady at last week's closing prices.

The demand for hogs was steady and fair, were consigned to packers at last week's prices. Prices quoted $14.25, fed and watered, and $14.65, watered off cars.

EAST BUFFALO LIVE STOCK.

East Buffalo, N.Y., March 12.—Cattle receipts, 100; active and higher; shipping steers, $8.50 to $11.75; butchers, $7.50 to $10.75; heifers, $6 to $10; cows, $5 to $9.50; bulls, $6 to $9; stockers and feeders, $6 to $8.50; fresh cows and springers, active and strong, $50 to $110. OUR WEEKLY SERMON

THE FOOTSTEPS OF SORROW

BY REV. A. M. HUBLY

Gen. XXII: 19.

"They went both of them together." Father and son, both of them together, on a journey made memorable by a sacrifice singularly sacred and solemn.

Every footstep of the old man knew the solemne way; must have wrenched at his heart. Almost to the breaking point. The son was not a little boy, but a man grown in stature, and in mental stature, and intellectually fit-for her companion and confidant of his honored father. Yet, we see them tramping side by side on one of the most important journeys recorded in their history, the son being perfectly ignorant of its intent, and having no knowledge of his father's grief.

Many are the footsteps of sorrow that marks the path of life, trod by that wonderful man, "the father of the faithful," whom God was pleased to call His "friend."

He was a man who had qualities of character which were well in the rough experiences of life, and stood the test of time. He was a man whose faith in God could be put to a severe proof, and that proof, and its results are "written for our example." The leaving of his kindred and his father's house to cross the river and seek the land of Mesopotamia, could not have been, without sorrow of heart.

Many were the sorrowful trials born on his pilgrimage journey from the river Euphrates to Palestine, the land of promise. When driven by famine to Egypt, with what sorrow must he have trod the way he is forced, for the virtue of his beautiful wife Sarah. And again, what a sore trial the parting with his beloved nephew Lot, and to see the young man pitch his tent toward the wicked cities of the plain.

How dear must the backslider was to him, may be seen as he beheld him, with anguish of soul, appealing to God for the preservation of the sinful cities because of dear Lot there. What footprints of sorrow marks the place where, in perplexity he takes refuge in the shadowy solitudes of the Judges of all the earth, as "he looked toward Sodom and Gomorah and to all the land of the plain, and beheld, and lo, the smoke of the country went up as the smoke of a furnace."

Abraham was a prosperous man as the world counts prosperity, yet, many were the trials and struggles he had to endure. There was one deep shadow that began to deepen with ominous portend—the promise that in him should be all the families of the earth blessed. Then, especially, overshadowed faith was yet unfulfilled, and now, because of his weight of years, to all human sense was hopeless of fulfillment. Then, especially, the shadow chased each other by, and at last here blossomed into fruition; "Sarah bare a son unto Abraham in his old age, and he called his son "Isaac."

Doubtless, many sorrows of the past were turned into joy, as the boy grew to be a man.

With what glad expectations the father had looked upon his son as the promised hope of the nation, and in whose seed all the people of the earth should be blessed. Then, as the bolt from the blue, there falls upon this man of faith, that which shatters his and society's prospects—a command in his pilgrim journey, and who had said, "I will make thy seed as the dust of the earth; so that if a man can number the dust of the earth, then shall thy seed also be numbered." This Almighty God now speaks, saying: "Take now thy son, thine only son Isaac, who thou lovest and get thee into the land Moriah; and offer him there for a burnt offering on one of the mountain which I will tell thee of." We cannot conceive of a greater outward trial than this to the feelings of a parent. He understood the language to mean that he should be the slayer of his own son, "his only son Isaac whom he loved."

It would have been some relief if it could deliver his beloved to some other hand to sacrifice him. But he must take the wood, the fire and the knife, and tramp tramp the journey to that place appointed for the horrible deed. By no turn of circumstance can he escape the terrible ordeal. To refuse to obey the command, would be to rebel against God, "would in wrath bend his breath in" and who is the director of his son's destiny. He is bound to take full face of faith and obedience, or retire from both; to be no longer the father of the faithful, nor the friend of God, but to be forever numbered among backsliders.

The Lord delivers us from any attempt at backsliding or indifference to obedience in the Divine command. See the man of faith, his locks are whiting, and his frame bending beneath the weight of one hundred and twenty years, bearing his terrible trial in secret silence. Though his lips speak not can we not hear echoing in his heart the words of inspiration which calls attention to another only son being sacrificed

"Is it nothing to you, all ye that pass by? Behold, and see if there be any sorrow, like unto my sorrow, which is done unto me, wherewith the Lord hath afflicted me."

What a tumult of sorrowful emotion must have ravaged the soul of the patriarch as he left his peaceful home and his beloved Sarah, with their only son Isaac, designing to sacrifice him on some mountain, far from the abode of man, at the command of Jehovah, whom he had learned to love, trust, and obey. So far as the record goes, not a single human being knew anything of the intended homicide, except the father himself, not even the son, nor yet the mother.

The old man must bear it all alone! We know something, of parting with the dear children as they go out in the world. When kneeling around the family altar on the morning of the day of separation, and the last prayer is borne upward to the Father in heaven, there is heartfelt sorrow, the lips quiver, and the tongue can scarcely respond to the call of heart and mind. Then comes the final parting; the evening falls, the coming the threshhold; the good-bye; the last clouded eyes; the mother stands looking, wiping her eyes, while the father with repressed feelings and sad-off steps retires. Not so, this going away from home. Abraham fogs with Isaac, leaving Sarah in perplexity, wondering what this strange departure of her husband and son means. "But our lesson from the "footsteps of sorrow," have to do with Abraham. As he renamed with his son toward the place of sacrifice, thinking of the living as dead must have been his experience.

He saw his son laid upon the altar, while in fact he was not slaying but walking and talking with him; he saw him die, where as yet, he is in the fullness of health, and springing young life.

Thus the man of faith pursues his way, obedient to the call of his God, with the burden of a great sorrow pressing his heart; silent soliloquies within, and broken by the heaving sigh, as if it were a relief to offer the sacrifice of the patriarch's soul ascending to the throne of heaven. What was it that God required of His "Friend" as a trial test of his faith?

Nothing less than the offering up of his old age, the hope of his family, and the pledge of Infinite blessings to the nations of the world. Abraham mastered the trial, he stood the test.

He virtually offered as a sacrifice his son: though God provided a substitute, a ram was offered in stead! The will was accepted for the deed, and blessings were poured upon the father of the faithful.

The Lord who tried him, knew, from the beginning what he would do, and has, in the whole transaction given for all generations a lively type of greater things. We see the Father God, giving His only begotten Son, Jesus Christ, a sacrifice for the sins of the whole world.

Bound with cords, he bore his cross, up the mount, and was offered up as an offering for sin. He rose again to live forever more, to see his seed, even His redeemed people, whom no man can number, and whose possessions are the glorious heaven of eternity.

O, beloved, from "the footsteps of sorrow" of those who have gone before, in the way of faith and obedience, there runs a light to cheer and guide us through the mists and somber perplexities of the trying providences attending Christians walking with God, as His dear children.

Let us be faithful, in every call of God, with cheerful responsiveness, keeping nothing from Him, that He asks of us. That when He has tried us, He may crown us the faith, He has imparted to us, by the means of grace with which we are blessed, with the unfading glory which He has promised to everyone who is faithful unto death.

ACID STOMACHS ARE DANGEROUS

Nine-tenths of All Stomach Trouble Said to be Due to Acidity

A Physician's Advice on Cause and Cure

A famous physician whose successful researches into the cause and cure of stomach and intestinal diseases have earned for him an international reputation, said in the course of a recent lecture that nearly all intestinal troubles, as well as many diseases of the vital organs, were directly traceable to a deranged condition of the stomach which in turn was due solely (most of us) to excessive acidity, commonly termed sour stomach or heartburn, which not only irritated and inflamed the delicate lining of the stomach, but also set up gastritis and stomach ulcers. It is futile to note that he condemns the use of patent medicines as well as of medical treatment for the stomach, stating that he and his colleagues have secured remarkable results by the use of ordinary bisurated magnesia, which, by neutralizing the acidity of the food, removes the source of the trouble. He contends that it is as foolish to treat the stomach itself as it would be for a man who stepped on a tack to rub liniment on the foot without first removing the tack. Remove the tack and the foot will heal itself—neutralize the acid and the stomach troubles will disappear. Irritating medicines and medical treatments are useless, so long as the contents of the stomach remain acid; remove the acidity, and there will be no need for medicine—the inflamed lining of the stomach will then heal itself. Sufferers from acidity, sour stomach or heartburn should get a small bottle of bisurated magnesia from their druggist, and take a teaspoonful in a quarter of a glass of hot or cold water after meals, repeating in fifteen minutes if necessary, this being the dose which the doctor has found most efficacious in all cases.

Hair Often Ruined By Careless Washing

If you want to keep your hair looking its best, be careful what you wash it with. Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else, that contains too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it. The best thing for steady use is just ordinary mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than the most expensive soap or anything else you can use.

One or two spoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing particles of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at any pharmacy, it's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.

EX-MAYOR LINGHAM

Many citizens of all classes were yesterday afternoon in attendance at the obsequies of the late Mr. Nelson Lingham, ex-Mayor of Belleville. At the family residence, Dundas street, an impressive service was conducted by the Rev. Dr. Scott, Pastor of Bridge Street Methodist Church, assisted by the Rev. Dr. Baker, Principal of Albert College. Rev. Dr. Scott officiated at the interment at Belleville cemetery. Despite the fact that there was a request that no flowers be sent, a number of friends contributed some beautiful floral designs. The bearers were Messrs. A. Gillen, C. M. Storle, C. M. Reid, F. B. Wallbridge, R. W. Ward and J. Downey, in the passing of Mr. Nelson Lingham, the city of Belleville has lost one of its most respected citizens and his wife will remain a benediction upon the city he had at heart.

CALLED BY DEATH.

MRS. SARAH M. DINGMAN

After being ill for some time, Mrs. Sarah M. Dingman, relict of the late Mr. Darrell Dingman passed away last night at her late residence, 249 William Street. Deceased who was in her 74th year was born in South Marysburg, Prince Edward County, being a daughter of the late Solomon Dulmage. Her mother's maiden name was Miss Annie Zwick from which Zwick's island received its name. Mrs. Dingman was an estimable lady, who, until May last when she came to Belleville had lived in Prince Edward County. She was a member of the Methodist Church. One daughter Miss Ida Dingman of this city survives.

CHARLES R. WEESE

As the result of two paralytic strokes sustained during the past few days, Mr. Charles R. Weese, passed away this morning at the family residence, North Front Street. Deceased was well known in Belleville, where he had many friends. About sixty years ago, he was born near Albury, in Prince Edward County, being a son of the late Mr. Francis Weese. In early life the deceased came to this city where he has since resided. For a number of years in company with his brother, Mr. John Weese, he was engaged in the monumental business. Mr. Weese was a member of the Methodist Church. A widow, 3 sons, Ralph and Herold, of Belleville, and Reginald, who is in a branch of the Merchants Bank at Ottawa, and a daughter, Miss Gladys at home survive. Mr. John Weese of this city is a brother and three sisters, Mrs. R. McCrudden, of Belleville, Mrs. Jessie of Toronto, and Mrs. James Crook of Desonto are living. To the bereaved will be extended the sympathy of many friends.

SOCIAL APPERSONAL

HUN DRIVES FARE BADLY

Make Violent Attacks on Captured Positions—Lost Heavily in Grenade Fighting

Special to The Intelligencer.

PARIS, March 15.—Violent counter attacks were made by the Germans yesterday evening on positions captured by the French in Champagne, on Monday. Official announcement given out today says the attacks were repulsed and the Germans lost heavily in grenade fighting around Maisons de Champagne and Hill 146.

French captured new trench elements. South of St. Mihiel the French obtained possession of Remanaville farm with thirty prisoners. They also entered German trenches between the Meuse and Apremont, bringing back a number of prisons.

A German surprise attack near Lassigny and north of Soissons was defeated.

HOLD TENACIOUSLY TO "NO MAN'S LAND" POSITIONS

Germans Made One Attempt at a Raid, But Their Hot Reception Put an End to That Sort of Enterprise

LONDON, March 15.—Special.—The following communique has been issued by the Canadian war records office:

"The past week has been unusually quiet. One attempt to raid our trenches was made by the enemy. In the semi-darkness of the early morning two of our sentries perceived a party of about twenty Germans stealthily approaching. Waiting until the enemy were within twenty yards they opened fire and threw six bombs. The leader of the Germans pressed forward firing his revolver, but was shot down. The rest of the party, after throwing a few cylindrical stick bombs, which did no harm, hastily retreated, dragging with them the bodies of several of their number who had been hit.

"There have been a few encounters between patrols, but, generally speaking, 'No Man's Land' has belonged indisputably to our men.

"Severe weather conditions continued and there were light falls of snow."

BAVARIANS DRIVEN BACK

Anti-Air Guns Become More Dangerous to Canadians Take Prisoners

Special To The Intelligencer.

TORONTO, March 15.—Stewart Lyon in a cable to the Canadian Press from the Canadian Headquarters in France this morning says in the midst of last night and early this morning the Bavarians opposite the Canadians who were fighting good men attempted two raids, but were at once driven off. They carried back their wounded, but left two dead in the Canadian lines. Dull misty weather with occasional rain persists on the Canadian activity. It is universally testified that anti-aircraft guns are far more dangerous than formerly, and this is because instead of firing directly at the machine, guns now aim at creating a barrage fire through which the flier must pass to cross lines. Heavy guns have been more active recently and British and Canadians have had the best of it.

GENERAL MAUDE IS 30 MILES ABOVE BAGDAD

Townshend's Artillery Lost With Kut, Recaptured—Turks Admit Defeat—Evacuation of Bagdad Announced by the Constantinople War Office

LONDON, March 15.—Special.—The British have advanced thirty miles above Bagdad, it is announced officially.

The statement says that the British artillery taken by the Turks at the time of the surrender of Gen. Townshend's army at Kut-el-Amara has been recaptured at Bagdad by the British.

The statement follows:

"Telegraphing on Monday and Tuesday, Gen. Maude (British Commander in Mesopotamia) reports that our advance detachments reached a point thirty miles up-stream from Bagdad and that steps had been taken to prevent the flooding of Bagdad city during the coming rise in the rivers. The Bagdad Turkish small arms factory is in good repair. . The railway workshops contain good serviceable machinery, which is uninjured, also five locomotives and some rolling stock. A large quantity of obsolete ordnance, including some antique bronze guns, and masses of all kinds of ammunition have been found in the citadel. The guns which were captured from us at the surrender of Kut, also have been recovered in Bagdad."

The evacuation of Bagdad by the Turks is announced by the Constantinople War Office, indirectly in a statement received recently. The announcement says:

"After fighting south of Bagdad on March 10, our troops withdrew and took up a new position between Bagdad and Samara."

(Samara is on the Tigris about 75 miles northwest of Bagdad.)

ALLIED TROOPS SUCCESSFUL

Surprise Attack Enables French to Take Prisoners—Otherwise Quiet

Special To The Intelligencer.

PARIS, March 15.—East of the Oise a surprise attack which we made in the region of Moulin Sonts Toutvent enabled us to take prisoners says today's official statement. Several German attacks on small French posts in the vicinity of Vinegre, west of Vaux-en-Vimeu, and in Argonne were broken up by our fire. In the region of Maisons de Champagne there was rather spirited artillery fire without infantry actions. There is nothing to report elsewhere.

Control Mexican Financial Affairs

Germans Virtually Directing Diplomatic Affairs of the Republic

WASHINGTON, March 14.—Confidential diplomatic reports from the representatives of a neutral Government in Mexico passing through here on their way to Europe, say the German bank in Mexico City and the German Legation there are guiding virtually the entire financial and diplomatic affairs of Mexico.

According to these reports, the action of Mexico in sending recently to the United States Republic a note on the subject of peace in Europe was directed by officials of the German Legation, while the German bank is said to have been the center of the Mexican financial situation.

Considerable attention is given in the reports to the Mexican-Japanese coalition, which goes into effect when it is being declared that several of its provisions apparently were devised as means of assisting the cause of Germany in Mexico at the expense of the interests of the Entente Allies and the United States.

DUCHESS DIES OF PNEUMONIA

Wife of the Former Governor-General of Canada Conscious Up to the Last

LONDON, March 15.—Special—The Duchess of Connaught died at 8.30 last night. Her Royal Highness' condition had been recognized as hopeless for several days. The King and Queen have made constant inquiry. Sir Robert Borden and other Canadian Ministers have made solicitous inquiries. The bulletin which announced her illness as supervening on that of four years ago only confirmed what already was made known privately. Since returning to England the Duchess took part sparingly in public engagements, although within two days of her arrival she made a call on the Canadian Red Cross. A number of Canadian officers were entertained at Christmas by her Royal Highness at the country house, Bagshot Park, the Duchess sending a personal card of greeting to every wounded soldier in the Canadian hospital here. During January the Duchess visited the Canadian hospitals at Bushey Park and Kingswood.

ANXIOUS TO FINISH JOB

Canadians Watchfully Waiting Mired in Mud—Tired of the Trenches

Canadian Headquarters in France (via London), March 15.— Special.—This is a period of "watchful waiting," mired in the mud for the Canadians at the front. A visit to the trenches shows that the men are keen to finish the job of teaching Fritz manners, but the immediate task is to wrestle with the spring break-up which, this year more than usual, has turned Northern France in a difficult country for the movement of armies. The Canadians are tired of trench warfare, and express the hope that it is true that the Germans are equally so, and are preparing for what Hindenburg wants, a trial of strength in the open field.

Our men are filled with admiration of the troops in the Bapaume area, who go forward in a region that is a perfect quagmire, manhandling heavy guns over new ground by almost incredible exertions.

NOT SHOT BY GIRL

CORNWALL, March 14.—Detective Miller, Ontario Provincial police officer, who is investigating the mystery of the death of William St. Pierre, the well-digger, whose body was found in the cellar of his house at Aultaville, to the shooting of whom Nettie Richmire, supposed wife of Emerson St. Pierre, son of the murdered man, has confessed, has his evidence ready for the coroner's jury which meets on Friday afternoon. It is believed that Miss Richmire may modify her first version of the tragedy, to the extent that the police will relieve her of responsibility for the actual shooting, which the authorities believe was the work of another hand.

AVIATION SCHOOL READY BY APRIL 1

Work on Institution at Camp Borden Being Pushed Energetically

OTTAWA, March 14.—Work at the Aviation School which the Imperial Munitions Board is constructing at Camp Borden is being pushed so satisfactorily that it is expected to be completed by April 1st. By that time buildings for the accommodation of men and machines will have been erected, 200 acres of land will have been stumped and prepared for use, asphalt pavement will have been laid and sewerage, electric light and water supply systems will have been installed. The Camp Borden depot will provide accommodation for five squadrons of aircraft that is 100 machines. It is now announced that a second school also of five squadrons will be established. Its site has not yet been selected, but a location near a town in Ontario seems distance east of Toronto is under consideration.

800,000 Men From Canada

Will Be Raised If Necessary, Says Major Gordon

NEW YORK, March 14.—Major Charles W. Gordon, Canadian novelist, chaplain of the Forty-third Cameron Highlanders, kept 600 members of the organization at their annual smoker at the Biltmore tense with a recital of the exploits of Canada's 400,000 soldiers in France and Flanders. He declared:

"You in the United States will realize where the German fleet would be now if it were hot for the British fleet. When you come into the fight or not is your own business. President Wilson's definition of the rights of small nations in his inaugural speech would be useful as long as the English language is spoken."

He declared that Canada would never grudge up until the objects of the war were attained, and that her contribution would be increased to 800,000 men if necessary.)

Private P. J. Jensen, of the Canadian Black Watch, who crawled six miles at the second battle of Ypres with ten shrapnel wounds in his back, told his story.

RETIRING TO LENS-LAON

German Rear Guard Only in Bapaume Defences—British Make Important Progress

LONDON, March 15—Special—Belief now exists in London that the Germans have already evacuated Bapaume and are falling back to the Hindenburg line—Lens, St. Quentin-Laon. Their retreat is being hastened by artillery pursuit.

An Amsterdam despatch to The Times says: "The news published here today from London of the impending fall of Bapaume lends significance to the evidently inspired German advocacy of what is described as the strategical shortening of the western front in articles in the Berliner Tageblatt and Berlin Lokal Anzeiger Amstag. They seem designed to prepare the German public for a further backward movement and to discount in advance the loss of Bapaume and other positions."

Three Entombed Miners Rescued

Escaped Death at Cordova Fire by Entering Storehouse—Air Pumped to Them Saved Their Lives

Special to The Intelligencer.

MARMORA, March 15.—The anxiety which existed at the mine early on the three men entombed in Shaft No. 1 of the Cordova Mine, Marmora Township, owing to the fire on Tuesday last has been relieved. They were subsequently found to be safe. At the outbreak of the fire, being unable to reach the surface, they sought refuge in a store house, which fortunately was saved from destruction. The three men were fortunate, being all Findlanders and had been employed about the mine for some time. The extent of air, which was forced into the shaft as soon as it was possible to do so reached the entombed men. They were not in the mine long, however, after the fire had occurred, as they were unable to be reached. The apparently suffered no ill effects from their temporary enforced imprisonment.

Orangemen Are For Compulsion

Would Also Prevent Physically Fit Men From Leaving Canada

TORONTO, March 14.—In a manifesto just issued by the Orange Order from their head office here, at 14 Bertie street, they call on the Government to not only enforce the Militia Act, but to prevent physically fit men from leaving Canada.

In addition they want every fit Canadian who has gone to the United States since the outbreak of the war immediately sent back home and enrolled for military service.

Failing this, they would debar such from ever accepting the country as undesirable citizens.

SENTENCED TO DEATH; BROUGHT TO THE PEN

Tena Maloney Will Spend 15 Years There and Dora Landry 3

KINGSTON, March 14—Chief Keeper Abbott, with a matron of the Sydenham prison, arrived in the city on Tuesday morning with two women for the Portsmouth penitentiary. Both women were sentenced at Winnipeg.

One of the women, Tena Maloney, was sentenced to be hanged, for murder and her execution was set for Feb. 22nd, last, but the sentence was commuted to fifteen years in penitentiary.

The other woman, Dora Landry, was sentenced to three years for throwing Vitrol in the face of a man.

Ambassador Gerard Tells Lansing of Germans' Evident Intentions

WASHINGTON, March 15—Special —Former Ambassador Gerard, fresh from Berlin, has reported to the State Department that when he left there was every evidence that Germany fully intended carrying out her ruthless submarine campaign, regardless of the prospects of war with the United States, and that talk of peace had been abandoned.

GERARD'S LIPS SEALED

Will Make No Statement Until Official Permission Is Given

WASHINGTON, March 14.—Former Ambassador Gerard arrived here today and was met at the railway station by the President's secretary, Mr. Tumulty, and other officials. Any plans he may have had for making a statement were changed when the State Department arranged for him to see but might be result of incidents in the Chamber of Deputies.

PUSH LINES NEAR ENEMY

Special To The Intelligencer.

LONDON, March 15—The British lines southwest of Bapaume on the Amiens-Albert road has been advanced one thousand yards over a front of thirty-five yards, as a result of fighting south of Saniki today. The British trenches are thus brought in some places to within two hundred yards of Bulgarian and German positions. The movement was carried out at night without opposition. The new line shortens the British front by necessitating the salient on Horseshoe Hill, which has always been an exposed position. It is also to strengthen the British defences in addition of an extra line of trenches. Furthermore it facilitates additional raids upon hostile positions in this sector by reducing the Man Land to limits of a short sprint.

Saved Lives Of Two Ladies

Walter Rubidge of Toronto Is to Get Carnegie Medal For Bravery

TORONTO, March 14—Walter Rubidge of 44 Springhurst avenue, who four years ago rescued two young ladies, Misses Mable and Violet Bell, 31 Jamieson avenue, from drowning in Coatsworth Cut, is to be awarded the Carnegie Trust Medal in recognition of his bravery on that occasion. The representatives of the Carnegie Trust was in Toronto yesterday making enquiries regarding the incident. The young ladies were bathing near Coatsworth's Cut when they found themselves in danger.

Wm. Thompson, who was one of the life party here drowned.

The young man's father, Pte. Fred Rubidge, is a returned soldier, and a brother, Fred H. Rubidge, is at the front with a local unit.

MARRIES TO SAVE ESTATE

Husband Never to See Heiress Again

CHICAGO, March 14.—According to a story told by Dr. Gilbert H. Willis of Bombay, India, Miss Phillippa Hartley of New York, was married yesterday to John Colfax, a Chicagoan, whom she never before had met, in order to insure to him the estate of Carleton Hannan of Bombay, who is said to be worth several million dollars. Dr. Willis said he induced Miss Hartley and accept a specified amount with the understanding that he would never again see his wife.

A marriage license issued to the couple gave the bride's age as 25 and the bridegroom's as 28. Dr. Willis said the marriage ceremony was performed by a minister whose name he refused to divulge. He also refused to give the address of the bridegroom.

Dr. Willis said that Hannan had requested that his niece, Miss Hartley, marry before his death or within three months thereafter, in order to satisfy a trust agreement which he drew up in order to make sure that the bulk of his estate should go to Miss Hartley without danger of a legal contest by other relatives. A trust agreement, in accordance with arrangements, provided for record in Chicago yesterday.

LOSSES BY SUBMARINE WARFARE NOT OF AN ASTONISHING NATURE

Special to The Intelligencer.

LONDON, March 15.—From February 1st to March 10th, according to Board of Trade figures the number of British ships of over sixteen hundred tons sunk was approximately 78, leaving 3658 of the large British ships available for overseas trade. This too takes no account of replacement, and it should be remembered that the amount of tonnage is being launched every month. During this period, British ships came and went freely; there was no blockade and the Germans will probably again have the equalled good opportunity for carrying out their destructive plans hereafter.

Firstly, because the British naval authorities were old slow tramps. Secondly, because the British naval authorities have been able, to make a successful study of the latest German submarine campaign and methods. Thirdly, because the arming of merchant ships is proceeding apace. Fourthly, anti-submarine devices are being daily perfected, and lastly, because a good number of trained submarine crews, including some of the most daring and skilful commanders, are being lost and cannot easily be replaced. British losses are now in a rapidly diminishing ratio, and the effect on imports for February, when the submarine campaign was at its height has been small.

GERMANS FROM ROUMANIA ARE NOW FIGHTING IN CHAMPAGNE

PARIS, March 15 Special—The French troops have made further progress in the region of Maisons de Champagne.

The Crown Prince stands a clear loser from his attempt at Maisons de Champagne, and all his gains have been wiped out, and the French line now are nearer Ripont than before he tried to break through and cut the railway from Rheims and Ste. Menehould.

A number of German officers captured in Champagne were wearing insignia on their uniforms, indicating that they had been serving with Turkish contingents, and questioning revealed the fact that they had been recalled to the western front recently since the allies' progress tightened. Many prisoners taken assert that they had just been transferred from the Roumanian front and expressed the wish that they still faced the bitter cold steel there instead of the terrific French artillery fire.

CHINA TAKES THE PLUNGE

Takes Possession of Six German Ships in Shanghai Harbour

WASHINGTON, March. 14—China has severed diplomatic relations with Germany, taken possession of all German merchant ships in Shanghai, about six in number, placed their crews on shore under guard, and placed armed guards on the vessels. Advices to the Navy Department today from the senior officers in Chinese waters gave no further details.

Successful Sunday School Conference

Splendid Address Delivered by Rev. Dr. C. T. Scott, of Bridge Street Church

The seventh annual conference of the Belleville Sunday School Association was held yesterday afternoon and evening in Bridge Street Church. The three sessions were helpful and inspiring throughout. Mr. A. E. Bailey, President, presided at all the sessions in an able manner and introduced the various speakers. Rev. A. MJ Hibbly conducted devotional exercises at the afternoon session and helpful addresses were given on Sunday school work and methods by Rev. E. W. Halpenny and Miss B. Laise, of Toronto, who are specialists in Sunday School work. A most interesting feature of the afternoon was the parallel sessions which took the form of conferences with the secondary and adult class leaders and the elementary department leaders. There were conducted respectively by Mr. Halpenny and Miss Laise. Over 6,45 a teachers' and officers' tea was served in the spacious Bridge Street school. The following Sunday schools contributing victuals and assistance, under the capable leadership of Mrs. Gardner, Departmental reports were given at the table: Mr. Wills was absent Mr. Frederick, also an address by Mr. Halpenny. Miss A. R. Hitchon, the indefatigable secretary-treasurer, presented her annual report, showing 18 schools enrolled, and increased attendance offerings and interests for the year. She also spoke of the encouraging spiritual interest on the part of all Sunday school workers. This report was heartily adopted. The ladies were heartily thanked for their bountiful supper, on motion of Mr. P. C. MacLaurin, seconded by Mr. John Elliott. On motion of Mr. D. V. Sinclair, the Sunday school Association of Eastern Ontario was invited to Belleville for 1918. This was seconded by Mr. Geo. Woodley, and heartily carried. The evening session was held in the beautiful church auditorium, and was replete with profit and interest to every congregate and attendant. The Nominating Committee reported through Mr. P. C. MacLaurin, the following officers were unanimously elected, for the ensuing year: President, Mr. D. V. Sinclair; 1st Vice-President, Mr. P. C. MacLaurin, Mr. F. A. Deacon, Mr. George Woodley; Recording Secretary, Miss A. Lamberton; Corres. Secty., and Treasurer, Miss A. R. Hitchon. Rev Dr. Baker conducted devotional exercises, and Rev. E. W. Halpenny delivered an interesting address on "The Art of Attention," which was especially helpful to Sunday School teachers. The closing address was given by Rev. Dr. C. T. Scott on "Sunday School Evangelism," and was one of the most eloquent and forceful appeals ever delivered on Sunday School work in this city. Dr. Scott appealed for the co-operation of all the adults in child-welfare and spiritual warfare, and showed the lifelong results which accrue to proper training in the scriptures, reverent religion, and indefinite consecration of the soul to God. He pleaded for a revival of essentials in teaching and for the goal and aim of all Sunday School work to be, The children for Christ!

WAR COSTS MILLION A DAY

Canada's total revenue for the fiscal year ending March 31st, is estimated at $225,000,000. Customs and miscellaneous revenue, including the business tax, were the principal sources of revenue. Expenditures on current account in the eleven months were $113,161,357, on capital $238,597,000. War outlays in the eleven months were $217,590,670. This is almost double the war expenditure of 1916. It is now about $1,000,000 a day.

The whole net debt is now $765,- 661,892, which is an increase of nineteen millions in the year.

The fiscal year ends this month, and a $50,000,000 increase is in prospect. For the eleven months the revenue aggregated $205,217,039, as against $154,- 348,509, for the corresponding period. February revenue alone was $17,513,- 473.

MANITOBA'S MINES.

Province Possesses Much Mineral Wealth to Be Develop 1.

Manitoba is known to the outside world only as a grain producer, but it has much mineral wealth, which means potential industrial importance if the vast lignite bed of the Canadian West can be commercially exploited.

"There is no doubt that Manitoba is getting into the mining field," says Prof. R. C. Wallace, of the Department of Geology of the University of Manitoba, "but we cannot tell much about it in figures yet."

Prof. Wallace investigated Manitoba's mineral resources for the Provincial Public Utilities Commission.

Discussing the result of this investigation Prof. Wallace said:

"Our actual production thus far is almost entirely in non-metallic minerals, aggregating $2,500,000 to $3,000,000 a year. Clay products come first, then gypsum. We have enough gypsum to supply the Canadian West for one hundred years. There is a finishing product for building—a building that has been paralyzed by the war. The gypsum lands are all around Gypsumville in north-west Manitoba, owned by private capital.

"As for metals, I believe that Northern Manitoba has ore deposits some such surprises as Northern Ontario did. The topography and geology are similar in the two districts. There is not much reason to assume the richness of resources in the two other Prairie Provinces, except coal, in which they abound.

"Only two-fifths of Manitoba is agricultural land. The other three-fifths has to depend on minerals, timber, and fisheries. Manitoba's north country, which has the minerals, is new. During the last eleven months ore deposits of mixed sulphide have been discovered on the shores of the Bay, on the Hudson Bay Railway, and an American company has begun to export ore from the Tonopah Co. of Nevada, which is shipping some very high-grade ore to the smelter at Trail, B.C.

"These ores contain copper, lead, and zinc, with values in gold and silver, which are smelted into bullion. The Tonopah Co. ships the ore. In the case of the big area the copper values are low, but the gold values reasonably high.

"The natural resources of the Prairie Provinces remain in the hands of the Dominion, including the Hudson Bay Railway, which was built by the Canadian Pacific and what the Dominion Co. retained.

"The fuel question is and will be the chief difficulty for Winnipeg and our West. This side of Eastern Saskatchewan, which has a fairly large field of lignite. Manitoba has some, too, but it is very low grade. Manitoba's lignite are estimated at only 160,000,000 tons, whereas Saskatchewan's much greater area than Saskatchewan, or about 1% per cent. of the coal supply of the world, and has been producing 6,000,000 to 8,000,000 tons a year.

"Winnipeg and its near territory get their coal from Pennsylvania, Ohio, etc. We are interested in briquetting our soft coals, so that they can be carried economically. We have so much cheap electrical power that we can extensively substitute it for coal and also utilize peat. Some our industrial future will be assured.

"Our power is very cheap—three cents per kilowatt hour for domestic use and about one-half as much for industrial use. Water powers are located very conveniently for this purpose.

Prof. Wallace believes that Alberta has a large amount of oil, although the Calgary oil boom was a "fake," which cost Canadians dearly.

...ts in line with the policy of the Art Gallery to inaugurate a series of loan exhibitions to reputable art societies. Besides Canada having proper facilities for their exhibition could borrow from twenty to thirty pictures a year with the option of renewal or exchange at the end of a year.

Writing on the work of the Gallery, Mr. Eric Brown, director, says: "It may perhaps not be yet generally known that the National Gallery presents an annual travelling scholarship of one thousand dollars ($1,000), awarded by the Council of the Royal Canadian Academy at their annual exhibition, to the most promising young artist of the year. The scholarship was founded in November last for the third year in succession, although owing to the war the successful artists have not made use of it, as its conditions necessitate residence in the art centres of Europe which are closed owing to the war.

"There is developing in Canada a school of sincere landscape painting entirely original and indigenous and quite unconscious on this continent. With proper appreciation and encouragement it should become one of the most notable of the country's assets, for there is no surer sign of the spiritual growth of a nation than the condition of its art."

PROHIBITION IN MANITOBA.

Interesting Figures After Being Dry Seven Months.

Although Manitoba has been "dry" only since June 1, drunkenness in the province decreased 47 per cent. as compared with 1915, according to the official report from the police court records. The arrests during 1916 closed on December 30, and the total and prohibition arrests show that, owing to rigid temperance laws and rigid enforcement, there was a huge decrease in crime. There were 1,423 convictions in 1916, and in Manitoba in 1916,as against 927 for 1915.

There are five judicial districts in the province. The following are details. Brandon—Two terms of the Jail secured in each district for 1916 and 1915:

	1905.	1906.
Winnipeg	1,000	471
Brandon	206	32
Minnedosa	32	31
Portage la Prairie ..	31	15
Morden	15	4

There is a criminals in the Portage la Prairie jail at present. Of these 16 come from far northern Manitoba, and half come from above the northern or Dauphin judicial district. Only 3 men from the county of Portage section. Another interesting fact is connected with the report is that during 1915, in Carberry, there were 24 summonses for various crimes. Since the Temperance Act came into force in Manitoba, there have been 3.

In 1915 and up to the time that prohibition shut out the sale in the province, there were 3,176 drunk or incapable convictions in Winnipeg, in the eastern judicial district. Since then the number has been cut in the Brandon district, for the same period, the figures are 423 and 46; in Portage, 124 and 25, and in St. Boniface, 125 and 6, or totals for the whole province of 3,176 and 494. There was only one conviction for drunkenness in St. Boniface during the past four months.

The Brandon police have convicted for selling liquor in the province since June 1, 1916, as far as the records of the provincial law enforcement department show. Of these 107 pleaded guilty and the city police in Winnipeg.

Prohibition has reduced drunkenness in Manitoba more than 56 per cent., and half of the cases that Macdonald Act has been in operation, according to a statement by J. M. McLean, chief inspector of the provincial liquor license department.

"There has been a great attention on official figures for Brandon during the first seven months that prohibition law has been in force. Since June 1 there have been 107 cases of drunkenness in the second city of the province, and compared with 243 cases from January 1 to June 1, 1916.

"These figures are typical of the entire province," said Mr. MacLean.

"The Macdonald Act has had a remarkable effect on sobriety in Manitoba," said Mr. MacLean. "A year ago drunkenness was a common thing, day it is exceptional, at least the public is not aware of it."

The biggest effect of the Macdonald Act, in the opinion of Mr. MacLean, has been in enforcing the

"That was the purpose of the law. If absolutely prohibition had been wanted, such a law would have been passed. The greatest menace of liquor to the public has been removed, and the general moral tone of the province has been uplifted."

Can Replace Picture.

Senator Beaubien is to give out a piece of news that will be very welcome to Canadians who prize our national relics. One of the notable losses sustained by Canada in the burning of the Parliament Buildings was the destruction of the picture of Gen. Brock's surrender to Detroit, which hung in the Railway Committee Room. The canvas was one of the pictures which had finally brought to Canada by the federation pact; each of the persons was represented by a true portrait. The canvas was destroyed in the fire, but the artist who painted the picture, Mr. Harris, made a drawing from which he painted the group. In the drawings, as in the picture, each of the fathers of Confederation is represented by a true portrait. The artist is too far advanced in years to reproduce the group, and it has not been thought possible to have it done. The loss from the drawings by another hand; many but those who know them say the original drawings are now the property of Canada.

Chalk Cheese.

Corner or chalk cheese is a short-stop school game and is played much like Tom Tiddler's Ground. There is a base, for or wolf, or perhaps two or three, and about six city blocks is chosen and well defined. Everybody should be on understanding with regard to boundaries. The base or bases is furnished a lot of chalk, and the game is on. It starts at a signal, goes where he pleases and does what he likes, whether it be horn or at the end of one minute begins chalking easily visible marks on fences, walls, or sidewalks, usually single from a nearly straight course. He puts a mark every corner that he turns; if he goes over a fence he chalks the side; if through an old building he chalks every corner that he turns at each bend and turn. As many boys as the chalk cheese can get together, and it means a good, hard job to catch the hares.

Separate Skirt Colors.

The costumers have tried hard this year to get away from the occasional stereotyped separate skirts. Judging from the shops the eastern nowadays, they have been somewhat successful. The separate skirts this season are marked more of the shades of beautiful dreams than of actual necessities. Georgette in silvers, plaited and striped soft silks and ribbed in both are the popular materials. The plaited skirts are pleated, not stitched, but gathered to let in the fashionable fullness. Some of them are even smocked.

The separate skirts this year come in all possible shades and colors and in every fanciful combination that the mind of man could devise. There are plum colored skirts and all shades of blue, from navy to the turquoise, browns, greens, corals, orchids, wines and grays and every conceivable plaid and stripe that can be evolved from combinations of these colors. Fashion runs riot in skirt hues this season.

GETTING AFTER CHILBLAINS.

Some Hints About Remedies For These Winter Pests.

Here are a number of cures for frosted feet or chilblains. Some are very simple.

Soak the feet in water in which potatoes with their jackets on have been boiled.

Soak the feet in strong brine.

Soak the feet in bran water containing three teaspoonfuls of muriate of ammonia.

Rubbing the parts briskly, but gently, with oil of turpentine.

Keep the frosted parts moist with the following: White castile soap, one dram; tincture of cantharides, two ounces.

Take equal parts of tincture of iodine and solution of ammonia and paint the bitten parts morning and evening.

Another preparation that is good is the following: One ounce of spirits of wine, ten drops of tincture of arnica. Rub well into the frozen parts.

Here is an ointment that is recommended: Pure carbolic acid, thirty drops; sugar of lead, twenty grains; tincture of iodine, thirty drops; simple ointment, two ounces. Apply twice a day. This is best prepared by your druggist.

A very simple one is to apply to the frosted parts compound tincture of benzoin.

One ounce ael ammoniac dissolved in one cup of vinegar. Bathe with soft cloth or gauze. It gives immediate relief.

Citrou ointment, one ounce; oil of turpentine, two drams; citric oil, four drams. Mix and apply to parts three times a day.

* LETTERS FROM OVERSEAS *

FROM CORPORAL PRESTT
France, Feb. 20th, 1917.

Dear Mother:—

Just a few lines to let you know that I received your letter and the cards too. We are having fine weather here now, although it rained Christmas eve all right, but have had so much to think about at once, that it is very easy to forget a thing.

Is father going up to Vancouver or is he going to stay at Trenton. I did get the box all right last box you sent, maybe it went down with one of the mail boats that got sunk. I think the cards that the girls sent are just fine. It is too bad about John Dafoe, what was the matter with him?

How are all the people around there? Well, I hope. I could like to see Bill Lucas if he gets here all right and I also hope that the next letter I get from you, you will be able to say that your cold is better.

I think I will get my picture while I am here. There are four of us going to have them taken together.

Now when you send another box send anything that is good to eat, I will be glad to get anything. We are having a pretty good time where we are now, we don't have much to do here.

Well I can't think of any more to tell you, so I will have to close. I send my love to all hoping to hear from you soon.

From your loving son,

MERLE.

FROM PERCY BABCOCK

Thursday, February, 8th, 1917.

Dear Auntie:—

Just a few lines hoping you are all well, as I leave me about the same. Well, I have had my photo taken, and now you would like one so I am sending you one. I have not had any mail from Canada since I left, only two from my girl, I would like to have your address, so I could find him.

I wrote to the C.M.R.'s but they don't know anything about him. I don't even know Charlie's address, was an awful way to be when you don't know where your relations are.

I have been receiving letters from Alec. Beaton, and I sent him a snap shot of John and Charlie. He was more than pleased to get them. I don't think he will go to the trenches any more. I think he has done his bit.

Well, how is uncle Jim, I hope he is getting on well, I suppose old Belleville is the same as ever.I would sure like to see it. I remember that trip Charlie and I took about a year ago now when we went to Stockdale and Frankford. I would like to see those people again.

I am still at the same address, Pte. Percy Babcock, 626, 919, 2nd Battalion, Canadians, attached to No.4. C. C. S., B. E. F. France.

I heard that George was living at Kingston, I wonder what his notion was of moving down there, thinks Belleville is not good enough.

It has been very cold here this last week, much like the weather we had in Canada. I wish it would soon get warmer for a soldier in France has enough to put up with without being bothered with cold weather.

Well, auntie it is awful hard to write letters here, we can't say what we would like to but we hope that next year at this time the war will be over so we can come home and enjoy life once more.

When the war is over I think I will get married, then I suppose you will be after me with the mail sax. I suppose Effie is going to school every day. Now don't forget to send me those photos in your next letter for I would like to see him, it always cheers a fellow up when he sees a fellow's face from home so a relative.

Now I guess I will close and give my best wishes to all the people and keep the lines from burning until we get back, and we will try to have a good time. Hoping to hear from you soon. I remain your loving nephew,

PERCY BABCOCK.

FIFTY-TWO YEARS AN INTELLIGENCER SUBSCRIBER
Greenridge, March 9, 1917.

Dear Sir:—

I received your notice of arrears by last mail. I am enclosing one dollar for my fifty-second annual subscription to the Weekly Intelligencer we must have it to keep tab on the Old Boys and Girls of good Old Hastings Co., especially the old town of Belleville, whose street I was tramping fifty-one years ago in military uniform, and how when I come to think of it, it is exactly fifty-one years ago today that the old Fifteenth Battalion was ordered out, and I was one of the guards, who with John Belnap, Gilbert Taft, Jas. McGown, Jas. Keith, Wm. Bishop, Sergeant Cowey, kept guard at the old church on Pinnacle street that was then used as barracks. There were guards at the banks and the Court House and County Buildings This winter I am drilling in Winnipeg with the Winnipeg Reserve Militia composed chiefly of army and navy veterans in Canada abd caring for our returned boys, who have been overseas and done their bit, and believe me there is plenty for all to do before this war is ended. I see by the Intelligencer that Old Town is receiving their share of boys who have been over to France and done their bit as well as the worst. We think here, that if Quebec would do their share with Ontario and the western Provinces, there would be no occasion for conscription, which I am afraid will have to be enforced before this war is ended. I remain,

Yours truly,
JOHN R. POST.

* FIRST ARREST MADE UNDER ACT BANNING ENEMY NEWSPAPER *

The first arrest under the new act prohibiting the issuance of pro-German newspapers was made last Tuesday night when Michael Lippa, Austrian weekly newspaper, printed in Chicago, called The Dalemik Dudowy, through the mails for some time past. The penalty for this misdemeanor is $5,000 and five years' jail. Bail was fixed at $1,000, or alternative of six months in jail. The arrest was made through information received from the Dominion postal authorities at Ottawa. The paper is a socialist organ.

A Strange Revelation

By ELINOR MARSH

When John Dowling retired from the police, at a dinner given him he told the following story:

"Most of you will remember the Charnley murder case. After a month had passed and we had given out every day or two that we were on the track of the murderer and would get him using the public began to lose confidence in us, and there came out of scathing remarks about the police. An election for city officers was coming on, and the chief told me one day to drop everything else and work on the Charnley case, intimating that the administration's control depended on my apprehending the murderer.

"I did a hard lot of thinking on the problem. Indeed, I began to fear that if I kept on I would run into insanity mazola. I walked the floor nights trying to get the facts that together to construct a theory of the murder. So my wife put me in a room by myself where I could prowl without having her or the children.

"One night after the usual hard racket I fell into a slumber. I don't know how long I slept, but I think it was about an hour. Then I woke up and started at seeing a man standing by my bed.

"'Come with me,' he said, 'and I'll put you on to an explanation of the Charnley murder.'

"I jumped out of bed, hustled on my clothes, strapped on my revolver—for despite my theory of the murder the position he promised I did not forget that I was a police officer—and followed my being admitted, and I was somewhat suspicious of him—and followed him downstairs. A hack was in waiting and standing at the door. We climbed into the vehicle, he and I, whipped up the horse, and off we went.

"I was so impatient and curious to know what was coming that I tried to pump it out of him, but his mouth was shut as tight as oyster, and never a word did he speak from the time we started till we pulled up in front of the house in which Charnley's body had been found the morning after the murder. I knew it was that house, though I didn't know any one of the family of the murdered man. It had been shut up since the tragedy, but now there were lights in every part.

"My companion alighted, led me to the door and knocked. I found door for me, beside me enter. What became of him since then I don't know. I didn't see him again, unless one of the persons about whom I am going to tell you was he.

"Hearing voices mingled with subdued speaking, I ran up and stood in an opening in the second floor, looking into a bedroom through an open door. On a couch lay the figure of a man, and a number of persons were standing about him so that I could not see his face. A young woman was on her knees beside the couch, hysterically clinging to the body, while another woman was trying to draw her away. A man was standing apart, wringing his hands. I stepped into the room, and the moment I did so my heart collapsed. The woman trying to draw the girl away from the body turned and, seeing me, uttered a shriek. Then she dropped on her knees before me, and between her sobs said:

"'Don't take him! He made a terrible mistake. Oh, why didn't I confide in him? Let me explain, and when you know how we suffer at what has occurred, I am sure you will not add to our misfortune. This is my intimate friend'—pointing to the girl beside the body. 'She was my particular confidante and friend, and her mother—she had no father—she lived in the same city as himself, to ask for her hand. He came to me before he did first—he made the call. The house was a stone front, and a dignified old lady opened the door.

"'I am Mrs. Mansfield,' she said.

"'I am Mrs. Stetson,' I replied.

"'Mrs. Mansfield, I have been spending a month in the country, where I met your daughter Mabel.'

At this the lady became all attention.

"'I found her a charming girl,' continued Barradale—'indeed, so charming that I fell in love with her.'

"'Then you are Mr. Barradale?' asked the lady sharply.

"I was.

"Mrs. Stetson assured me that her summer boarders had all returned to the city, and I went back with her.

Barradale was about to proceed with his explanation when the young woman broke in, taking partly to herself and partly to him:

"'Now that I do with her? She's incorrigible. She got all she knew at the high school, then went to Europe and packed her off to college to get her away from them. She had barely settled down—she was engaged to him—when the rules. I managed to get in by the explosion exchanged to engineering and rusticated her under the care of Mrs. Stetson. Mrs. Stetson has written me that Mabel has been getting letters from her lovers despite the fact that Mrs. Stetson has observed, to intercept them. Did Mabel send you to ask for her?'

"She did."

"'You are the seventh person she has sent to me to ask for her. It is the 31st month. If I had known that a young man had gone to the same house to see her every day for a month I would warned him. Mrs. Stetson is very much to blame.'

"'No harm done, I assure you, Mrs. Mansfield,' replied Barradale, quite warmly unruffled. 'I'm just on the eve to cut my wisdom teeth. The affair will wash off with a sponge.'

"'I wish you'd take her off my hands,' said the lady fearfully. 'The others have been bad enough, but this one might be able to control her.'

"Thank you very much. I'll start at once but I don't feel like relieving you, but when an imp is once inoculated by cupid's arrow it's difficult to get the poison out of his system. Mean while I'll play her every night with her. I'll let her severely alone for a while.'

"It so happened that Miss Mansfield had played the piano for me while she is now Mrs. Barradale.

* MISS MANSFIELD *

By DONALD CHAMBERLIN

Barradale was not able to get a vacation till October. On the 10th he went to a house a mile distant from the village, a house where they took summer boarders. He had never seen there was a girl of nineteen. Who she was he did not enquire. She was not a member of the family. She did not reside there regularly. She spent much of the time in Belleville, and she did there was not made known to Barradale.

One morning when Barradale started out for his accustomed morning walk Mrs. Mansfield, Mrs. Stetson, asked him if he happened to go by the postoffice during the walk, adding that it would to give any letters that might come to her and no one else. Barradale called for the mail and noticed that it consisted of two letters, both for Miss Mabel Mansfield. They were addressed in a masculine handwriting. Miss Mansfield was the young lady boarder. Barradale delivered the letters to Mrs. Stetson and thought no more about the matter.

Having nothing else to do, Barradale took long walks, stopping for long chats with the farmers, for during the summer got the better of the coming autumn, and it was warm enough to sit still. On several occasions he passed the postoffice and always asked for the mail. Two more letters were given for Miss Mansfield, sometimes addressed in a woman's, sometimes in a man's handwriting. Barradale's vacation weather permitting, took a walk in the afternoon. One afternoon, when Barradale had the mail in his pocket, he met her. Taking out the letters, he selected one for her, gave it to her and passed on. When he handed the other letters to Mrs. Stetson he mentioned that he had given one to Miss Mansfield. Mrs. Stetson frowned, but said nothing. The next day she told him that he must not meddle himself

EASY WAY TO CLEAN SILVER

This May Help You to Save Your Sterling Grease.

A simple way to clean badly discolored silver is to put a quarter of a pound of baking soda in a deep pan, lay the silver in this on the stove and let it come to a boil. When at boiling heat dip in the water and rub each piece hard with each cut quickly. Wash in scalding water and dry with soft, clean cloth. This method takes about one-quarter of the time consumed by polishing.

Silver should be put away in boxes brightest if they are left for several hours in strong soda water. Silver that is frequently washed with ammonia water will need cleaning less often.

Silver tarnishes from the gases in the atmosphere, and from eggs, which are usually served with silver. Keeping the perfectly good condition if, after washing and drying them thoroughly, a lump of sugar is placed inside. The sugar absorbs the dampness and keeps the tongue sweet and fresh.

Silverware should always be kept by itself and wrapped in tissue paper, with plenty of room.

Silver dress trimmings may be cleaned by rubbing with magnesia and leaving for two hours.

A WASTE OF WISDOM.

During the recent session of Parliament, Hon. Frank Oliver and other Opposition speakers raised many loud and indignant objections to the National Service scheme. The Government was accused of introducing a subtle partisan enterprise disguised as a patriotic endeavor. The whole National Service idea, and particularly the cards, to be signed by individuals, was utterly and roundly condemned.

Nevertheless, the Government was not convinced of the absurdity of the National Service plan. Neither, it develops, was Premier Lloyd George and his cabinet, who, no doubt, improve themselves regularly by reading the speeches of Canadian Liberal leaders.

At a great meeting in London held on Tuesday, February 6, Premier Lloyd George launched a National Service scheme, under the leadership of Mr. Neville Chamberlain as Director-General. Except in the matter of wages and incidental provisions, it is exactly modelled upon the Canadian National Service scheme, the promises of remuneration being naturally less attractive than are those offered by the Canadian Government. The same cards are provided and the same method of securing an estimate of available workers. The British Government scheme is open to the whole weight of objection raised by Opposition critics to the Canadian Government's plan.

A favorite cry raised against Sir Robert Borden by partisan detractors is that he is too slow. They demand "leadership." Here is an interesting case in which the country got it, and events have made possible the holding up of Opposition criticism to ridicule.

MR. GERARD'S OPINION.

(Ottawa Journal-Press)

The other day in these columns extracts were given from the life of the late John Hay to show what a very poor opinion the great American Secretary of State had of the men in control of German affairs. He located the "yellow streak" running through them all and deplored the apparently unsuspicious attitude toward them assumed by the British diplomats. Now Mr. Gerard, who has had unusual opportunities for studying the German official mind, comes along to more than confirm all that Mr. Hay said. The Ambassador has not yet spoken directly to the American people, and will not until he has made his report to the President; but it may be taken for granted that the American newspaper correspondents who were resident in Berlin and who were included in Mr. Gerard's party in the return trip across the Atlantic, correctly interpret the Ambassador's views. Here is O. K. Davis, of the New York Times, for instance, writing as follows:—

"It is betraying no trust to say that Mr. Gerard places about the smallest possible confidence in the good faith of Germany or German officials, that he regards the condition of Germany as desperate, especially where the supply of food and general economic conditions, including finance, are concerned, that he knows the frame of mind of [illegible] quite in keeping with their recognition of the desperate situation of their responsible German officials to be country. It was his clear recognition of these facts which has added so greatly to Gerard's anxiety during the entire journey from Berlin to Havana. Mr. Gerard's personal contact with German officials and with the general situation in Germany has forced upon him a frame of mind in which no imputation of German duplicity or base motive produces any shock or inspires any impulse of repellent disbelief. Per contra, his experience has superinduced a disposition to give credence to such suggestions and reports, and, especially in cases which have tangible support to give them more active acceptance.

So little confidence had Mr. Gerard in German honesty, so convinced was he that the German mind would excuse any means no matter how low to achieve a selfish end, that rather than risk being robbed of his important papers during his trip he personally burned them before starting.

When the allies spurned the ridiculous offer of peace made by Germany they knew, what the United States is apparently only now finding out, how impossible would be any "peace without victory."

TORTURED AND DISFIGURED

by skin trouble was the lot of Mr. M. Butler, of 67 Congress Street, Bridgeport, Conn. He writes:—

"For fifteen years I have used Zam-Buk for various ailments—always with the same satisfactory results. My most recent cure was that of 'Barber's Rash.' This rash appeared on my face, and spread quickly until my face was entirely covered with sores.

"Having used Zam-Buk with such success on previous occasions, I commenced applying it to my face. This great herbal healer soon ended the irritation. The inflammation was drawn out, and the sores began to disappear. I persevered with Zam-Buk, and my face is once again quite clear and smooth."

Zam-Buk is the cure for eczema, ringworm, scalp sores, ulcers, blood-poisoning, bad legs, and piles; and a safe, quick healer for cuts, scalds, burns, and all skin injuries. All druggists and stores, or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto. 50c. box.

COST OF LIVING IN CANADA.

Figures compiled by the Department of Labor show that Canada is faring better than most nations in the matter of the cost of living. Since the war begain the price of food in the Dominion has gone up about 75%. In Britain, however, prices have risen about 87 per cent; in Germany about 250 per cent; in Austria 300 per cent; in Norway, Denmark and Sweden about 200 per cent; in the United States about 90 per cent.

According to figures just issued by the United States Labor Bureau, the cost of table necessities in the Republic to the south has increased nearly 50 per cent within the past six months, which advance is considerably greater than in Canada. Foodstuffs such as meats, potatoes and other vegetables of common use are higher in price in most American cities today than in either Montreal, Winnipeg or Toronto. The advance in potatoes alone in New York City has been nearly 300 per cent. since the beginning of the year. Lack of production and huge shipments to beligerent countries are given as the causes.

The moral of the situation seems to be, that talk of increased prices being due to illegal combinations for exploitation of the public is not soundly based. The truth appears to be that the present extra-normal conditions are world-wide in their scope and influence, and are the inevitable outcome of tens of millions of people being taken from the work of production and engaged in work of destruction. Production and still more production would seem to be the only solution of the situation. The Government should be backed to the limit in its campaign to that end.

Current Comment

Flight-Lieut. E. Sidney Duggan, Toronto, saved from the Laconia, has been received by King George, with a number of overseas officers. His Majesty made interested inquiries about Duggan's experience.

Rev. Ernest G. Guthrie, of Boston, pastor of Union Congregational Church, has announced that he had resigned and would sail for France next month to join an American ambulance corps.

Sir Ernest Shackleton, the explorer, who is now at Sydney, Australia, says he is going into active war service. He declares that this is the only course for any man who is free and able to fight.

In most munition factories in Britain, especially those making the smaller shells for the field artillery, the proportion of women employed is 80 per cent. Women are becoming as stout wielders of the industrial arm as are the men workers.

India will put a 4 per cent. duty on cotton goods, and Lancashire millmen say it means the closing of their mills. The loss will be enormous, but India is no longer run by free traders. It is raising a $500,000,000 war loan, and must provide for the interest.

Monford Wilson, the well-known drover and reeve of Hope Township, bought from Henry Taylor, a farmer living at Quay's Crossing, a hog weighing 800 pounds, for which he paid $100. It is a sow of the Yorkshire breed and is the largest seen by Mr. Wilson in thirty years' experience.

Special despatches received in London from Holland contain current reports of German preparations for an expected great offensive on the western front. The latest rumor, which is attributed to Belgian sources, is that the Germans intend to try again to break through on the Yser, with Calais as their objective.

Sir Sam Hughes was a visitor at the Parliament Buildings, Toronto, and refused to be interviewed, and the advice he gave to U. S. General Leonard Wood is still among the dark secrets of history. Sir Sam is on his way to London where he addresses a gathering of brother Orangemen. Sir Sam is right, there has been too much interviewing.

Educated Indian women in Toronto are much stirred up over the proposal to give Canada's Indian soldiers a vote. For while there has been an agitation for some years to enfranchise the Indian men now that Ontario women have been assured of the vote, educated Indian women are asking: "Is there any chance for us?" Why not? Are they not better entitled to a vote than the ignorant uneducated, who now have the right to vote?

HOLDING SCHOOL FAIRS.

The Movement Has Been Growing Steadily in the West.

Closely connected with the subject of School Gardens is the subject of school fairs. In fact the latter seems to be the natural corollary of the former, for if there is to be development in the one, there must be the means of comparison and the stimulus of competition which the other seems best fitted to supply. Thus it has proved in several provinces of Western Canada, and the result of this sequence has been found to be helpful not only to agriculture, but by its reflex action to education generally. A backward glance at the close of the year by the various provincial authorities has confirmed them in their determination to foster not only the school garden, but the school fair in the coming summer.

What is being done in those directions in Saskatchewan, for instance, as shown by the Public Service Bulletin for January, gives a good idea of the general movement throughout the West. Therein it is stated that probably no movement in recent years has been so revolutionary in its result as the school garden. "Perhaps by reason of the chase for the almighty dollar or possibly by reason of the lack of opportunity, the boy and girl in Saskatchewan have not in the past few years been given the attention which might reasonably have been expected. The year 1916, however, will be looked back upon as the year in which the boy and girl came into their own. The school fair has demonstrated beyond all doubt its value and the movement is growing at a rapid rate."

The Provincial Department of Education has undertaken the general direction of the movement, and during the past year a definite attempt was made to guide the work already begun as well as to organize new centres of activity. By arrangement with the Provincial Department of Agriculture a supply of seeds for school gardens was obtained through which schools were able to purchase their requirements. No material was supplied free of charge, but over 250 schools took advantage of this offer. For purposes of administration the province is divided into two sections, north and south. A simple form of organization, known as the Rural Education Association, was formed in many districts, consisting of the teachers and representatives from each school and all persons interested in the work.

The typical school fair has a very wide range of specialties. In one described, seven different classes were organized:—Vegetables, flowers, grains, household science, manual training, ordinary school work and contest and club work. In the household science class were exhibitions of bread and biscuit-making, preserving and canning, butter-making, and plain sewing, mending, darning, and hemming; while in the manual training section were included such articles as milking stools and chicken crates. No school fair was complete without the inclusion of sports and games.

A good idea of the interest taken in school fairs in the west may be obtained from the following approximate figures:

Number of fairs held: North, 33; south, 51; total 84 (double the number in 1915); number of children taking part: north 2,000, south 8,000, total 10,000; number of entries: north 10,000, south 30,000, total 40,000; attendance: north 5,000, south 14,000, total 19,000; number of schools represented: north 200, south 350, total 550. Twenty-five fairs were under the auspices of rural education associations.

Wrote Startling Book.

Although Madame Turczynowicz, whose book of personal observations on the war in Poland is being much [illegible] an American and is only such by adoption. Miss Laura Blackstone was born near Toronto, in Georgetown, but while still quite young was taken to New York where she studied music for many years. After completing her studies in the United States, Miss Blackstone continued under English masters and became as well known in English as she was in American musical circles. Through illness she lost her voice, and it was while traveling through France and Germany in an endeavor to recuperate that she met the Polish nobleman who was to persuade her to leave the career she had chosen for herself and to share his.

Madame Tyrczynowicz's husband held under the Russian Government a position, similar to that of our Minister of Agriculture, over two Provinces. Before the two little boys, that are spoken of in the book, were born, he held the position of Professor in Cracow University, but as letters patent to the nobility had to be taken out for the boys they moved to Suwalki.

Despite the ill-fortune that dogged the steps of the little family, their troubles were not over when they reached the United States for the boys developed diphtheria and were for some time under quarantine. There has been some talk of Madame Tyrczynowicz lecturing on general conditions in Poland and the work of the Red Cross, but that is for the present out of the question. Not until the war is over can the family be reunited. There is no doubt a price upon the head of one who would write such a book as "When the Prussians Came to Poland," particularly so when the ruse of American citizenship, which was legally correct, brought her out.

Popcorn Balls.

Put into saucepan one cupful of granulated sugar, two tablespoonfuls of vinegar, one-half teacupful of water and butter the size of a walnut. Boil until the mixture drops from the spoon like wax. Have the popped corn ready in a large pan or bowl. Pour the candy into the corn, stirring all the time with a large spoon until corn and candy are thoroughly mixed. Dip the hands into cold water, and while the mixture is hot press tightly into round balls. The above recipe will make fourteen balls as large as baseballs. It will improve the flavor if the corn is popped in hot lard, to which a little salt has been added.

CHAPLAINS AT THE FRONT

Have Proved Themselves to Be Members of the Church Militant.

Writing on the work of the Canadian chaplains in France, Captain Charles G. D. Roberts sends an article to the Minister of Militia, in part as follows:

The work of the Canadian Chaplain Service has been so successful, so rich in results, and conducted along such broadly human lines, that it is impossible to do it anything approaching justice within the space of a newspaper article. . . . The cement of the whole structure has been a unity of purpose and a harmony in effort which are a constant influence for good among our men, and which may well serve as an example to the Churches at large. The representaives of each Church or creed are supreme within their own fold. The organiastion of the Canadian Chaplain Service, as a whole, guards the interests of each communion, and guards them impartially. I have seen an energetic young Jewish rabbi coming to a canon of the Church of England for assistance to enable him more effectively to minister to his scattered Hebrew flock. All rivalries are strictly eliminated, except the high rivalry of zeal, self-sacrifice, and courage.

It is not, by any means, to matters spiritual alone that the tireless energies of the C.C.S. are devoted. The service looks after the comfort, recreation, and entertainment of the troops, by means of a highly-organized system of soldiers' institutes, canteens, and cinema shows, which keep them out of mischief or boredom during the period when they come back from the trenches to the rest camps. This system is run on strictly business principles, but on a merely nominal margin of profit, and the accounts are officially audited by the Paymaster's Department. Narrow as is the margin, it yields a handsome profit, which is returned to the men again in whatever form may seem to be most needed. No small part of it goes to the provision of free coffee—hot coffee—at all hours of day or night, for the men who are entering or leaving the trenches.

But it is when a battle is on that the Church militant peculiarly justifies its title. Where the wounded and dead are falling, there you will find the "padres." They are by no [illegible] to their spiritual functions. They are helping and inspiring the stretcher-bearers, the ambulance men, the surgeons. Their activities are limited only by the needs of the situation. For instance, during the second battle of Ypres the padres in different quarters of the battlefield organised voluntary stretcher-bearer parties, guided them up into No Man's Land, and worked with them night after night in finding and bringing out the wounded. In this task one of the padres was taken prisoner. At the Somme, too, one of the padres organised a rescue party, led it up under deadly shell fire, and brought back ten wounded men who had been lying in a trench for four days. The trench was one cut off from our lines and occupied in part by the Germans. Another of our padres was wounded, while rescuing Australian wounded at Mouquet Farm. Suffice to say that three C.M.G.'s and five Military Crosses have been awarded among the padres, while many more such honors have been amply deserved. It is significant to note that of the thirty padres who left Canada with our first contingent in September, 1914, there are now only nine remaining in the field.

A Tragic Case.

Pte. Jack Smellie, a Canadian soldier, was found in New York City recently suffering from loss of speech and memory. He is a nephew of Mr. Robert S. Smellie, Toronto. [illegible] Smellie been a victim of amnesia as a result of shell shock received in the trenches. He is now on his way to Trinidad, where it is hoped that the complete change and rest will result in a complete recovery.

At the outbreak of war, George, Jack, and Robert, three sons of Mr. Parker Smellie, of Russell, Man., enlisted for active service. The three were wounded together at Ypres in June. Jack, with three companions, was imprisoned under a fallen trench by a bursting shell. Two of the men with him died immediately and the remaining man was thrown across Smellie's chest, pinning him down. They remained in this position for six hours, unable to move, and then his pal died.

The sole survivor of the little party, Smellie lay for 34 hours until he was discovered and released by a "listening patrol." His wounds in the thigh and shell shock caused a complete loss of speech and memory. His mind was gone and when he came to he found himself in a padded cell in a London hospital. He [illegible] weeks before recovering his memory. One arm was paralyzed and he was the first patient treated by hypnotism, which resulted in regaining the use of his arm. During convalescence he was visited by the King and Queen and Queen Alexandra, who were much interested in the treatment. After three months' treatment he was discharged from the army. He returned to Canada, and shortly after reaching New York suffered a relapse upon hearing the noise of a steel rivetting gun. After arriving home in Russell at Christmas he received an offer as overseer of a plantation in Trinidad by a gentleman who became interested in him on the voyage from England. On his way to the steamer in New York Smellie again lost his speech and memory at the explosion of a tire on the motor in which he was riding. He was taken to the Brooklyn Hospital, where he recovered and was able to continue his journey. The two brothers have now returned to France.

Making Alcohol.

One ton of coniferous wood waste will produce from fifteen to twenty-five gallons of 190-proof alcohol.

HELPS FOR THE COOK.

A One Time Royal Chef Gives These Hints About Ovens.

Tear up a sheet of kitchen paper into not too small pieces and try the oven by placing in it one of these every eight or ten minutes till you obtain the desired temperature.

If on being put into the oven the paper blazes up or burns at once the oven is manifestly too hot for anything.

If after a stay of two or three minutes the paper turns a dark, almost chocolate, brown the oven is a hot one, fit for patties and small pastry generally.

If after the same time the paper becomes a Havana or cigar brown the oven is "quick" and ready for tarts and such like.

If the paper in the same time only turns a yellowish brown (the color of a good deal plank) the oven is a "moderately quick" or "soaking" oven, ready for bread, large meat or game pies, poundcake, etc.

If, lastly, when left in for this time the paper is barely tinged with a yellowish shade, sponge cakes, meringues and such like may be safely put into it.

Cherub Devine

By SEWELL FORD

Copyright, 1909, by Mitchell Kennerley

...I may want it to him."

"...we must go away somewhere and get another home—a home of our own."

"I believe it's just because I am here that you're in such a hurry to go. If I should clear out now and not come back until—"

"No, no!" protested the countess. "I wouldn't feel like staying a minute after you had gone—not a minute. While you are here I am, in a way, protected, but if you were not here I would not have even that standing."

"Then I'll stay," declared the Cherub. "I'll stay here a week, a month, any time."

"No, no, you wouldn't!" quickly returned the countess. "I have seen stock speculators before. They are just as much slaves of the market as the wretched men who haunt the gambling halls of Monte Carlo are slaves of the roulette wheel. No; you will be back in Wall street tomorrow morning, eager for the game. It is all you live for—speculation, speculation!"

The Cherub was dumb before this outburst. It had been so unexpected.

"Of course I have no right to say such things to you," she continued more soberly. "I did not intend to say them either. You have been very kind to me, and I—I admire you in many ways. But you should not have tried to make me believe too much. I am not a silly schoolgirl, you know. I—I have had one experience with a man who was"—she hesitated at the confession—"who was a gambler."

She had turned to hide the sudden flush that crept into her cheeks. Suppressed emotion was gently shaking her shoulders.

As in a flash Cherub Devine knew exactly what he wanted to do now, and it was only by clasping his hands resolutely behind his back that he kept from taking her in his arms and otherwise making a spectacle of himself. He saw it all. Even if she did despise him he was in love with the Countess Vecchi.

The revelation came with stunning abruptness, like the glimpses of flooded roadway when the lightning had illuminated their way last night. Yes, he loved her.

If she should know! He was fairly appalled at his own audacity. Suppose she should be at this moment making the discovery which he had just made! Would she shrink away from him in terror or would she laugh scornfully at him? She was sticking a long silver hatpin through the top of her hat and listlessly watching the dingy sails of a coasting schooner that was crawling up the sound. He breathed more freely. She did not know, then.

"There, you'll forgive me, will you not?" she said, turning so quickly toward him that he started guiltily. "I didn't mean to lecture you—really I didn't. And now I must say goodby."

"You—must—say—goodby!" He repeated the words dully.

"Why, yes, I have decided to go to town tonight. I shall ask you to let Timmins drive me to the station this time. You will not go until morning, I suppose."

"But I can't let you go away in this fashion. I don't want you to go at all. There's no need for it."

"You said that before. We've settled all that, you know."

"We hadn't settled it, though," eagerly protested the Cherub. "You said you wouldn't think of staying after I went back because there wouldn't be any host. And then I said I'd stay. Well, I meant it. You can wait a day or two until we make some arrangement. You haven't any particular place to go to, have you?"

"There are lots of hotels in New York," suggested the countess.

"Hotels! Do you suppose we're going to let you run off to New York alone?"

"We?"

"Yes; your father and I. We have had a little talk about you."

"You and my father?"

"Yes."

"Why, you—you surprise me, Mr. Devine. I had no idea that my father ever consulted you."

The Cherub smiled complacently. "He has, though. You're thinking of what he said last night when we came back from the village. But he didn't know how things stood then. We had an understanding this morning, and we agreed that we would try to make you see how foolish it was to run away. Hasn't he said anything about it?"

"Nothing that has influenced my plans."

"But you can see how I feel about it, can't you?" Mr. Devine flushed at his unfortunate wording of this appeal. What he was trying to do most was to conceal his real feelings. But he plunged boldly ahead with his argument. "That's why I am going to stay here until you have promised to be reasonable," was his closing declaration.

"Indeed!" A man with such deep knowledge of womankind as the Cherub thought he possessed would have detected a note of challenge in her tone. Mr. Devine, however, thought that he was managing the affair very cleverly, when she continued. "I suppose I may have time to think it over, if I am to reconsider?"

"Of course, all the time you want," he assented readily.

The countess looked up quickly and replied:

"This is Monday, isn't it? Well, by Wednesday night I shall probably be able to tell you exactly what I mean to do—that is, providing I am still here."

"But you can wait two days, can't you?"

"Yes; I can if you can."

Then the Cherub understood. She meant to take him at his word and hold him to it. Although he thought of many things which might happen to P., Z. and N. if for two whole days his watchful eyes should be taken from it, he did not flinch.

"I'm game," he said.

* * * * * * * * *

The clanging of a big gong announces the daily openings of the New York Stock Exchange. During five years there had never been a morning when Cherub Devine was not to be found within earshot of that gong when it rang in Wall street's brief but tumultuous day. He was to be found waiting with calm confidence whatever crisis, big or little, might arise, and generally there was something of the sort.

Yet here he was at opening hour on this post-holiday Tuesday morning only vaguely conscious that he was miles away from it all. If he remembered it was only the troublesome thought of a moment. What did he care if a thousand gongs were ringing to open a thousand stock exchanges? They might stay open forever or close for good and all; he was helping the Countess Vecchi toss bits of sweet crackers to a pair of white swans.

Perhaps it was the clear, crisp September air, perhaps it was something else, which caused the Cherub to feel within him a new glow and thrill of mere existence. He himself did not entirely understand the origin of this feeling, but he had no inclination to analyze it. He was glad he was there. Especially he was glad that the countess was there too. Beyond that nothing was to be desired.

Thus it happened that the advent of a red headed boy on a bicycle seemed almost an impertinence. The boy dropped his wheel on the lawn, pulled a thin, black book from his pocket and held out a yellow envelope to Mr. Devine.

HE WAS HELPING THE COUNTESS VECCHI FEED THE SWANS.

"Message for you," announced the boy.

"Well, young man, you take that precious message back to the house, chuck it on the porch and get Eppings to sign. Here's a dollar."

He of the red hair grinned expansively and retired. For another delicious period they threw pieces of sweet crackers to the swans. Then the boy came back on his bicycle.

"Prepaid reply message!" was his second announcement.

"Want to earn another dollar?" asked Mr. Devine.

"Yep."

"Here it is, then. Chuck this message where you put the other one and tell whoever sent it that I'm very busy or sick abed or gone fishing—anything you think best—and sign it yourself."

"You don't seem greatly interested in your telegrams, Mr. Devine," observed the countess. "I thought that telegrams always meant something important."

"Not this kind. I'll read them Thursday morning. Isn't there some place we can go where that boy can't find us again?"

"There's the garden. And you have not seen the dahlias yet."

An hour later, when they returned to the house, they found the red haired boy perched on the horse block.

"Three more!" he announced, producing his book. "And they all want rush answers."

"Good!" said Mr. Devine. "Give me your book a minute."

On the receipt blank he wrote "Refused" opposite his name.

"Guess that'll do the trick," observed the boy.

He of the red hair was correct. No more messages were sent up from the village.

CHAPTER VIII.

WEDNESDAY morning arrived in some miraculously abrupt fashion. It found them sitting in a sunny corner of the library. The Cherub was smoking one of his fat, black cigars by special request of the countess, and he was regarding with approving eyes her slim white fingers as they employed an ivory needle in the fashioning of some utterly useless affair that looked like a lot of holes edged with spider webs.

She was wearing some kind of a house gown, with lace falling alluringly away from her white neck and rounded arms. Somehow or other the Cherub felt that he was enjoying a rare privilege. He was inclined to accept the gift humbly and in silence, fearful lest it be taken suddenly away from him.

And then came Eppings to announce the presence of Mr. Nicholas Walloway, adding that his errand was urgent and important.

"Perhaps I had better take my work into another room," suggested the countess, starting to rise.

"No, no! Don't disturb the cobwebs. Nick's business isn't half so important as he thinks it is. Bring him right in, Eppings."

"But I had rather not"—

Whatever her protest might have been, it was cut short by the prompt entrance of young Mr. Walloway. He stopped abruptly, and it seemed as if his gray eyes stared hungrily at the pretty picture she made, standing there in the morning sunshine. The color went from his cheeks, and his lips were tensely drawn.

"Well, Nick, you see I'm still rusticating. Great, isn't it?" smiled the Cherub.

With an obvious effort young Mr. Walloway shook off his embarrassment. Acknowledging the Countess Vecchi with a stiffly formal bow, he turned to the Cherub.

"You must forgive me, Devine, for hunting you up like this, but I thought I ought to do it. It's a matter of business. Couldn't we"— And he looked suggestively at the door.

"I haven't any office here, Nick, and this room is as good as any other. You mustn't mind, countess. Any business I do today will not take long."

"But"— began Mr. Walloway.

"Oh, let's have it, Nick. Bottom dropped out of something?" The Cherub was smiling amiably.

"I rather think you would have thought so if you had been on the floor just before closing yesterday. The Bates-Rimmer crowd is after P., Z. and N. I believe they mean to gobble it up."

"Ah, that gang, eh?" This time the Cherub showed his white teeth when he smiled.

"They began it as soon as they found you were not on deck, and they've been at it ever since. Your brokers had ten clerks out looking for you."

"Got nervous, did they?"

"Nervous! Why, man, didn't you see where P., Z. and N. closed yesterday?"

"Haven't read a paper since I've been here, Nick, and don't intend to. When you go back tell my brokers to keep cool."

"But the Bates-Rimmer crowd mean mischief, Cherub. There's a lot of them in a big pool, and they're hammering your railroad holdings right and left. Some one has been leaking information, and they're hitting you where it will hurt. When I saw how things were going I began wiring you. Didn't you get the messages?"

"I knew those must be from you, Nick; no one else knew where I was."

"But why didn't you answer?"

"Well, I didn't read them, for one thing; I was too busy. We were having a bully time, the countess and I, feeding the swans."

"Feeding the swans!" Mr. Nicholas Walloway made a gesture indicating despair.

"Did you ever watch swans squabble for sweet crackers, Nick?"

"Crackers! You might just as well have thrown bunches of thousand dollar bills at them. Why, Cherub, P., Z. and N. opened at 30% this morning. As soon as I found you hadn't shown up I started for you. I had my car meet me at the station, and it's outside now. We can just make the 11:30 back, and perhaps you'll be in time to stop them before it's all over. Come on; let's start."

"Sorry, Nick, but I couldn't think of it. I'm taking a holiday, you see."

"What! Do you mean to say that you're not coming?" Mr. Walloway gazed doubtingly at the Cherub.

"Not today, Nick."

"Oh, I say, Cherub, don't be an"— He checked himself with a swift glance at the countess, whose brown eyes instantly sought the cobwebby stuff in her lap. "Don't be foolish," he continued. "I haven't told you all—the worst, you know."

SUFFERED FROM PARALYSIS FIFTEEN YEARS AGO

Used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food on the Advice of a Friend and With the Greatest Benefit

Belleville Ont., March 15.—The supreme test of any medicine for the treatment of diseases of the nerves is whether it is effective in cases of partial paralysis.

Paralysis is the natural result of neglected nervous diseases. Nerve cells which are dead can never be replaced. For this reason complete cure of paralysis is impossible. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is effective, however, in restoring the nerve cells which are partially exhausted. For this reason it has met with such great success in the cure of nervous prostration and exhaustion, and affords the greatest relief for partial paralysis.

Mrs. C. Sinfield, 236 Moira W., Belleville, Ont., writes: "About fifteen years ago I was suffering from paralysis and, through the advice of a friend I was induced to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I took a treatment, and found my condition greatly improved. I found that they also benefited me greatly for sleeplessness and nervousness. Now any time I am run down or not feeling 'up to the mark' I use some Nerve Food, and have recommended it to many of my friends. Many people hearing of the benefit I have received from it, come to me to make inquiries, and I always cheerfully recommend Dr. Chase's Nerve Food."

Sleeplessness, irritability, nervousness and headaches are among the early symptoms which come to warn you of coming collapse of the nervous system. The way to avoid the serious developments is to keep the nervous system in health and vigor by the timely use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, a full treatment of 6 boxes for $2.50, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations only disappoint.

A FULL HALF-YEAR'S INTEREST WILL BE PAID ON 1st SEPTEMBER, 1917.

THE PROCEEDS OF THE LOAN WILL BE USED FOR WAR PURPOSES ONLY.

THE MINISTER OF FINANCE offers herewith, on behalf of the Government, the above-named Bonds for Subscription at 96, payable as follows:—

10 per cent on application;
30 " 16th April, 1917;
30 " 15th May, 1917;
26 " 15th June, 1917.

The total allotment of bonds of this issue will be limited to one hundred and fifty million dollars, exclusive of the amount (if any) paid for by the surrender of bonds as the equivalent of cash under the terms of the War Loan prospectus of 22nd November, 1915.

The instalments may be paid in full on the 16th day of April, 1917, or on any instalment due date thereafter, under discount at the rate of four per cent per annum. All payments are to be made to a chartered bank for the credit of the Minister of Finance. Failure to pay any instalment when due will render previous payments liable to forfeiture and the allotment to cancellation.

Subscriptions, accompanied by a deposit of ten per cent of the amount subscribed, must be forwarded through the medium of a chartered bank. Any branch in Canada of any chartered bank will receive subscriptions and issue provisional receipts.

This loan is authorized under Act of the Parliament of Canada, and both principal and interest will be a charge upon the Consolidated Revenue Fund.

Forms of application may be obtained from any branch in Canada of any chartered bank and at the office of any Assistant Receiver General in Canada.

Subscriptions must be for even hundreds of dollars.

In case of partial allotments the surplus deposit will be applied towards payment of the amount due on the April instalment.

Scrip certificates, non-negotiable or payable to bearer in accordance with the choice of the applicant for registered or bearer bonds, will be issued, after allotment, in exchange for the provisional receipts.

When the scrip certificates have been paid in full and payment endorsed thereon by the bank receiving the money, they may be exchanged for bonds, when prepared, with coupons attached, payable to bearer or registered as to principal, or for fully registered bonds, when prepared, without coupons, in accordance with the application.

Delivery of scrip certificates and of bonds will be made through the chartered banks.

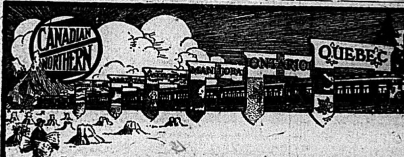
The issue will be exempt from taxes—including any income tax—imposed in pursuance of legislation enacted by the Parliament of Canada.

The bonds with coupons will be issued in denominations of $100, $500, $1,000. Fully registered bonds without coupons will be issued in denominations of $1,000, $5,000 or any authorized multiple of $5,000.

The bonds will be paid at maturity at par at the office of the Minister of Finance and Receiver General at Ottawa, or at the office of the Assistant Receiver General at Halifax, St. John, Charlottetown, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary or Victoria, or at the Agency of the Bank of Montreal, New York City.

The interest on the fully registered bonds will be paid by cheque, which will be remitted by post. Interest on bonds with coupons will be paid on surrender of coupons. Both cheques and coupons, at the option of the holder, will be payable free of exchange at any branch in Canada of any chartered bank, or at the Agency of the Bank of Montreal, New York City.

Subject to the payment of twenty-five cents for each new bond issued, holders of fully registered bonds without coupons will have the right to convert into bonds of the denomination of $1,000 with coupons, and holders of bonds with coupons will have the right to convert into fully registered bonds of authorized denominations without coupons at any time on application to the Minister of Finance.



The books of the loan will be kept at the Department of Finance, Ottawa.

Application will be made in due course for the listing of the issue on the Montreal and Toronto Stock Exchanges.

Recognized bond and stock brokers having offices and carrying on business in Canada will be allowed a commission of three-eighths of one per cent on allotments made in respect of applications bearing their stamp, provided, however, that no commission will be allowed in respect of the amount of any allotment paid for by the surrender of bonds issued under the War Loan prospectus of 22nd November, 1915, or in respect of the amount of any allotment paid for by surrender of five per cent debenture stock maturing 1st October, 1919. No commission will be allowed in respect of applications on forms which have not been printed by the King's Printer.

SUBSCRIPTION LISTS WILL CLOSE ON OR BEFORE THE 23rd OF MARCH, 1917.

EATON COMPANY BUYS LAND FOR A CREAMERY

TRENTON, March 14—It is stated that Sir John Eaton, Toronto, has purchased several lots here, and will erect a creamery on the property.

The difficulty in obtaining butter has prompted the T. Eaton Company to purchase the land on Dundas street in Trenton, and to erect the creamery. The machinery for the factory has been purchased. Efforts will be made to have the farmers for two hundred miles in all directions from Trenton send their milk to the factory. All freight will be prepaid. While only a small building it is stated that it will be most modern.

THE PURCHASE of one thousand dollars worth of goods from your own town or your own country, instead of purchasing outside, means the addition of one person to your town or your country instead of supporting him abroad.

A Game of Twenty Questions

By F. A. MITCHEL

Traveling in a parlor car, I swung my chair around from the window through which I was looking, and my gaze fell upon a young woman whose face was partly turned toward me.

She looked up and bowed to me.

I returned the salute, so far as I was able, without betraying the fact that I had no more knowledge of her than of my grandmother, who had died before I was born. Rising from my seat, I walked toward her and said cordially:

"This is an agreeable surprise."

There was an amused look on her face as she made some commonplace remark. I judged that she did not believe I recognized her, but there was just enough uncertainty in her expression to tempt me to continue my pretense. A gentleman sitting in the next chair to her kindly offered to exchange seats with me, an offer I accepted, and sitting down beside my new found friend, I began to pour forth such words as would not give me away while I was racking my brain to place her.

It soon became apparent to me that she was aware of what I was trying to do, but she did not bring the matter to a head. Evidently she enjoyed my perplexity and was willing that I should have plenty of opportunity to remember her. In the course of our chat she said:

"When I saw you last you were single. Have you married since?"

"I am a bachelor. And you?"

"I am engaged."

A look of regret must have crossed my face, for she greeted the look with an amused smile. Glancing at the third finger of her left hand, where engagement rings are worn, I saw that it was bare. I looked up at her inquiringly.

"You would like to know why I do not wear a token of betrothal?" she said.

"I would."

"I will tell you before we part."

"Why not now?"

"Because it does not suit my pleasure to do so," she replied, with the same tantalizing smile.

It was so evident to me that she knew that I had no remembrance of her that I concluded to confess with a view to satisfying my curiosity.

"Come," I said, "you know very well that I am unable to recall who you are. Let us have an end of this fencing. Tell me when and where I have met you before."

She leaned back and chuckled.

"Have you ever played the game of twenty questions?" she asked.

"Many a time."

"Very well, I'll reply to twenty inquiries you may make as to where we were when we last saw each other."

I expended half a dozen questions in fixing the place of this last meeting in a summer house on the grounds of my father's country place. Then we began a new game as to the time of this meeting, and I learned that in eight questions. It was ten years agone. In another game for learning the lady's name I asked all the questions permitted without success.

I was no nearer what I wanted to know than before and was getting impatient, my condition being evidently simply delightful to my tormentor. I asked her what we were doing in the summer house, and she replied that she would give me twenty questions to find out. I got at this very easily.

"What was I doing?" was the first question.

"Holding my hand."

"What was I saying?"

"Telling me that you loved me and would always love me; that you would never forget me."

At this her mirth was excessive.

Memory now came in to do the rest. It carried me back to that summer house when I was a youth of seventeen. My companion there was then fifteen.

"I have at least been more true than you," I said. "I am still fancy free. You are engaged."

"Of course I am engaged. And now I will tell you why I don't wear an engagement ring."

I smiled a sickly smile. In the first place, I had then not possessed funds for a ring; in the second, I had forgotten my love before I could get the funds. A shadow must have crossed my face, for her mirth changed to sympathy.

"Don't worry about it," she said. "If all the things we do that we shouldn't do and all the things we don't do that we should do in youth came up to mock us when we are older we would be very much ashamed."

"Some of those things may be undone," I replied, "or at least may be repaired."

She understood me, for she cast down her eyes.

"I'm very much mortified about that engagement ring," I continued. "I had used up my allowance and was in debt for the next quarter. Better late than never. Wear this till I can get something appropriate."

I took a snake ring from my finger and made a motion to put it on hers. She drew away her hand, but I saw by her expression that the act was not prompted by her heart.

"When we last met, you say, I held your hand. Let us resume where we left off."

I did not take her hand—the place was too public—but, making sure no one was looking, I slipped the ring on her finger.

It was in time replaced by a solitaire.

He Laughs Best Who Laughs Last

By SADIE OLCOTT

Dan Eversham entered a railway station, bought his ticket and, satchel in hand, climbed the steps of a parlor car. His seat was next to a very pretty girl.

Outside on the platform was a party of youngsters who had been seeing off a newly married couple. Passing by Dan Eversham's window, where he sat near the pretty girl, one of the party threw a handful of rice against his windowpane. Then all of them waved goodbys and laughingly passed on.

This bit of fun did not trouble Dan much; but, seeing the pretty girl beside him blush a deep red, he felt sorry for her.

"I suppose," he said to her, "that those persons think that they perpetrated a very good joke."

"It was horrid of them."

This was the beginning of a conversation that lasted till long after the train started. Meanwhile those in the car who had seen the rice throwing did not doubt that they had a bride and groom aboard. Dan was got up with sufficient resplendence for a groom, and the neat travelling dress of the girl was appropriate for a bride. Then, too, Dan was altogether too polite and attentive to have been long married, and since they were traveling together they were not supposed to be bachelor and spinster.

In the seat opposite the girl sat a woman from New England. There is nothing more interesting to a woman than a bride, and this person was a motherly creature who felt her heart go out to the young thing who had but just embarked in the sea of matrimony, a sea that the Yankee had found a troubled one. She entered into conversation with the supposed bride.

"Nice day," was her entering wedge.

"Quite so," was the laconic reply.

"Going far?"

"I shall travel all day."

"You must be tired?"

"Why do you think so?"

"Oh, there's a lot to be done in preparation for a weddin'."

The girl saw at once that the party who had thrown the rice had given a wrong impression. But instead of correcting it, which would be embarrassing, she looked down at an open novel in her lap and said nothing. The woman was not to be put off.

"You're the image of a girl I knew in Salem. I wonder if you're any relation to her. Your name ain't Twitchell, is it?"

"No, it isn't Twitchell."

"Or Saulsbury?"

"No," and to shut off further inquiry the girl told her her name was Effie Trobridge.

"I guess it's got somep'n else to it now."

"Something else! What else can it need?"

"Wall, I guess it don't need nothin' else, but our laws, made for men, force us women to give up our own names and take on a man's—that is, when we tie ourselves up to one of 'em. If I was you I wouldn't do it. You've got a nice name, and I wouldn't take on any more. What's your married name?"

"I'm not married."

The woman looked at her surprised, then said in a low voice:

"I know that brides the first day of married life don't like to own up to it. They think nobody spots 'em fur bein' jist married. But, laws, any one would know that you two was jist married."

Dan, who heard this dialogue, was trying to keep from laughing and was now obliged to swing his chair to face the window, presenting his back to the inquirer. The supposed bride, seeing a number of persons who sat near her enjoying her discomfort, blushed to the roots of her hair and said sternly to her tormentor:

"Madam, you have made a mistake. The gentleman is a stranger to me. I never saw him before he took his chair in this car."

"Oh, land!" exclaimed the Yankee, throwing up her hands. "I've known lots o' lyin' done by brides to hide that they are brides, but I never heard anything like that."

The girl turned to Dan as much as to say, "Help me out of this."

"I regret," he said gallantly, "to confirm the young lady's statement."

A dozen persons sitting near laughed outright.

Dan lost his equanimity, making matters worse. "I'll bet any one here," he said, "that I'm a single man and that I never saw this young lady before today."

He drew forth a fat pocketbook and began to count out ten dollar bills. Not a person interested but thought he was a bridegroom determined to stave off being recognized as such. They laughed all the louder. It was very amusing. Dan looked at the girl, and the girl looked at Dan. He tipped the wink and said to the others:

"I suppose we'll have to own up. Now for a wedding present."

Taking off his hat, he passed through the car receiving contributions. By this time so many persons had become interested in what was going on that a goodly sum was collected, which Dan poured into the girl's lap.

"If you don't want it," he said, "give it to charity."

"I'll give it to charity," was the sharp reply.

A few minutes later Dan's station was called, and, saying goodby to his bride, he got out of the car, leaving her to pursue her journey alone.

Then the contributors laughed again, but a different laugh from before.

ABOARD THE COUNTESS

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1916, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

The other day I saw a notice in a Liverpool paper to the effect that the courts had decided to rehear the case of the brig Countess. To the general reader these lines meant nothing. I do not suppose there are fifty people in all England today who can recall the case of the Countess, although the particulars were published far and wide and finally appeared in book form.

The Countess was a Bristol brig, owned in part and commanded by Captain Thomas, who was not only a thorough seaman, but a man of excellent heart. We were bound out to Georgetown, in British Guiana, with orders to call at Jamaica. This was my third voyage with Captain Thomas, the other two extending only to ports in Spain and return. I was an apprentice, or ship's boy, having nothing to do with the cabin, but living with the crew in the fo'castle and learning to be a sailor.

After we left port and got things shipshape I had opportunity to look over the crew and see what they were made of, and I was not long in making up my mind, boy as I was, that we had shipped a hard lot. There is always a leader in the fo'castle, and in those days it was the best fighter. Seamanship and education had to bow to brute strength. It wasn't three days before a big, burly fellow, who went by the name of Bristol Bob, but whose real name was Havens, had established himself as "boss." If he had had the good of the brig in view this would have been for her benefit, but it soon transpired that he had plans of his own.

Before reaching Jamaica the crew had been on the point of mutiny half a dozen times.

One afternoon—it was on the fourth day, I believe—I was aroused from my sleep by a conversation between Bob and a man named Jackson. They knew I was in the bunk, but believed me to be sleeping soundly.

"This is the plan as I have thought it out," Bob was saying. "After we have got the brig we will cruise to the eastward for a spell. The island I am after is not down on the chart. It is northeast of Trinidad and maybe 200 miles away from here."

"Don't Misner know?" asked the other.

"Never heard of it, but this is his first trip this way."

The men presently went about their business, but I made the pretense of sleeping soundly until called to relieve the other watch. I was all in a tremble over what I had heard and had no idea of what course I should take. While it seemed proper for me to go to the captain or mate with my information, the reader must not overlook the difficulties in the way. I planned a dozen different ways to reach headquarters, and that I didn't put the captain on his guard was his own fault.

One night during our watch he called to me to bring something from his room. Bob and his friends were forward at the heel of the bowsprit, and as I came out of the cabin the mate was at the water cask. As I reached him I whispered:

"I should very much like to speak to you or the captain, sir."

"If you don't get forward I'll speak to you in a way you'll remember for a year to come!" he growled.

No doubt he imagined I had some complaint to make, but if he had permitted me to speak it might have prevented the tragedy which followed.

A few nights later Bristol Bob called the mate forward, and shortly afterward he came to me and said:

"Boy, run down and tell the captain that the first mate is ill."

I found the captain sound asleep, but as soon as I had told him what I had overheard in the fo'castle and what I suspected had just happened on deck it was wonderful how coolly he took the exciting news. As he reached for his pistols he ordered me to bolt the doors of the companionway. The men stood at the entrance, and as they caught sight of me they stepped back, supposing the captain was following. I slammed and bolted the swinging doors.

The fellows cursed and yelled, and, though we could hear them moving around the decks from that time until daylight, they made no attack. Finally we heard some one working with an ax on the cabin door, and the captain made ready to fire a bullet through it. By some carelessness the weapon was prematurely discharged, and he received the bullet in his throat, dying a few moments later. I was so overcome and frightened now that the captain was gone that I hid in his stateroom, and the mutineers no longer had any one to resist them.

The first thing I knew it was night, and it was so very quiet that I knew there could be no wind outside. I crept out into the cabin, but everything remained as I had left it. For two hours I listened for sounds from the deck, but heard nothing and finally fell asleep. I was aroused by men dropping into the cabin through the skylight. They belonged to the Scotch whaler Bruce, which was lying near by and had had us in view since daylight.

The mutineers had taken the longboat and abandoned the brig, which was driving at her own sweet will. And to this day no one of the men has ever been heard of. No doubt they met with some accident and all perished at sea.

When a woman hasn't anything else to worry about she worries because she feels sure that her husband would marry again if she should happen to die.

Early Days Recalled.

Senator W. C. Edwards has erected a real old-fashioned lumberjack's shanty right beside the Ottawa River near his big mills. This is the second one of its kind he has built, the first one having stood in Rockliffe Park for fourteen years. This new one is an exact replica of those that dotted the Ottawa Valley years ago, logs morticed and plugged with mud, the huge fire or "campbose" in the centre, with the opening in the roof for the surplus heat and smoke to pass out, the bunks, the wooden crane tipped with iron over the fire, the wooden latch on the door, all complete—a reminder of the early days.

COBOURG HEAVY BATTERY NOTES

The Seventh and Eighth Overseas Drafts of the Cobourg Heavy Battery have this week added nine more men to their strength, bringing their present total up to fifty-nine, which evidences the popularity of this unit of Heavy and Seige Artillery, the sixth draft having left for overseas the latter part of February. C. F. Hubble of Stirling, was among this week's recruits.

The following Belleville members of the Battery have been promoted to the ranks shown before their names: Sergeant G. C. Jordan, Corporal G. A. Irvine, Bombardier C. W. Earle.

254TH NOTES

Capt. Hetherington, who served at the front as a private in the 2nd Battalion, and wounded at the Battle of the Somme, was a visitor at the 254th Battalion Headquarters yesterday. Capt. Hetherington is now attached to the 247th Peterboro Battalion.

Col. Brown, G.S.O., of Kingston, called at the 254th Headquarters this morning.

Col. Allen, O. C., and Capt. Hyman of the 254th Battalion proceeded to Kingston on Battalion business this morning.

Today was paid day with the men of the 254th Battalion.

A patriotic meeting is to be held in Eldorado tomorrow evening. The 254th Band, Major Ferguson and Lieut. Cook, M.P.P., will be present at the meeting.

To Make Hairs Vanish From Face, Neck or Arms

Keep a little powdered delatone handy and when hairy growths appear make a paste with some of the powder and a little water, then spread over hairy surface. After 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin and it will be entirely free from hair or blemish. This simple treatment is unfailing but care should be exercised to be sure and get genuine delatone, otherwise you may be disappointed.

Music and Drama

"THE LITTLE CAFE"

The extravaganza or play entitled, "The Little Cafe" was last evening presented at Griffin's Opera House to a large audience. The plot is laid in gay Paris. The prologue scene and costumes are a facsimile of the cafe in Montmartre wherein Christian Bernard received his idea of the theme of his plot, and in which he wrote the first line of it. He personally photographed some and brought it to his country for reproduction upon the stage. The various members of the company presenting the play are fair artists, carrying out their part in a manner fairly productive of success. There are a number of songs running through the play, which are of a catchy nature, but those rendering same did not appeal to the audience as capable in this line. The final song, "Just Because It's You" was without doubt the best executed and was liberally applauded. The scenic effects are all that could have been desired, especially that of the Grand Restaurant Gala, of Paris. The costumes worn are also in keeping with the settings, some of them being superb. Upon the whole the performance was a fairly enjoyable one.

LITTLE MISS HAPPINESS AND CRIMSON STAIN AT GRIFFIN'S TONIGHT

June Caprice and Harry Hilliard appear at Griffin's tonight in one of the sweetest stories ever pictured entitled, "Miss Happiness," on the same programme with this five part Fox Photodrama—the final chapter of "The Crimson Stain Mystery" will be presented along with "Wife Tailer" an amusing Vitagraph comedy starring Hughie Mack.

Blaze At The Belleville Armouries

Owing to the discovery of a fire in its incipient stages by Police Sgt. Harman, and excellent work done by the Belleville Fire Department, the fine armories in this city were at an early hour this morning saved from destruction. At 3.10 Sergt. Harman saw smoke and even a flame issuing from a compact room of the building on the ground floor which is occupied by Quarter Master Sergt. Patterson and staff of the 254th Battalion. An alarm was sounded and the fire brigade were soon upon the scene to do battle against the fiery element. Fortunately the blaze was confined to the room in which it originated. A portion of the flooring joist was burned. It is thought that the fire was caused by a lighted cigar or cigarette being accidently thrown into a wooden box which contained sawdust. The damage sustained to the building is by no means of a serious nature. A number of papers in connection with the office were damaged to such an extent as to virtually render them useless. Beneath the room in the basement is situated the bowling alley, the only damage resulting to it being from water on the alleys.

The building certainly had a narrow escape from being destroyed by fire. The Government carries no insurance upon the public buildings.

E. Tennyson Smith Speaks in Y. M. C. A. Hall

Large Audience Listens Attentively to Thrilling Sketches of Real Life

Mr. E. Tennyson Smith's temperance campaign was continued last night in the Y.M.C.A. Hall, when Mr. Henry presided and introduced the lecturer in a few well chosen words. Mr. Smith's subject was: "Up with the Drunkard and out with the Traffic," and it was dealt with in his usual masterly manner. His principal point was that, one of the grounds on which the claim for prohibition is based is the protection of the drunkard from the temptation of the open saloon, and he gave telling illustrations of the awful power of the drink craving. He quoted the works of Gladstone, who said that "the business of all law was to take away the temptation to do right and difficult for them to do wrong," and said the license laws was the very opposite of this. He also said it was the duty of those who pray "Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil" to endeavour to remove from their own path and the pathway of others all removeable temptation, and added that the Christian who prayed for prayer and voted against prohibition was a Christian humbug!

A most interesting feature of last night's lecture was Mr. Smith's sympathetic presentation of the story of Jerry McAuley. B. Gough (the greatest temperance orator) from drunkenness, which he gave in the lecturer words in which it used to be related by Gough himself. It was almost impossible to believe that the lecturer was giving the experience as he entered so fully into the feelings of the man whose story he was telling, that one seemed to feel that it was Gough himself. The audience was indeed thrilled with the description of Gough's awful fight with the appetite for drink and his sufferings in delirium tremens and then they were moved to tears of pity as they listened to the latter pleadings of the Joel Stratton—the man who was the means of rescuing Gough and of the poor drunkard's heart broken utterances as he promises to try to reform, while feelings of joy and thankfulness animated them when the sequel of the story was recited, and Stratton thanked God for "victory over the damning power of strong drink." A number of persons were forward at the close and signed the pledge. Mrs. Tennyson Smith sang sweetly "Bring them in," the audience joined very heartily in the chorus.

Tonight Mr. Smith is to speak in the Salvation Army Citadel and tomorrow night in the Tabernacle Methodist Church. The admission is free.

Premier Borden Visits Nivelle

Tells of His Trip to the Front—Highly Pleased With Conditions of Canadians

LONDON, March 14.—Sir Robert Borden speaking to the Canadian press of his experiences at the front, said he found the spirit and discipline and training of the Canadian forces all that could be desired. He was very pleased to learn that in the fighting which resulted in such splendid gains during recent months, the Canadians took a full share and bore themselves worthily.

The Canadian ministers, visiting portions of ground won in the last few weeks, were greatly impressed at the achievement of the soldier's forces in capturing positions which the enemy evidently regarded as impregnable Probably the British, in capturing such positions accomplished what was impossible a year ago. The ministers visited the British Headquarters and were cordially received by Generals Haig, who afforded them every facility of realising what had been accomplished in the recent operations. They also had the privilege of visiting the quarters of General Nivelle, commander of the French armies, who spoke in the highest terms of the Canadian forces. The ministers from Canada were proud to learn that the Canadian Army Corps was regarded as one of the finest corps in the battle line.

Not less appreciative were the tributes to the work of the Railway Construction Corps and the Forestry Corps. Invaluable service was being rendered by both these organizations their extraordinary efficiency being acknowledged on all hands. They also visited several hospitals in France and found the wounded receiving every care and comfort. Not a single complaint was heard from the patients in any of these hospitals.

The Canadian Press understands that Premier Borden is leaving London for a few days rest.

CHRISTENED IN DEPOT

Rev. Dr. Myers Performs Unique Ceremony

TORONTO, March 14.—Amid the clamor and confusion of the Union Station, and in the presence of his parents, Miss Campbell, W.C.T.U. representative, and Rev. Mr. Somerville, Lyle Crawford Dingwall, infant son of Mr. and Mrs Norman Dingwall of Juniata, Sask., was christened last night by the Rev. Dr. A. J. W. Meyers, 10 Glen Road.

While waiting at the depot for the Winnipeg express that was to take them to their Western home, Mr. and Mrs. Dingwall confided to the representative of the W.C.T.U. that Dr. Meyers had christened their other two children, and that they would like very much to have the third baptised by the same minister. Miss Creighton communicated with Dr. Meyers, and arrangements were speedily made to have the ceremony carried out in the Depot Master's office. Rev. Mr. Somerville happened to put in an appearance just in time to be present at the unique performance of which a crated calf just outside the door reddened lusty barn-yard music.

Dr. Meyers christened the Dingwall children about two years ago while visiting with the family on a trip through the west.

A REJECTED PATRIOT

When first arose the talk of war, He offered to enlist. I said, "I'll gladly knock the tar from fifty foes, I wist." But Uncle Sam refused to take my offer; he cried "scat." A dandy soldier you would make, with all that load of fat." I'm doomed then to ignoble peace, while others laurels win, because I'm blessed with ample grease and have a double chin. I must not flash my trusty blade, or don my suit of mail, because, they say, if I have weighed, I break the village scales." The beardless stripling may enlist, but there's no chance for me, and I could take him by the wrists and throw him over a tree. My breast is filled with martial fire, I court the camp and fame, and I would gladly trade my tyre for sword and blunderbuss. But, no! I bear my country cry—"You can't enlist, that's flat! You're not allowed to bleed and die, because you are too fat!" The slender man must stand in line our gangsled flag to guard. A melancholy fate is mine, because I've too much lard."

Washing Won't Rid Head Of Dandruff

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this tonight, and by morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky, wavy, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the work.

CALLED BY DEATH.
